

EDITORS CORNER

In this issue we honor Dr. Botha deMeillon for a distinguished career which has spanned a sixty-year period. In his more than 150 publications he has made major contributions to our knowledge of the culicidae, ceratopogonidae and other parasites. His research in medical entomology has significantly expanded our knowledge of many important vectors and their control. To a true professional we extend sincere congratulations for a remarkable career.

Beginning with Vol. 22, 1990 Mosquito Systematics will take on a new look. The journal will be published in a double column format similar to that used in the AMCA Journal. Authors will be required to submit their manuscripts in printed form accompanied by a computer diskette which contains the manuscript in an unformatted flat ASCII file, if possible. Foreign authors who may not have computer facilities available may still submit manuscripts in triplicate as previously required. More details on the new procedure will appear in the next issue.
