Introduction

The Kansas Live Stock Registry Board is issuing this, its First Annual Report, in the form of a bulletin, which will be sent free to horsemen, farmers and any others who may be interested in the work of improving the Kansas horse. Besides the list of stallions licensed to stand for public service in the State, there will also be found in this report discussions of the stallion law, pedigrees (both good and bad), unsoundnesses, etc. By this means we hope to present information that will be of some practical value to the Kansas stockman and farmer.

While horse breeding in Kansas has for a number of years been making some progress, it is a noticeable fact that it has not kept pace with the progress made in other lines of our agricultural pursuits. Close observation and study showed that the greatest obstacle to a more rapid progress in the horse breeding industry was the common use of the grade sire, the unsound sire, and the pure-bred of an inferior kind. This use of inferior sires resulted from various causes, the more important of which are: First, carelessness, lack of interest and lack of appreciation of the value of purity of breeding of the sires on the part of the mare owners; second, a tendency on the part of a great many stallion owners to get a horse for as small an investment as possible regardless of his breeding or individuality, knowing that they could expect a liberal patronage from the mare owners.

Realizing that something should be done to awaken an interest in the improvement of the Kansas horse, to give to the public more authentic information concerning the problems and principles of animal breeding, to encourage the use and appreciation of the pure-bred sire, and to guarantee the breeding of every stallion standing for public service in the State, the sixteenth biennial session of the Kansas legislature passed what is known as the Stallion Registration Law, which reads as follows:

STALLION LAW

CHAPTER 168, LAWS OF 1909

SECTION 1. Every person, persons, firm, corporation, company or association standing or traveling any stallion in this State shall cause the name, description and pedigree of such stallion to be enrolled by the State Live Stock Registry Board, said board to consist of the dean of agriculture, the head of the Veterinary Department and the head of the Animal Husbandry Department of the Kansas State Agricultural College, and to procure a certificate of such enrolment from said board.

SEC. 2. In order to obtain a license certificate as herein provided, the owner of such stallion, whether pure-bred or cross-bred, shall file a certificate of the condition of soundness within one year from the date of publication of this act in the statute-book, signed by the state veterinarian or a veterinarian duly authorized by him. Said certificate of soundness, together with a certified copy of the certificate of registry of the pedigree of said stallion and other necessary papers relating to his breeding and ownership, shall be forwarded to the State Live Stock Registry Board.

SEC. 3. The officers of the Live Stock Registry Board, whose duty it shall be to examine and pass upon the merits of each pedigree submitted, shall use as their standard the stud books and signatures of the duly authorized presidents and secretaries, respectively, of the various horse pedigree registry associations, societies or companies, recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and shall accept as pure-bred, and entitled to a license certificate as such, each stallion for which a correct pedigree registry certificate is furnished bearing the signature of the president and secretary of a government recognized and approved stud book.

SEC. 4. Every bill, poster or advertisement issued by the owner of any stallion enrolled under this act, or used by him for advertising such stallion, shall contain a correct copy of its certificate of enrolment.

SEC. 5. The license certificate for a stallion whose sire and dam are of pure breeding shall contain the following information: Certificate number, registration number, breed, color, owner and address, age, pedigree, statement of soundness by veterinarian, date of issues, seal and signature of dean of agriculture. The certificate for a grade or cross-bred stallion shall contain the following information: Certificate number, statement of breeding, color, owner and address, age, statement of soundness, date of issue, seal and signature of dean of agriculture.

SEC. 6. The owner of any stallion standing for public service in this State shall post and keep affixed, during the entire breeding season, copies of the license certificate of each stallion, issued under the provisions of this act, in a conspicuous place upon the main door leading into every stable or building where the said stallion stands for public service.

SEC. 7. A fee of $2 shall be paid to the State Live Stock Registry Board for the examination and enrolment of each pedigree and for the issuance of a license certificate in accordance with the breeding of the stallion, as above provided. The veterinary inspection as provided for in this act shall not exceed $2 for each stallion inspected.

SEC. 8. Upon the transfer of the ownership of any stallion enrolled under the provisions of this act, the certificate of enrolment may be transferred by the State Live Stock Registry Board upon submittal of satisfactory proof of such transfer and upon the payment of a fee of 50 cents.

SEC. 9. Any person, persons, firm, company, corporation or association who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction be punished by a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $50 for each offense.

SEC. 10. Any stallion standing for public service that is not a pure-bred and registered horse must have conspicuously posted on the door of the stall in which he is kept, and in letters in black type not less than one inch in height, a statement that such stallion is a grade or a cross-bred, as the case may be.

SEC. 11. The funds accruing from the above-named fees shall be used by the State Live Stock Registration Board to defray the expenses of enrolment of pedigree and issuance of licenses, to publish reports or bulletins containing lists of stallions examined, to encourage the horse-breeding interests of this State, to disseminate information pertaining to horse-breeding, and for any other such purposes as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and enforce the provisions of this act. It shall be the duty of this board to make annual report, including financial statement, to the governor of the State, and all financial records of said board shall be open to inspection.

SEC. 12. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its publication in the official State paper.

Approved March 11, 1909.

Explanations of Sections Especially Concerning Stallion Owners

The stallion law should be carefully studied by horse owners, and especially by stallion owners, so that they may know just what the law means and requires and thus save themselves unnecessary trouble and inconvenience in the use of and in advertising their stallions. The law is quite plain and explicit, but for the benefit of those who may not understand it fully a general explanation of the clauses especially concerning the stallion owner is here given.

Sections 2, 3 and 7 refer to the method of obtaining a license certificate from the Registry Board, which is necessary before a stallion can legally stand for public service in the State of Kansas.

First, the stallion must be examined for soundness by a veterinarian authorized by the State veterinarian to make such examination. The stallion owner should arrange for such examination, and the law requires that the owner pay the examining veterinarian a fee of $2 for each examination.

This certificate of examination, which describes in detail the condition of the animal as regards soundness, must be sent to the office of the secretary of the Live Stock Registry Board, where it is kept on file.

Second, the owner of a stallion is required to send all papers of registration of said stallion or a sworn copy of these papers to the Live Stock Registry Board for inspection, this being necessary because of the fact that there are many associations that record almost any kind of a horse, regardless of his breeding, sending out pedigrees which are large, imposing affairs covered with seals, pictures of horses, castles, etc., but showing no purity of breeding of the animal in question. In reality they are absolutely worthless. Many innocent and unsuspecting persons have been humbugged by purchasing horses carrying pedigrees of this kind. These will be discussed more in detail under another head.

The owner of a stallion is also required to send to the Live Stock Registry Board a fee of $2 for the issuance of a license certificate which permits the owner to stand his horse legally for public service. Special attention is directed to Sections 4, 6, and 10, which refer to the method of advertising a stallion for public service, and every owner should thoroughly familiarize himself with the provisions of these sections and carry them out to the letter in all his advertising. Attention is further directed to Section 9, which provides a penalty for violation of the stallion law.

Horse Breeding in Kansas

There is no place in the world where the natural environments are better adapted to the breeding of horses than right here in Kansas—an invigorating and healthful climate without the vicissitudes and hardships of the long, frozen winters of the north or the excessively hot, disease devastating summers of the extreme south; rich valleys that produce the succulent, nutritious grasses and beautiful harvests of corn, oats, barley and alfalfa from which are grown bone and muscle of the finest quality; grass-covered hills where the horse may climb and frolic as he grazes, thus developing better feet and greater lung capacity; springs, creeks and rivers always furnishing a plentiful supply of clean, fresh, pure water, and the clusters and groves of trees which cover the hillsides and border the streams furnish shade during the summer and protection during winter. But with all of these natural advantages the Kansas stockman has not made the best of his opportunities. The annual report of the United States Department of Agriculture shows that on January 1, 1910, the average valuation of the Kansas horse was $107. With the present high prices of land, feed, and labor, no one can profitably raise horses to maturity for $107 per head. Good horses, whether draft horses or light horses, were never more in demand nor scarcer than at the present time, but they must be of the best quality to demand the high prices. The Kansas horse breeder must raise better horses. If he is raising draft horses he must raise bigger horses with more quality and better action. If he is raising light horses he must raise a class of horses that are truer to their respective types, and they must have more style, quality, and action.

If the Kansas horsemen hope to improve the horses of Kansas, the first and most important thing they must do is to use more care and judgment in selecting the sires of the future horse crop. They must learn to appreciate the value of purity of breeding and realize that general improvement in the Kansas horse must come through the use of pure-bred sires and the best mares available.

A question so often asked is: "Why not use the grade sire if he is a good individual?" These same questioners to prove that they are right in using this kind of a sire will quote the oft repeated and more often misinterpreted law that "Like begets like," either forgetting or not knowing the limitations of this law, or the conditions under which it finds its widest application. It is because of this law that like begets like that the grade stallion should never be used as a sire, for (a) like begets like in proportion to the purity of the breeding of the two parents; (b) like begets like in proportion to the duration of the period during which this particular breed has been bred pure; (c) like begets like in proportion to the closeness of the blood relationship of the two parents; (d) like begets like in proportion to the similarity of the physical characteristics of the two parents.

The last two conditions mentioned find their widest application after the first two conditions obtained. It is the intensified inheritance of the pure-bred which triumphs over the diversified inheritance of the grade or scrub, and thus enables us to grade up our stock. Similarly, it is the diversified inheritance of the grade which precludes his success as a sire, even though he apparently possesses the characteristics of a pure-bred.

Progress in Horse Breeding

No great progress can be made in breeding animals of any species so long as the breeding stock consists of unsound individuals or of unknown breeding. The country is overrun with grade and scrub stock of all kinds, and in the breeding of horses there has been much fraud concerning age, quality, and breeding of sires allowed to stand for public service. A definite plan for breeding operations has been lacking. Some farmers have attempted to improve their stock by grading up with pure-bred sires, but oftentimes unsuitable types have been used and all sorts of crosses have been made. The result has been unsatisfactory.

The advantages of pure-bred stock from a business point of view are discussed by Dr. A. S. Alexander, of the Wisconsin station, as follows:

As a business proposition, it pays best to breed mares to pure-bred stallions, although the service fees of such horses are higher than those of the grade and scrub. The fees of the latter are $5 to $10 less at the time of service, but when the colt reaches market age the saving is lost. There is at that time a difference of at least $100 in value in favor of the colt from the pure-bred sire, so that the higher service fee has proved a profitable investment. Then, too, there is a ready, appreciative outside market for the good grade colt, while the scrub goes to the local buyer at low figures, and there is little, if any, demand for such horses.

While some farmers are beginning to appreciate the importance of using sound, pure-bred stallions, the equal importance of using sound mares is not yet generally understood. When a mare by reason of unsoundness no longer is fit for anything else, she often is set aside for breeding purposes, and so long as this absurd and ruinous policy persists the penalty will be paid in the prevalence of unsound horses on our farms. For corroboration of what has been asserted here, one has only to examine the brood mares on a number of farms in different districts of the State. The unsound mares will be found numerous, and many of their adult offspring are similarly affected.

The success achieved in the breeding of Clydesdale horses in Canada serves as a good example of what can be accomplished by persistency and expert selection. The Scottish element of the Dominion's population has been partial to the Clydesdale breed and conversant with its good qualities and utility, hence imported Clydesdale stallions of the best character have been largely employed in the breeding operations of that country since the year 1842. Practically speaking, no alien crosses have been made, and the average farmer has been capable of selecting suitable mares and of adequately developing their progeny. The result is that Canada has but one type of draft horses, and it is a good one, showing, to a high degree of excellence, all of the breed characteristics of the pure-bred Clydesdale. The same thing is true, even to a greater degree, in Scotland, where the Clydesdale breed predominates and has been developed to a high state of purity, breed character, and utility. On the contrary, if we examine the average team horses of Milwaukee or Chicago, we shall see every possible type and character represented in plain evidences of mixed breeding, careless selection, and incomplete nutrition.

By gradual processes the farming communities of European countries have replaced their scrub stallions with pure-bred sires. They have learned by experience that the greatest profits are to be gained by the production of pure-bred and high-grade stock, and in many breeding centers they will not keep or patronize a non-registered sire. The various governments and national and local breeding associations have aided greatly in the work of eliminating unsound, unsuitable breeding stock. In breeding centers registered mares are to be found at work in the fields that are mated with inspected, pure-bred stallions. In Great Britain practically all farmers recognize the importance of using pure-bred sires and only such are used in various districts whence come the many well-known British breeds of horses. In Scotland only one non-registered stallion has been reported as being used for public service in that country since 1900.

The French government for over 100 years has maintained stables of carefully selected, sound, pure-bred stallions for breeding purposes.

The best stallions in France are annually chosen for use in the studs, and since 1885, when a government decree to that effect was promulgated, all stallions not coming within special classes have been excluded from public service. The classes referred to are selected by government veterinarians, who inspect all horses and grade them as follows: "Subsidized" class, comprising stallions of a certain standard and for each of which a cash bonus of from $60 to $100 per year is paid to the owner to keep the animal in the country for use by owners of mares; "authorized" class, comprising horses of slightly lower quality that are authorized, after passing inspection, by a card certifying them as recommended by the government for use as sires; "approved" class, comprising a few horses permitted to stand for service, but not granted a bonus or recommendation card.

In Belgium the government has, since 1880, maintained a great horse-breeding establishment, and promotes the breeding of pure-bred Belgian draft horses (Le Cheval de trait Belge) by an annual grant of $5000 to the official draft horse registration society, and an annual appropriation of $70,000 to encourage the horse breeding of the country. Liberal prizes are awarded to mares and foals at shows throughout the country; stallions are officially examined by government experts; and both approved stallions and mares are granted "maintenance" bounties to retain them in Belgium. Under such auspices, only pure-bred stallions are in use for service and horse breeding is making wonderful progress.

In Germany, government supervision of horse breeding has obtained for centuries and to-day is similar to that in vogue in Belgium, it having been required by law "that no permits should be issued authorizing the use of stallions, unless they passed a satisfactory government inspection." At the present time both the government and agricultural societies promote intelligent horse breeding. Prizes are awarded for animals of special merit, and such animals must remain in the country for a specified term. First prizes are awarded only to mature horses and mares that have shown merit as breeders. Stallion shows have long been held at Aurich in East Friesland, where the horses are brought annually for inspection and approval. Prizes for brood mares are also awarded by the government. Somewhat similar supervision of horse-breeding matters is undertaken by the government of Austria, and large sums of money are annually devoted to the encouragement of the breeding industry.

That there is a growing demand for American bred horses is shown by the constantly growing demand notwithstanding the continual rise in price. To meet this demand Doctor Alexander advocates a campaign for better breeding, which involves the following:

FOR BETTER HORSES.

Nearly all of the states in the northwest have taken a positive stand on the proposition of aiding in the improvement of horse flesh. We refer to the fact that these states have enacted rigid stallion registration laws—laws that, if enforced, will show to every stallion patron the status of the sire in question both as to breeding and to health and constitution. It remains with the mare owner whether he will make the most of his opportunities and work toward constant improvement of his horse stock.

1. Commence grading up the farm horse stock by mating carefully selected, sound, suitable mares with sound, prepotent, muscular, pure-bred, registered stallions.

2. Continue year after year to use the best obtainable pure-bred stallions of the character and breed first chosen and never out-cross to any other breed.

3. Do not use any stallion that is unsound, unsuitable, partially impotent, unlicensed or not registered in a stud book recognized by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

4. Do not breed from any mare that is deformed, sick, diseased, vicious, unsound, unsuitable, a poor milker, or a cross mother.

5. Breed horses with the object of steadily improving the stock on the farm and advancing the horse breeding industry of the State.

6. Do not retain for breeding purposes any colt that is not pure-bred and eligible to registry in a stud book recognized by the Department of Agriculture.

7. Properly feed, shelter and care for pregnant and nursing mares, and from birth until ready for market nourish their offspring in such a way as to prevent stunting and insure perfect development.

8. Encourage the working of pure-bred stallions sufficient to keep them healthy, muscular, prepotent and prevent pampering, weakness, partial impotence and actual sterility and so tend to insure vigor, strong constitution and health in their offspring at birth and throughout life.

9. Encourage the home production of pure-bred stallions to take the place of the host of undesirable grade, mongrel or scrub stallions at present retarding progress in horse breeding, and with this object in view buy and breed from some pure-bred registered mares in every county in the State.

10. As soon as possible stop working scrub horses on the farm and in their place use grade horses of good quality and character, well fed, properly groomed, furnished with attractive, nicely kept harness and hitched to modern implements, wagons, and carriages.

11. Organize township and county associations for community breeding of horses of the same blood, character and quality and to more readily obtain pure-bred stallions and mares and insure a profitable market for surplus horses.

12. Encourage representative exhibits at the county fairs of pure-bred stallions and mares and grade mares, geldings, farm teams, and young stock by pure-bred sires. Discourage the offering of classes and premiums for grades and mongrels or scrub stallions or their progeny.

Some Facts and Figures Shown by the Work of Inspecting Pedigrees

Section 3, of the Kansas stallion law, specifies the duties of the Live Stock Registry Board in regard to the pedigrees of the horses submitted for enrolment, and reads as follows:

SEC. 3.—The officers of the Live Stock Registry Board, whose duty it shall be to examine and pass upon the merits of each pedigree submitted, shall use as their standard the stud books and signatures of the duly authorized presidents and secretaries, respectively, of the various horse pedigree registry associations, societies or companies, recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and shall accept as pure-bred, and entitled to a license certificate as such, each stallion for which a correct pedigree registry certificate is furnished bearing the signature of the president and secretary of a government recognized and approved stud book.

The following list of associations, societies and companies are the only ones recognized and approved by the United States Department of Agriculture, and as such they are recognized as the standard by the Kansas Board:

RECOGNIZED REGISTER COMPANIES

- Arabian Horse Club of America, H. E. Bush-Brown, Newburg, N. J.
- Cleveland Bay Society of America, R. P. Stericker, W. Orange, N. J., 80 Chestnut Ave.
- American Clydesdale Breeders' Assn., R. B. Ogilvie, Chicago, Ill., Union Stock Yards.
- French Coach Horse Register Co., Chas. C. Glenn, Columbus, Ohio.
- French Coach Horse Society of Amer., Duncan E. Willett, Oak Park, Ill., Maple Ave. & Harrison St.
- German Hanoverian & Oldenburger Coach Horse Society of America, F. Crouch, LaFayette, Ind.
- National French Draft Horse Assn., C. E. Stubbs, Fairfield, Iowa.
- National Register of Belgian Draft Horses, J. D. Conner, Jr., Wabash, Ind.
- American Hackney Horse Society, Gurney C. Gue, New York City, 308 W. 97th St.
- Morgan Register, T. E. Boyce, Middlebury, Vt.
- Percheron Society of America, Wayne Dinsmore, Chicago, Ill., Union Stock Yards.
- Percheron Registry Co., Chas. C. Glenn, Columbus, Ohio.
- American Percheron Breeders & Importers Registry Co., F. A. Forney, Plainfield, Ohio.
- American Saddle Horse Register, I. B. Nall, Louisville, Ky.
- Shetland Pony Club, Julia M. Wade, LaFayette, Ind.
- American Suffolk Horse Breeders' Association, Alexander Galbraith, DeKalb, Ill.
- American Shire Horse Association, Chas. Burgess, Winona, Ill.
- American Stud Book, (Thoroughbred) W. H. Rowe, New York City, 571 Fifth Ave.
- American Trotting Register, W. E. Knight, Chicago, Ill., 355 Dearborn St.
- Welsh Pony & Cob Society of Amer., J. W. Jones, Columbia, Tenn.

Only horses properly recorded in these associations are eligible to enrolment as pure-breds in the books of the Kansas Live Stock Registry Board.

In accordance with the section of the law quoted above, hundreds of pedigrees of all kinds and descriptions were sent to the secretary of the Live Stock Registry Board for inspection. The work of passing upon the merits of these pedigrees required a thorough knowledge of the registration requirements of the various government approved associations, and also a knowledge of the methods and registration requirements of the various foreign associations. Each and every pedigree was carefully and thoroughly examined, checked, and, if properly recorded in a government recognized association, passed as eligible for enrolment in the books of the Kansas State Live Stock Registry Board.

Of the pedigrees submitted for examination, 2599 were passed as pedigrees of pure-bred stallions recorded in government recognized associations. The pedigrees were carefully recorded, and our records show that the number of pure-bred horses of each of the various breeds standing for public service in the State of Kansas for the season of 1910 is as follows:

Belgians.....	133	Percheron....	1342
Cleveland Bay.....	15	Saddlebred.....	16
Clydesdale.....	41	Shetland.....	9
French Coach.....	35	Shire.....	114
French Draft.....	261	Standard.....	553
German Coach.....	38	Suffolk.....	1
Hackney.....	12	Thoroughbred....	12
Morgan.....	17

It is rather interesting to note that 51.6 per cent of all the pedigrees of pure-bred horses and 70.9 per cent of all the pedigrees of pure-bred draft horses recorded by the Kansas Live Stock Registry Board are for Percheron horses, which shows the popularity of the Percheron breed among the Kansas horsemen.

It was found that 21.3 per cent of all the pedigrees of pure-bred stallions recorded in government recognized associations were pedigrees of standard-bred horses, and that 78.2 per cent of the pedigrees of all the light horses were pedigrees of standard-bred horses.

Before leaving the subject of the pedigrees properly recorded in government recognized associations it might be of interest to note the fact that of all the horses standing for public service in the State of Kansas only 40.8 per cent have pedigrees properly recorded in the stud books of the approved registry associations; the remainder either have no pedigrees at all or have worthless pedigrees recorded in non-recognized associations. The great majority of these have no breeding at all, being simply mongrels or grades, which, to a great extent, explains why the general average of the Kansas horses is no better than it is to-day.

Two hundred one pedigrees of supposedly pure-bred horses were rejected.

First: Pedigrees recorded in associations not recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture. Many pedigrees of this kind were submitted to the board for inspection, the majority of which showed practically no breeding for the animal they represented and in reality showed nothing more than that the animal registered was a stallion. They are intended to deceive uninformed and unsuspecting persons and have been the means of causing an enormous loss to horsemen and to the horse industry of Kansas, purchasers getting many times only a grade or mongrel, thinking they were getting a pure-bred horse. There are several companies that are issuing pedigrees of this kind. The associations of this class which the board has had to deal with are as follows:

a. The American Horse Registry Company of Des Moines, Iowa, N. J. Harris, Secretary. We found that sixty-six of the pedigrees submitted for inspection were recorded in the stud books of this association. After experiencing some difficulty we finally secured a list of the registration requirements of this association. The more important of these requirements were in regard to height, weight, color, markings, a few measurements, and the breed the animal most resembled. It was impossible to tell just what the breeding of the animal recorded in the association really was. Accompanying these blanks there was a leaflet upon which was printed a lengthy article disparaging the value of a pedigree and setting forth the idea that individuality was the all-important principle in animal breeding. Almost any kind of a horse could be recorded in this association. Of the sixty-six pedigrees recorded in this association and rejected by the board not one has been reissued as the pedigree of a pure-bred horse by a government recognized association.

b. The American Percheron Registry Association of LaGrange, Ill., S. M. Heberling, secretary. This is another association whose registration requirements were not based upon purity of breeding, as most of the pedigrees examined that were recorded in the books of this association showed no evidence of purity of breeding, though many were horses of Percheron blood, or else they showed breeding that could not be verified.

Forty-eight of the pedigrees submitted for inspection were recorded in this association, representing pure-bred Percheron horses. Six of these have since been reissued by government recognized associations, five as pedigrees representing pure-bred French Draft horses, recorded by the National French Draft Horse Association, and one as the pedigree of a pure-bred Percheron, issued by the American Breeders and Importers Percheron Registry Company.

c. National Standard Pacing Horse Breeders' Company. This association was formed for the purpose of registering pacing horses. Performance rather than breeding seems to be their standard of excellence.

Ten of the pedigrees examined were recorded in the books of this association. They were all short pedigrees and many of very questionable breeding, none of which have since been reissued by the American Trotting Register as pedigrees of pure-bred horses.

d. There are many other non-recognized associations doing business over the country, but only a few of the pedigrees submitted were recorded in the books of each of these associations. None of these pedigrees have since been reissued as pedigrees of pure-bred horses by government recognized associations. Of these, three pedigrees were submitted recorded in the books of the United States Horse Register, and five pedigrees in the Oldenburg Coach Horse Association.

One pedigree was submitted which was recorded in the books of each of the following associations:

American Draft Horse Association and American Coach, Carriage and Draft Horse Registering Association. These associations are the same as the American Horse Register, N. J. Harris, secretary.

National Percheron Horse Breeders' Association.

Thoroughbred Record Company.

National Hackney Stud Book.

Yorkshire Coach Horse Society, S. D. Thompson, secretary.

Other non-recognized associations in the United States are:

The American Horse Breeders' Trotting Registry Association, 141 High street, Boston.

American Iceland Pony Club, Geo. H. Simpson, secretary, Wheaton, Ill.

Belgian-American Draft Horse Registry, A. J. Myers, secretary, Lovington, Ill.

Coach and Draft Horse Association of America, Frederick Wightman, secretary, LaCrosse, Wis.

International Consolidated Record Association, H. A. Jones, secretary, Peen Yan, N. J.

Second: Pedigrees known as Thompson "high numbers." For some time there had been a great deal of dissatisfaction and friction within what is now known as the Percheron Society of America, which was formerly known under the name of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' Association. The most serious cause of friction was caused by the manner in which the affairs of the office were conducted. The feeling between the factions was very bitter and led to the reorganization of the association under the name of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' and Importers' Association, with G. W. Stubblefield as secretary. Mr. Thompson, the former secretary, continued to issue certificates of registration. As a result of investigations, all certificates of registration in the stud books of this association bearing the signature of Mr. Thompson with numbers above 35912 and issued after May 9, 1904, have been blacklisted.

Forty-seven pedigrees of this kind were presented to the Kansas Live Stock Registry Board for inspection and enrolment, four of which were for Boullonnais horses which had been sold as Percheron horses to unsuspecting horsemen; many were French Draft horses; and many showed no purity of breeding of any kind. In some cases the sire and dam could not be found in any stud book, they being simply forgeries. A few of these pedigrees have proved to be all right, as thirteen have been reissued as pedigrees of pure-bred Percherons by government recognized associations.

Third: Pedigrees showing evidence of being forged or tampered with. While the pedigrees submitted for inspection showing evidence of forgery were not very numerous, many of them showed very bold and very crude work. It was most evident that a horse other than the original for which the pedigree was issued had been substituted and the pedigree changed to correspond to the color, or age, or both, of the horse now claimed to be the original. In eleven cases the date of foaling had been changed, in some instances one year, in some two years, and in one instance as much as seven years. In all cases but one it was changed from an earlier to a later date.

In three cases the color given in the pedigree and the color sent in on the veterinarian's inspection report of the horse, for which the pedigree was supposed to have been issued, were decidedly different. In one case the pedigree described the horse as "iron grey," while the veterinarian's report described him as "black with a star." In a few cases the color on the foreign certificate did not agree with the color given on the American certificate. As an illustration, on the pedigree of an imported horse the French certificate gave his color as "black with a star," while the American certificate gave the color of the horse as "bay." In one case the pedigree of a horse claimed to have been imported was rejected because of suspected irregularities, and investigation showed that the people who claimed to have imported him had never imported a horse of that breed.

In another case the pedigree was rejected by the board because of evident irregularities in the foreign certificate. This certificate was referred to the French authorities and it was pronounced a forgery. In two cases the pedigrees proved to be absolute forgeries from beginning to end.

Fourth: Pedigrees recorded in government recognized associations but not eligible or not properly recorded. Two pedigrees for supposedly pure-bred Percheron stallions were received for inspection, issued by the American Breeders' and Importers' Percheron Registry Company of Plainfield, Ohio, one of whose dam's was a French Draft having for her dam a top-cross French Draft; the other horse had a French Draft dam. One pedigree was received for inspection apparently all right and properly signed by the secretary, but it had never been published in the stud books and no record of it was ever found. One pedigree received by the board was for a French Draft horse recorded in the National French Draft Horse Association. Upon investigation this pedigree proved to be a fraud.

Under this general heading will be included the pedigrees of five horses registered as non-standard in the American Trotting Register and one recorded in the Jockey Club records for racing purposes only. In every one of these cases the owner thought his horse should have a license as a pure-bred and insisted that he was a pure-bred because his name appeared in the herd book, not stopping to consider how it happened to be there. In a few of these cases the horses had been bought as pure-bred horses at long prizes.

Fifth: Foreign certificates unaccompanied by an American certificate. The Kansas Live Stock Registry Board does not recognize foreign certificates when they have not been recorded in the stud books of the recognized American associations. A few owners had neglected to have their horses recorded in American associations, though they may have been eligible to registration in American books, but many of these pedigrees would not stand the test of a thorough investigation. The greater number of these foreign certificates unaccompanied by American certificates were for German Coach horses. The board examined and rejected thirty-one pedigrees of this kind.

Investigation has revealed the fact that the horses with the above described worthless pedigrees have necessitated a cash outlay as purchase price of an immense sum of money, an amount estimated at thousands of dollars. This outlay of money was worse than simply the loss of this vast sum, because of the fact that the money thus expended was paid for horses whose influence in the stud has been the cause of lowering rather than raising the quality of the horses in the community in which they stood for public service, because the lack of purity of breeding, which is characteristic of the majority of these horses, can have only a harmful influence when such horses are used for breeding purposes.

In some instances beginners in the pure-bred horse business having one or two pure-bred mares may have bred to these false pedigreed stallions thinking they were pure-bred and wondered at the poor results obtained from these matings. Experiences of this kind work injury, not only to the man in question but also to the pure-bred interests of that particular community, and all patrons of the stallion.

In this report one may find authentic information concerning the breeding of every stallion in the State complying with the stallion law, so that the man who wishes to breed to a horse in any community in Kansas may know just what kind of a horse he is breeding to, so far as the pedigree of this particular horse is concerned.

By consulting the list of government approved associations the breeder may be able to know which associations are reliable and which are not, then in case he wishes to purchase a stallion for breeding purposes he has but to insist that the horse be properly recorded in one of these recognized and approved associations, which practically guarantees the genuineness of his breeding.

It is hoped that the publication of the data and facts obtained by the Live Stock Registry Board in its work of licensing the stallions standing for public service in Kansas will be instrumental in creating a more general appreciation of the fact that there are differences in pedigrees, fraudulent ones as well as genuine ones, and also in creating a more general appreciation of the value of a genuine pedigree of a pure-bred stallion.

This publicity of the pedigrees of the breeding animals is bound to create a spirit of pride and rivalry among the horsemen of each community, and this will have a large influence in raising the standard of the class of stallions kept for public service in each community, and thus in the whole State. Already this influence has been noticed in a marked degree.

This publicity will also create a demand for stallions of better breeding by the men who are to patronize these stallions. The people are awakening to the necessity of these things and the demand is becoming imperative. Thus we have reasons to believe that the class of horses in the whole State of Kansas will be greatly improved during the next few years.

Care of the Stallion

The good, pure-bred stallion represents a large investment of money, and it behooves the owners of these stallions to give them the best of care, that satisfactory returns may be realized from this investment.

The first consideration in the care of the stallion is health and vigor, and to attain these in the highest degree the stallion must have sunshine, fresh air, exercise, clean quarters, thorough grooming, and proper food.

Sunshine, fresh air and exercise may be had at the same time to some extent, but the stallion must have sunshine and fresh air, not only when exercising or at work but he must have plenty of fresh air and sunshine in his stall or box. Proper ventilation and sunshine are two primary essentials to the stallion's health. Too often the stallion is stabled by himself in a dark, dreary, dirty, lonesome and poorly ventilated stall or box completely shut off from all association with other horses and with but very little association with man. Under these conditions is it any wonder the stallion develops poor eyesight, a bad temper, and so many vices?

Besides having plenty of light and proper ventilation the stall or box should be kept scrupulously clean and sweet, as this condition is unfavorable to the development of disease germs and aids wonderfully in preserving the health and vigor of the stallion.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the necessity for thorough grooming. The liberal use of the currycomb, brush and wiping cloth insures a healthy skin, stimulates the circulation, actually saves feed, and makes the animal more attractive, and the satisfaction in this should more than repay the owner or groom for the work involved, if he has the least bit of love for good horse flesh in his nature.

It is absolutely necessary that the stallion have plenty of exercise if we are to expect him to enjoy good health and be a success in the stud. There is nothing more important in the care of the stallion than plenty of exercise, and there is nothing more neglected. The most practical kind of exercise for the stallion is good, honest labor. There is no reason why he should not work the same as any other horse about the farm.

Until the stallions reach the age of two years they should have the run of pastures, fields and lots where they may have exercise at will. Young stallions may run together in pasture with less danger of injury from kicking, etc., than there is in allowing fillies to run together. While they play a great deal, they are not as vicious as fillies. At two years of age they should be broken to the harness and put to light work.

At three years of age the stallion should do a day's work such as would be expected of any three-year-old horse. If a mature, unbroken stallion be purchased, break him to work as soon as he is received. This will not be a difficult task. Of course one must use care and judgment in getting the stallion used to work—at first he should have only light work for a few hours at a time, it being gradually increased until his physical condition is such that he is able to do a day's work with ease.

While stallions can be worked together as a team, it is perhaps best and safest to work the stallion with a mare or gelding. This exercise and association with other horses, and with people, has not only a beneficial influence upon the health and vigor of the animal but it also makes him more tractable, easier to control, and thus a safer and more agreeable horse to handle. The bad-tempered or vicious stallion is usually the one that passes the most of his time in some dark and solitary stall or box completely shut off from all association with other horses and seldom coming in contact with man.

If, for any reason, it is impossible to put the stallion to regular work he should have at least eight or ten miles on the road every day.

The next consideration is the proper feeding of the stallion. It is not so much a question of what to feed, but rather of how to feed. Observation has shown that a combination of feeds used successfully by one man has proved a failure when used by another person. No two animals are alike, and to feed successfully one must be able to appreciate the peculiarities of each individual animal and govern his feeding operation accordingly.

One of the principal things to bear in mind in feeding is that no sudden change should be made in the ration to which the horse is accustomed. If it is necessary to make a change in the ration, the change should be made very gradually.

The ration used depends somewhat upon the crops grown in any particular locality. One of the best grains for a horse of any kind is oats. There is no other grain so safe for horse feeding, none upon which the animal seems to thrive better. The particular advantage of oats seems to lie in the fact that the animal in eating oats takes in with the grain a large amount of hull and chaff. This makes a looser mass and prevents packing in the digestive tract. The digestive juices permeate this mass of food more readily and thoroughly; thus the action of these juices upon the food is more pronounced. But in Kansas, and especially in some parts, it is not always possible to secure oats at reasonable prices, so some other grain must be used in place of all or part of the oat ration. The most common substitute for oats is corn.

There is very little difference in the food value of oats and corn, oats being slightly richer in protein and corn somewhat richer in carbohydrates. The principal difference in the two grains seems to be a physical rather than a chemical difference. Other substitutes for oats are barley, Kafir-corn, bran, oil meal, and alfalfa meal.

Some rations that might be used are as follows:

1. Oats and prairie hay.
2. Oats, prairie hay and alfalfa.
3. Oats 4 pts., corn 6 pts., oil meal 1 pt., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa hay.
4. Oats 4 pts., corn 6 pts., bran 4 pts., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa hay.
5. Oats 4 pts., corn 6 pts., alfalfa meal 4 pts., with prairie hay.
6. Oats 8 pts., corn 4 pts., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa hay.
7. Corn 6 pts., bran 4 pts., oil meal 1 pt., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa.

Timothy hay can be used in all places where prairie hay is suggested and timothy and clover (if the clover is bright and clean) could be substituted for prairie hay and alfalfa.

Barley or Kafir-corn, both ground, could be substituted for corn.

For roughage in Kansas, prairie hay would probably be used most widely, but where available alfalfa or clover should form a portion of the horse's hay ration.

The largest portion of the hay should be fed at night, a small portion in the morning, and more at noon. As a matter of fact, most stallions get too much hay. A rule that is sometimes given for feeding horses is, one pound of grain and one pound of hay per day for every one hundred pounds of live weight of the horse in question. As no two horses are alike, this rule has only a general application and it must be varied to meet the needs of each individual, some demanding more, some less.

The stallion should be given enough feed to keep him in a strong, vigorous condition and in good flesh. During the breeding season the stallion should be fed so as to keep him gradually gaining. Do not feed the stallion drugs, patent medicines, or patent foods. If he receives proper care, exercise and food he will not need any of these artificial stimulants which result in such injurious effects in the end.

If the two-year-old stallion is a strong, vigorous fellow, gets plenty of invigorating exercise, and is well fed, he may be allowed to cover not to exceed a dozen mares during the season, and these not oftener than one every five or six days. The three-year-old with similar care may be allowed to cover thirty mares, and these not oftener than one every two days. The four-year-old similarly cared for may cover from fifty to sixty mares during the season, but should not be allowed more than one each day. The mature horse under the best of care should never be allowed to cover more than two mares in any one day.

By artificial impregnation many more mares can be bred each season from one horse, and this method is recommended as a safe, sure and practical method of breeding. There is no reason for the fear that some people entertain that artificial impregnation lessens the vitality of the offspring thus produced. Never allow the stallion to cover a mare showing any abnormal discharge from the vagina, for if he does he may contract some infectious disease and spread it among the mares he covers during the season if proper precautions are not taken to check the spread of this infection.

If any suspicious mares are bred the generative organs of the stallion should be thoroughly washed with some mild antiseptic, such as a one to one-hundredth solution of some coal-tar dip, such as creosote, zenoleum, chloral-naphtholeum, etc.; a one to one-hundredth solution of potassium permanganate, or a one to one-fiftieth solution of carbolic acid.

Don't allow the stallion to squeal, rant, rear, and lunge. Have him thoroughly broken and under control at all times. Treat him kindly but firmly, never take any chances with him, and always remember that you are dealing with a stallion.

The Unsound Horse

The general misunderstanding and lack of knowledge of the subject "Unsoundness" and its vast importance to the horse-breeding industry, not only by the general public but also by many breeders and veterinarians who should be authorities upon the question, demands a more careful study of the subject. It is herein discussed not in professional or technical phraseology, but in plain, every-day English, with the hope that any who may read this discussion may have a better and clearer understanding of the subject.

The first question that naturally arises is: "What constitutes an unsoundness?" It is a difficult matter to formulate a clean-cut definition for the term unsoundness. Many definitions have been given, but none seem to quite cover the subject.

An unsoundness might be defined as any disease or defect that actually lessens the natural usefulness of the animal so as to make him less capable of work of any description, or which, in its ordinary progress, will diminish the natural usefulness of the animal.

The next question that arises is: "What constitutes a blemish and how is a blemish differentiated from an unsoundness?" It is impossible to draw a hard and fast line between the two, but for practical purposes we may say that a blemish is anything which may cause a depreciation in the market value of an animal, but does not in any manner interfere with its natural usefulness so as to make him less capable of work of any description. In some instances a great deal of care and judgment must be exercised in distinguishing between a blemish and an unsoundness, as in the case of splints. When splints are small and near the middle of the cannon bone they are naturally only blemishes, but when high on the cannon bone and involving the knee joint they constitute an unsoundness of a pronounced character.

Another instance that might be cited is the wire cut. Sometimes it is only trivial in nature, healing readily and leaving a scar which passes as a blemish. Again, a wire cut may involve a joint, causing a permanent enlargement (exostosis), stiffness and lameness which would be a permanent unsoundness. So, as was said before, care and judgment must be exercised in differentiating between an unsoundness and a blemish.

Some of the more common blemishes are: knee sprung, due to external influences, wind galls, scars from cuts, slightly enlarged bursæ, capped hocks, capped elbows, small splints, etc.

Horses in general may be divided into three classes, sound, unsound, and serviceably sound. A sound horse is one that is absolutely free from all blemishes or unsoundnesses.

A serviceably sound horse is one that is free from all unsoundnesses of a hereditary nature, but possesses one or more of the various blemishes or minor non-hereditary unsoundness; that is, he is a horse that possesses no disease or defect which will interfere to any appreciable extent with its natural usefulness, or lessen its value as a breeding animal, but possesses a scar, small splint, or something of this nature, which may lessen its market value.

The unsound horse is one that possesses one or more of the various diseases or defects that constitute unsoundnesses. These diseases and defects will be discussed in detail as we proceed with this paper.

Unsoundnesses may be divided into two general classes—A. Temporary, B. Permanent.

Temporary Unsoundnesses

Temporary unsoundnesses may be defined as those diseases or defects which diminish the natural usefulness of the animal temporarily but from which he will probably recover. Under the head of temporary unsoundness should be placed all acute disorders. These could be divided into:

1. Contagious, those which are transmitted from one animal to another, including strangles or distemper, influenza, mange, urethral gleet, infectious abortion, and horse pox.

2. Non-contagious, or those not transmitted from one animal to another. Among these might be mentioned bad teeth, acute lameness, acute laminitis, sprains, cuts and bruises, indigestion, thrush, pneumonia, sprung hocks, and seedy toe. These conditions are so common and so familiar to all that only a few brief remarks upon each is deemed necessary.

Strangles or distemper is an infectious disease manifested by a catarrhal inflammation of the upper air passages and a suppurative inflammation of the adjacent lymph glands. In nearly all cases there are marked constitutional disturbances, the temperature varying from 102°-106° F., the animal is usually more or less dull, the eyes are half closed, the appetite usually diminishes, and constipation generally prevails. The mild form usually terminates favorably. In the more severe forms, with the formation of internal abscesses, it is often rather grave. In recovered cases often the animal's breathing may be more or less affected, leaving it permanently unsound.

The infection is carried from one animal to the other in hay litter, water, by eating from mangers or racks where infected animals have eaten, by harness, halters, blankets, combs and brushes, by attendants that have been in contact with infected animals; hence the necessity of isolation and thorough disinfection.

INFLUENZA

Sometimes called epizootic catarrh, La Grippe, shipping fever, and many other names. It is an infectious fever with a tendency to locate on the respiratory and alimentary mucous membranes, eyes, heart pleura, lungs, kidneys, liver, nervous system, or the joints. The attack is generally sudden, there is loss of appetite, early prostration and weakness, high fever, eyes swollen and watery. It spreads rapidly. With proper care the animal usually recovers, leaving no deleterious after effects.

MANGE

This is a parasitic disease caused by the scab mite, which burrows into the skin. It causes intense itching, irritation and worry to the animal. It is transmitted from one animal to another by contact or from quarters where infested animals have recently been kept, from blankets, harness, etc., recently used on infested animals. If the trouble is neglected the animal becomes thin in flesh, anemic, and in some cases death may even take place.

URETHRAL GLEET

This is a condition in which there is a catarrhal inflammation of the urethra (canal leading from the bladder to the end of the penis). It is usually caused by irritation accompanied by infection. It is characterized by a discharge from the penis, difficulty and pain when urine is passed. No stallion should be used for service when affected with urethral gleet, as it is liable to be transmitted to every mare he serves.

INFECTIOUS ABORTION

This is an insidious infectious disease which is rather difficult to handle. It may be transmitted by the manure, litter, etc., from the stall of the mare that has aborted or by the attendant who has handled a mare that has aborted. A stallion being allowed to serve a mare that suffers from infectious abortion may transmit it to nearly, if not all, the mares he is subsequently allowed to serve for some time. Mares that have aborted should be isolated, properly treated and not be bred for a long period of time. This disease might well be classed as a permanent unsoundness, because of the fact that it may be apparently cured and still break out again at some future time, and for the reason claimed by some authorities that a previous abortion seems to encourage abortion at the next period of pregnancy. Other authorities claim that this infectious abortion runs a course of a few years, the animal becoming immune and no further trouble ensuing. We can hardly commend the last theory.

HORSE POX OR VARIOLA EQUINÆ

Horse pox is a contagious febrile disease characterized by eruptions on the skin. At first there are only small, hard lumps, but later they become pustular in form. This suppurating stage is followed by a formation of scabs and scaling off of the skin, a distinct depression or pit being left. It passes rapidly from horse to cow and vice versa, and from horse to horse by means of litter, hay, brushes, combs, hands of attendants, etc.

VESICULAR EXANTHEMA

This is an acute infectious disease showing fever and hyperæmia. On the generative organs there is usually formed small round, hard enlargements. These progress in pustules and open sores. There is great itching and irritation. It is passed from one animal to another in breeding, also by the use of combs, brushes, blankets, etc., which have been used on infected animals. In the first stages heat, swelling and tenderness of the affected parts develop. This is followed by the formation of papules which develop into open sores. Scabs form and peel off, leaving white scars. In mares and stallions it usually affects the external generative organs; in sucklings it may affect the mouth, lips, nose, and quarters. In the mare the vulva swells, the vagina is very red, followed by the characteristic eruptions accompanying. There is marked tenderness and intense itching. The mare seems to be constantly in heat.

In the stallion the sheath and penis become swollen, followed by eruptions as in the mare. These eruptions may extend to the scrotum inside of the thigh or inside the forelegs, or throat or any part which might become soiled in covering the mare infected. There is frequent urination and generative excitement.

This has been described a little more in detail because of the fact that there have been a few outbreaks of this disease in Kansas and some might at first thought confuse it with Dourine. It is an acute disease, and under proper treatment usually runs its course in two or three weeks. No animal having sores upon or discharges from the generative organs should be used for breeding purposes.

BAD TEETH

This includes a great variety of teeth troubles so numerous that space forbids a detailed description of each. Teeth troubles are usually indicated by a foul odor from the mouth, improper mastication, turning the head to one side during mastication, chewing the food for a time then dropping it from the mouth, and sometimes by swellings and enlargements. The teeth should be examined frequently and kept in as good condition as possible.

ACUTE LAMENESS

This is a condition caused by cuts, bruises, strains, etc., which result in a painful condition, thereby causing lameness. In all probability the causative condition will heal and with the healing the lameness will disappear. A careful distinction should be made between this condition and a condition which will probably form an exostosis or stiffness of a joint, thereby resulting in a permanent unsoundness.

Acute lameness is a good illustration of a temporary unsoundness.

ACUTE LAMINITIS, OR FOUNDER

Laminitis is an inflammatory condition of the sensitive laminae usually affecting both front feet, but may affect the hind feet in addition. Very seldom are the hind feet alone affected. The hoof becomes loosened from the inner structures of the foot, the parts affected becoming congested and swollen. It is most commonly found in badly formed flat feet. The principal causes are: hard, fast driving, improper shoeing, chills and exposure, and improper diet. It may also occur as a complication of influenza, colic, parturition or excessive purgation. The trouble appears suddenly, the animal points or pushes his feet in front and avoids placing weight on the feet as much as possible. The hind feet are usually thrust far forward to take as much weight as possible off the front feet. When moved, the fore feet move rapidly. During acute cases the fever is high.

If proper treatment is resorted to at the beginning they usually result favorably, depending, of course, upon the severity of the attack. In unfavorable cases the soles may drop and the case becomes chronic, constituting a permanent unsoundness.

SPRAINS, CUTS, AND BRUISES

Those sprains, cuts and bruises that will probably recover without leaving any condition which would cause a permanent interference with the natural usefulness of an animal should be classed as a temporary unsoundness.

INDIGESTION

Indigestion is usually caused by some fault of the diet which can readily be remedied, and the animal recovers. Cases of chronic colic or enteralgia should not be passed as simple indigestion, for the former is a serious permanent unsoundness, while simple indigestion is usually only temporary, easily treated and guarded against.

THRUSH

Thrush is a diseased condition involving the frog of the foot, characterized by an ill-smelling, blackish discharge and by the frog becoming atrophied and ragged.

If treated in the early stages it is not a serious condition and may be easily cured, but if not treated inflammation attacks the various parts of the foot and may lead to a condition leaving the animal permanently unsound.

Thrush usually results from the horse standing in filthy quarters, or it may result from lack of exercise or faulty shoeing.

PNEUMONIA

There are several different forms of pneumonia, but in all we find an inflammatory condition of the lung tissue. Some of the predisposing causes are:

1. Age, it being more prevalent among horses from five years upwards of age.
2. Hot stables improperly cleaned and ventilated.
3. Poor health; animals that are in a run-down or depleted condition are more susceptible to the influences of cold and exposure.
4. Climatic conditions and season, it being more prevalent in countries and seasons of cold, damp and severe weather.

Exciting causes:

1. Sudden chill.
2. Free perspiration checked by exposure to a cold rain, snow, or draught.
3. Inhalation of irritating gases, smoke or dust or even food particles. Often caused by the foolish and dangerous practice of drenching through the nose, the medicine passing into the lungs causing mechanical pneumonia.
4. Infection, being caused by several kinds of bacteria.

The general symptoms of an acute case of pneumonia may be summed up as follows: First there is usually a staring coat and a chill; this is followed by the hot stage, with an increase in the body temperature, rapid and labored breathing, deep cough, animal stands with legs apart, elbows turned out, nostrils dilated, full but soft pulse, skin harsh, and the animal does not want to lie down.

The pueumonias usually run an acute course. Fortunately under proper treatment the majority end in recovery.

SPRUNG HOCKS

This is a condition caused by a sprain of the hock joint resulting in inflammation and enlargement of the whole joint. It is acute in character, and under proper treatment usually recovers.

SEEDY TOE

This is a degenerated condition of the toe of the foot, characterized by its soft and crumbling nature. It is caused by most any condition which impairs the nutrition of the horny structure. One of the most common exciting causes is improper shoeing, especially where large toe clips are used which press down upon the fibres of the horn, interfering with its nutrition.

Practically all of these temporary unsoundnesses are acute disorders from which the animal will probably recover if proper treatment is given, but some of them may be severe enough to develop into permanent unsoundnesses, and for this reason horses suffering from any of these temporary conditions should never be passed as sound, and if it be necessary to pass judgment at a time when any of these conditions exist the classification "temporarily unsound" should be used and the condition causing this temporary unsoundness stated.

Permanent or Chronic Unsoundnesses

Permanent or chronic unsoundnesses are those that permanently interfere with the natural usefulness of the animal so as to make him less capable of doing work of any kind. The permanent unsoundnesses are the ones that are of the greatest importance to the horse breeding industry. They may be subdivided into:

1. Those showing a hereditary tendency to develop in the offspring.
2. Those not showing a hereditary tendency to develop in the offspring.

The more common transmissible unsoundnesses are:

1. Laryngeal Hemiplegia—Roaring, whistling, or thick wind.
2. Pulmonary Emphysema—Heaves, or wind broken.
3. Enteralgia or chronic colic.
4. Rheumatism.
5. Chorea or St. Vitus Dance.
6. Stringhalt.
7. Unsoundnesses of sight.
 - a. Cataract
 - b. Amaurosis
 - c. Periodic ophthalmia
8. Tumor, especially melanotic.
9. Bone spavin.
10. Bog spavin.
11. Thoroughpin
12. Curb.
13. Splints.
14. Ringbone.
15. Sidebone.
16. Navicular disease.
17. Sand Cracks.
18. Cryptorchidism.
19. Parrot mouth.
20. Cribbing.
21. Weaving.

The more common non-transmissible permanent unsoundnesses are:

1. Poll evil.
2. Fistula of the withers.
3. Sweeney.
4. Fractural pelvis.
5. Luxation of patella or "stified."
6. Thickened tendons.
7. Chronic lameness.
8. Chronic founder.
9. Quittor.
10. Contracted heels.
11. Cocked ankles.
12. Grease.
13. Scratches.
14. Corns. (Suppurating).
15. Severe cuts and sprains.
16. Glanders and farcy. (Contagious, but not transmitted by heredity.)
17. Maladie du Coit. (Contagious, but not transmitted by heredity.)
18. Blindness due to injury.
19. Neurectomy wounds or scars indicating unsoundness.

Helix — Champion Percheron Stallion International 1910
Imported and owned by Taylor & Jones, Williamsville, Illinois

Calypso 25017 (44577)
A noted Percheron sire as well as show horse.
Owned by H. G. McMillan & Sons, Rock Rapids, Iowa.

Forty-eight of the pedigrees submitted for inspection were recorded in this association, representing pure-bred Percheron horses. Six of these have since been reissued by government recognized associations, five as pedigrees representing pure-bred French Draft horses, recorded by the National French Draft Horse Association, and one as the pedigree of a pure-bred Percheron, issued by the American Breeders and Importers Percheron Registry Company.

c. National Standard Pacing Horse Breeders' Company. This association was formed for the purpose of registering pacing horses. Performance rather than breeding seems to be their standard of excellence.

Ten of the pedigrees examined were recorded in the books of this association. They were all short pedigrees and many of very questionable breeding, none of which have since been reissued by the American Trotting Register as pedigrees of pure-bred horses.

d. There are many other non-recognized associations doing business over the country, but only a few of the pedigrees submitted were recorded in the books of each of these associations. None of these pedigrees have since been reissued as pedigrees of pure-bred horses by government recognized associations. Of these, three pedigrees were submitted recorded in the books of the United States Horse Register, and five pedigrees in the Oldenburg Coach Horse Association.

One pedigree was submitted which was recorded in the books of each of the following associations:

American Draft Horse Association and American Coach, Carriage and Draft Horse Registering Association. These associations are the same as the American Horse Register, N. J. Harris, secretary.

National Percheron Horse Breeders' Association.

Thoroughbred Record Company.

National Hackney Stud Book.

Yorkshire Coach Horse Society, S. D. Thompson, secretary.

Other non-recognized associations in the United States are:

The American Horse Breeders' Trotting Registry Association, 141 High street, Boston.

American Iceland Pony Club, Geo. H. Simpson, secretary, Wheaton, Ill.

Belgian-American Draft Horse Registry, A. J. Myers, secretary, Lovington, Ill.

Coach and Draft Horse Association of America, Frederick Wightman, secretary, LaCrosse, Wis.

International Consolidated Record Association, H. A. Jones, secretary, Peen Yan, N. J.

Second: Pedigrees known as Thompson "high numbers." For some time there had been a great deal of dissatisfaction and friction within what is now known as the Percheron Society of America, which was formerly known under the name of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' Association. The most serious cause of friction was caused by the manner in which the affairs of the office were conducted. The feeling between the factions was very bitter and led to the reorganization of the association under the name of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' and Importers' Association, with G. W. Stubblefield as secretary. Mr. Thompson, the former secretary, continued to issue certificates of registration. As a result of investigations, all certificates of registration in the stud books of this association bearing the signature of Mr. Thompson with numbers above 35912 and issued after May 9, 1904, have been blacklisted.

Forty-seven pedigrees of this kind were presented to the Kansas Live Stock Registry Board for inspection and enrolment, four of which were for Boullonnais horses which had been sold as Percheron horses to unsuspecting horsemen; many were French Draft horses; and many showed no purity of breeding of any kind. In some cases the sire and dam could not be found in any stud book, they being simply forgeries. A few of these pedigrees have proved to be all right, as thirteen have been reissued as pedigrees of pure-bred Percherons by government recognized associations.

Third: Pedigrees showing evidence of being forged or tampered with. While the pedigrees submitted for inspection showing evidence of forgery were not very numerous, many of them showed very bold and very crude work. It was most evident that a horse other than the original for which the pedigree was issued had been substituted and the pedigree changed to correspond to the color, or age, or both, of the horse now claimed to be the original. In eleven cases the date of foaling had been changed, in some instances one year, in some two years, and in one instance as much as seven years. In all cases but one it was changed from an earlier to a later date.

In three cases the color given in the pedigree and the color sent in on the veterinarian's inspection report of the horse, for which the pedigree was supposed to have been issued, were decidedly different. In one case the pedigree described the horse as "iron grey," while the veterinarian's report described him as "black with a star." In a few cases the color on the foreign certificate did not agree with the color given on the American certificate. As an illustration, on the pedigree of an imported horse the French certificate gave his color as "black with a star," while the American certificate gave the color of the horse as "bay." In one case the pedigree of a horse claimed to have been imported was rejected because of suspected irregularities, and investigation showed that the people who claimed to have imported him had never imported a horse of that breed.

In another case the pedigree was rejected by the board because of evident irregularities in the foreign certificate. This certificate was referred to the French authorities and it was pronounced a forgery. In two cases the pedigrees proved to be absolute forgeries from beginning to end.

Fourth: Pedigrees recorded in government recognized associations but not eligible or not properly recorded. Two pedigrees for supposedly pure-bred Percheron stallions were received for inspection, issued by the American Breeders' and Importers' Percheron Registry Company of Plainfield, Ohio, one of whose dam's was a French Draft having for her dam a top-cross French Draft; the other horse had a French Draft dam. One pedigree was received for inspection apparently all right and properly signed by the secretary, but it had never been published in the stud books and no record of it was ever found. One pedigree received by the board was for a French Draft horse recorded in the National French Draft Horse Association. Upon investigation this pedigree proved to be a fraud.

Under this general heading will be included the pedigrees of five horses registered as non-standard in the American Trotting Register and one recorded in the Jockey Club records for racing purposes only. In every one of these cases the owner thought his horse should have a license as a pure-bred and insisted that he was a pure-bred because his name appeared in the herd book, not stopping to consider how it happened to be there. In a few of these cases the horses had been bought as pure-bred horses at long prizes.

Fifth: Foreign certificates unaccompanied by an American certificate. The Kansas Live Stock Registry Board does not recognize foreign certificates when they have not been recorded in the stud books of the recognized American associations. A few owners had neglected to have their horses recorded in American associations, though they may have been eligible to registration in American books, but many of these pedigrees would not stand the test of a thorough investigation. The greater number of these foreign certificates unaccompanied by American certificates were for German Coach horses. The board examined and rejected thirty-one pedigrees of this kind.

Investigation has revealed the fact that the horses with the above described worthless pedigrees have necessitated a cash outlay as purchase price of an immense sum of money, an amount estimated at thousands of dollars. This outlay of money was worse than simply the loss of this vast sum, because of the fact that the money thus expended was paid for horses whose influence in the stud has been the cause of lowering rather than raising the quality of the horses in the community in which they stood for public service, because the lack of purity of breeding, which is characteristic of the majority of these horses, can have only a harmful influence when such horses are used for breeding purposes.

In some instances beginners in the pure-bred horse business having one or two pure-bred mares may have bred to these false pedigreed stallions thinking they were pure-bred and wondered at the poor results obtained from these matings. Experiences of this kind work injury, not only to the man in question but also to the pure-bred interests of that particular community, and all patrons of the stallion.

In this report one may find authentic information concerning the breeding of every stallion in the State complying with the stallion law, so that the man who wishes to breed to a horse in any community in Kansas may know just what kind of a horse he is breeding to, so far as the pedigree of this particular horse is concerned.

By consulting the list of government approved associations the breeder may be able to know which associations are reliable and which are not, then in case he wishes to purchase a stallion for breeding purposes he has but to insist that the horse be properly recorded in one of these recognized and approved associations, which practically guarantees the genuineness of his breeding.

It is hoped that the publication of the data and facts obtained by the Live Stock Registry Board in its work of licensing the stallions standing for public service in Kansas will be instrumental in creating a more general appreciation of the fact that there are differences in pedigrees, fraudulent ones as well as genuine ones, and also in creating a more general appreciation of the value of a genuine pedigree of a pure-bred stallion.

This publicity of the pedigrees of the breeding animals is bound to create a spirit of pride and rivalry among the horsemen of each community, and this will have a large influence in raising the standard of the class of stallions kept for public service in each community, and thus in the whole State. Already this influence has been noticed in a marked degree.

This publicity will also create a demand for stallions of better breeding by the men who are to patronize these stallions. The people are awakening to the necessity of these things and the demand is becoming imperative. Thus we have reasons to believe that the class of horses in the whole State of Kansas will be greatly improved during the next few years.

Care of the Stallion

The good, pure-bred stallion represents a large investment of money, and it behooves the owners of these stallions to give them the best of care, that satisfactory returns may be realized from this investment.

The first consideration in the care of the stallion is health and vigor, and to attain these in the highest degree the stallion must have sunshine, fresh air, exercise, clean quarters, thorough grooming, and proper food.

Sunshine, fresh air and exercise may be had at the same time to some extent, but the stallion must have sunshine and fresh air, not only when exercising or at work but he must have plenty of fresh air and sunshine in his stall or box. Proper ventilation and sunshine are two primary essentials to the stallion's health. Too often the stallion is stabled by himself in a dark, dreary, dirty, lonesome and poorly ventilated stall or box completely shut off from all association with other horses and with but very little association with man. Under these conditions is it any wonder the stallion develops poor eyesight, a bad temper, and so many vices?

Besides having plenty of light and proper ventilation the stall or box should be kept scrupulously clean and sweet, as this condition is unfavorable to the development of disease germs and aids wonderfully in preserving the health and vigor of the stallion.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the necessity for thorough grooming. The liberal use of the currycomb, brush and wiping cloth insures a healthy skin, stimulates the circulation, actually saves feed, and makes the animal more attractive, and the satisfaction in this should more than repay the owner or groom for the work involved, if he has the least bit of love for good horse flesh in his nature.

It is absolutely necessary that the stallion have plenty of exercise if we are to expect him to enjoy good health and be a success in the stud. There is nothing more important in the care of the stallion than plenty of exercise, and there is nothing more neglected. The most practical kind of exercise for the stallion is good, honest labor. There is no reason why he should not work the same as any other horse about the farm.

Until the stallions reach the age of two years they should have the run of pastures, fields and lots where they may have exercise at will. Young stallions may run together in pasture with less danger of injury from kicking, etc., than there is in allowing fillies to run together. While they play a great deal, they are not as vicious as fillies. At two years of age they should be broken to the harness and put to light work.

At three years of age the stallion should do a day's work such as would be expected of any three-year-old horse. If a mature, unbroken stallion be purchased, break him to work as soon as he is received. This will not be a difficult task. Of course one must use care and judgment in getting the stallion used to work—at first he should have only light work for a few hours at a time, it being gradually increased until his physical condition is such that he is able to do a day's work with ease.

While stallions can be worked together as a team, it is perhaps best and safest to work the stallion with a mare or gelding. This exercise and association with other horses, and with people, has not only a beneficial influence upon the health and vigor of the animal but it also makes him more tractable, easier to control, and thus a safer and more agreeable horse to handle. The bad-tempered or vicious stallion is usually the one that passes the most of his time in some dark and solitary stall or box completely shut off from all association with other horses and seldom coming in contact with man.

If, for any reason, it is impossible to put the stallion to regular work he should have at least eight or ten miles on the road every day.

The next consideration is the proper feeding of the stallion. It is not so much a question of what to feed, but rather of how to feed. Observation has shown that a combination of feeds used successfully by one man has proved a failure when used by another person. No two animals are alike, and to feed successfully one must be able to appreciate the peculiarities of each individual animal and govern his feeding operation accordingly.

One of the principal things to bear in mind in feeding is that no sudden change should be made in the ration to which the horse is accustomed. If it is necessary to make a change in the ration, the change should be made very gradually.

The ration used depends somewhat upon the crops grown in any particular locality. One of the best grains for a horse of any kind is oats. There is no other grain so safe for horse feeding, none upon which the animal seems to thrive better. The particular advantage of oats seems to lie in the fact that the animal in eating oats takes in with the grain a large amount of hull and chaff. This makes a looser mass and prevents packing in the digestive tract. The digestive juices permeate this mass of food more readily and thoroughly; thus the action of these juices upon the food is more pronounced. But in Kansas, and especially in some parts, it is not always possible to secure oats at reasonable prices, so some other grain must be used in place of all or part of the oat ration. The most common substitute for oats is corn.

There is very little difference in the food value of oats and corn, oats being slightly richer in protein and corn somewhat richer in carbohydrates. The principal difference in the two grains seems to be a physical rather than a chemical difference. Other substitutes for oats are barley, Kafir-corn, bran, oil meal, and alfalfa meal.

Some rations that might be used are as follows:

1. Oats and prairie hay.
2. Oats, prairie hay and alfalfa.
3. Oats 4 pts., corn 6 pts., oil meal 1 pt., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa hay.
4. Oats 4 pts., corn 6 pts., bran 4 pts., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa hay.
5. Oats 4 pts., corn 6 pts., alfalfa meal 4 pts., with prairie hay.
6. Oats 8 pts., corn 4 pts., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa hay.
7. Corn 6 pts., bran 4 pts., oil meal 1 pt., with prairie hay or prairie hay and alfalfa.

Timothy hay can be used in all places where prairie hay is suggested and timothy and clover (if the clover is bright and clean) could be substituted for prairie hay and alfalfa.

Barley or Kafir-corn, both ground, could be substituted for corn.

For roughage in Kansas, prairie hay would probably be used most widely, but where available alfalfa or clover should form a portion of the horse's hay ration.

The largest portion of the hay should be fed at night, a small portion in the morning, and more at noon. As a matter of fact, most stallions get too much hay. A rule that is sometimes given for feeding horses is, one pound of grain and one pound of hay per day for every one hundred pounds of live weight of the horse in question. As no two horses are alike, this rule has only a general application and it must be varied to meet the needs of each individual, some demanding more, some less.

The stallion should be given enough feed to keep him in a strong, vigorous condition and in good flesh. During the breeding season the stallion should be fed so as to keep him gradually gaining. Do not feed the stallion drugs, patent medicines, or patent foods. If he receives proper care, exercise and food he will not need any of these artificial stimulants which result in such injurious effects in the end.

If the two-year-old stallion is a strong, vigorous fellow, gets plenty of invigorating exercise, and is well fed, he may be allowed to cover not to exceed a dozen mares during the season, and these not oftener than one every five or six days. The three-year-old with similar care may be allowed to cover thirty mares, and these not oftener than one every two days. The four-year-old similarly cared for may cover from fifty to sixty mares during the season, but should not be allowed more than one each day. The mature horse under the best of care should never be allowed to cover more than two mares in any one day.

By artificial impregnation many more mares can be bred each season from one horse, and this method is recommended as a safe, sure and practical method of breeding. There is no reason for the fear that some people entertain that artificial impregnation lessens the vitality of the offspring thus produced. Never allow the stallion to cover a mare showing any abnormal discharge from the vagina, for if he does he may contract some infectious disease and spread it among the mares he covers during the season if proper precautions are not taken to check the spread of this infection.

If any suspicious mares are bred the generative organs of the stallion should be thoroughly washed with some mild antiseptic, such as a one to one-hundredth solution of some coal-tar dip, such as creosote, zenoleum, chloral-naphtholeum, etc.; a one to one-hundredth solution of potassium permanganate, or a one to one-fiftieth solution of carbolic acid.

Don't allow the stallion to squeal, rant, rear, and lunge. Have him thoroughly broken and under control at all times. Treat him kindly but firmly, never take any chances with him, and always remember that you are dealing with a stallion.

The Unsound Horse

The general misunderstanding and lack of knowledge of the subject "Unsoundness" and its vast importance to the horse-breeding industry, not only by the general public but also by many breeders and veterinarians who should be authorities upon the question, demands a more careful study of the subject. It is here-in discussed not in professional or technical phraseology, but in plain, every-day English, with the hope that any who may read this discussion may have a better and clearer understanding of the subject.

The first question that naturally arises is: "What constitutes an unsoundness?" It is a difficult matter to formulate a clean-cut definition for the term unsoundness. Many definitions have been given, but none seem to quite cover the subject.

An unsoundness might be defined as any disease or defect that actually lessens the natural usefulness of the animal so as to make him less capable of work of any description, or which, in its ordinary progress, will diminish the natural usefulness of the animal.

The next question that arises is: "What constitutes a blemish and how is a blemish differentiated from an unsoundness?" It is impossible to draw a hard and fast line between the two, but for practical purposes we may say that a blemish is anything which may cause a depreciation in the market value of an animal, but does not in any manner interfere with its natural usefulness so as to make him less capable of work of any description. In some instances a great deal of care and judgment must be exercised in distinguishing between a blemish and an unsoundness, as in the case of splints. When splints are small and near the middle of the cannon bone they are naturally only blemishes, but when high on the cannon bone and involving the knee joint they constitute an unsoundness of a pronounced character.

Another instance that might be cited is the wire cut. Sometimes it is only trivial in nature, healing readily and leaving a scar which passes as a blemish. Again, a wire cut may involve a joint, causing a permanent enlargement (exostosis), stiffness and lameness which would be a permanent unsoundness. So, as was said before, care and judgment must be exercised in differentiating between an unsoundness and a blemish.

Some of the more common blemishes are: knee sprung, due to external influences, wind galls, scars from cuts, slightly enlarged bursæ, capped hocks, capped elbows, small splints, etc.

Horses in general may be divided into three classes, sound, unsound, and serviceably sound. A sound horse is one that is absolutely free from all blemishes or unsoundnesses.

A serviceably sound horse is one that is free from all unsoundnesses of a hereditary nature, but possesses one or more of the various blemishes or minor non-hereditary unsoundness; that is, he is a horse that possesses no disease or defect which will interfere to any appreciable extent with its natural usefulness, or lessen its value as a breeding animal, but possesses a scar, small splint, or something of this nature, which may lessen its market value.

The unsound horse is one that possesses one or more of the various diseases or defects that constitute unsoundnesses. These diseases and defects will be discussed in detail as we proceed with this paper.

Unsoundnesses may be divided into two general classes—A. Temporary, B. Permanent.

Temporary Unsoundnesses

Temporary unsoundnesses may be defined as those diseases or defects which diminish the natural usefulness of the animal temporarily but from which he will probably recover. Under the head of temporary unsoundness should be placed all acute disorders. These could be divided into:

1. Contagious, those which are transmitted from one animal to another, including strangles or distemper, influenza, mange, urethral gleet, infectious abortion, and horse pox.

2. Non-contagious, or those not transmitted from one animal to another. Among these might be mentioned bad teeth, acute lameness, acute laminitis, sprains, cuts and bruises, indigestion, thrush, pneumonia, sprung hocks, and seedy toe. These conditions are so common and so familiar to all that only a few brief remarks upon each is deemed necessary.

Strangles or distemper is an infectious disease manifested by a catarrhal inflammation of the upper air passages and a suppurative inflammation of the adjacent lymph glands. In nearly all cases there are marked constitutional disturbances, the temperature varying from 102°-106° F., the animal is usually more or less dull, the eyes are half closed, the appetite usually diminishes, and constipation generally prevails. The mild form usually terminates favorably. In the more severe forms, with the formation of internal abscesses, it is often rather grave. In recovered cases often the animal's breathing may be more or less affected, leaving it permanently unsound.

The infection is carried from one animal to the other in hay litter, water, by eating from mangers or racks where infected animals have eaten, by harness, halters, blankets, combs and brushes, by attendants that have been in contact with infected animals; hence the necessity of isolation and thorough disinfection.

INFLUENZA

Sometimes called epizootic catarrh, La Grippe, shipping fever, and many other names. It is an infectious fever with a tendency to locate on the respiratory and alimentary mucous membranes, eyes, heart pleura, lungs, kidneys, liver, nervous system, or the joints. The attack is generally sudden, there is loss of appetite, early prostration and weakness, high fever, eyes swollen and watery. It spreads rapidly. With proper care the animal usually recovers, leaving no deleterious after effects.

MANGE

This is a parasitic disease caused by the scab mite, which burrows into the skin. It causes intense itching, irritation and worry to the animal. It is transmitted from one animal to another by contact or from quarters where infested animals have recently been kept, from blankets, harness, etc., recently used on infested animals. If the trouble is neglected the animal becomes thin in flesh, anemic, and in some cases death may even take place.

URETHRAL GLEET

This is a condition in which there is a catarrhal inflammation of the urethra (canal leading from the bladder to the end of the penis). It is usually caused by irritation accompanied by infection. It is characterized by a discharge from the penis, difficulty and pain when urine is passed. No stallion should be used for service when affected with urethral gleet, as it is liable to be transmitted to every mare he serves.

INFECTIOUS ABORTION

This is an insidious infectious disease which is rather difficult to handle. It may be transmitted by the manure, litter, etc., from the stall of the mare that has aborted or by the attendant who has handled a mare that has aborted. A stallion being allowed to serve a mare that suffers from infectious abortion may transmit it to nearly, if not all, the mares he is subsequently allowed to serve for some time. Mares that have aborted should be isolated, properly treated and not be bred for a long period of time. This disease might well be classed as a permanent unsoundness, because of the fact that it may be apparently cured and still break out again at some future time, and for the reason claimed by some authorities that a previous abortion seems to encourage abortion at the next period of pregnancy. Other authorities claim that this infectious abortion runs a course of a few years, the animal becoming immune and no further trouble ensuing. We can hardly commend the last theory.

HORSE POX OR VARIOLA EQUINÆ

Horse pox is a contagious febrile disease characterized by eruptions on the skin. At first there are only small, hard lumps, but later they become pustular in form. This suppurating stage is followed by a formation of scabs and scaling off of the skin, a distinct depression or pit being left. It passes rapidly from horse to cow and vice versa, and from horse to horse by means of litter, hay, brushes, combs, hands of attendants, etc.

VESICULAR EXANTHEMA

This is an acute infectious disease showing fever and hyperæmia. On the generative organs there is usually formed small round, hard enlargements. These progress in pustules and open sores. There is great itching and irritation. It is passed from one animal to another in breeding, also by the use of combs, brushes, blankets, etc., which have been used on infected animals. In the first stages heat, swelling and tenderness of the affected parts develop. This is followed by the formation of papules which develop into open sores. Scabs form and peel off, leaving white scars. In mares and stallions it usually affects the external generative organs; in sucklings it may affect the mouth, lips, nose, and quarters. In the mare the vulva swells, the vagina is very red, followed by the characteristic eruptions accompanying. There is marked tenderness and intense itching. The mare seems to be constantly in heat.

In the stallion the sheath and penis become swollen, followed by eruptions as in the mare. These eruptions may extend to the scrotum inside of the thigh or inside the forelegs, or throat or any part which might become soiled in covering the mare infected. There is frequent urination and generative excitement.

This has been described a little more in detail because of the fact that there have been a few outbreaks of this disease in Kansas and some might at first thought confuse it with Dourine. It is an acute disease, and under proper treatment usually runs its course in two or three weeks. No animal having sores upon or discharges from the generative organs should be used for breeding purposes.

BAD TEETH

This includes a great variety of teeth troubles so numerous that space forbids a detailed description of each. Teeth troubles are usually indicated by a foul odor from the mouth, improper mastication, turning the head to one side during mastication, chewing the food for a time then dropping it from the mouth, and sometimes by swellings and enlargements. The teeth should be examined frequently and kept in as good condition as possible.

ACUTE LAMENESS

This is a condition caused by cuts, bruises, strains, etc., which result in a painful condition, thereby causing lameness. In all probability the causative condition will heal and with the healing the lameness will disappear. A careful distinction should be made between this condition and a condition which will probably form an exostosis or stiffness of a joint, thereby resulting in a permanent unsoundness.

Acute lameness is a good illustration of a temporary unsoundness.

ACUTE LAMINITIS, OR FOUNDER

Laminitis is an inflammatory condition of the sensitive laminae usually affecting both front feet, but may affect the hind feet in addition. Very seldom are the hind feet alone affected. The hoof becomes loosened from the inner structures of the foot, the parts affected becoming congested and swollen. It is most commonly found in badly formed flat feet. The principal causes are: hard, fast driving, improper shoeing, chills and exposure, and improper diet. It may also occur as a complication of influenza, colic, parturition or excessive purgation. The trouble appears suddenly, the animal points or pushes his feet in front and avoids placing weight on the feet as much as possible. The hind feet are usually thrust far forward to take as much weight as possible off the front feet. When moved, the fore feet move rapidly. During acute cases the fever is high.

If proper treatment is resorted to at the beginning they usually result favorably, depending, of course, upon the severity of the attack. In unfavorable cases the soles may drop and the case becomes chronic, constituting a permanent unsoundness.

SPRAINS, CUTS, AND BRUISES

Those sprains, cuts and bruises that will probably recover without leaving any condition which would cause a permanent interference with the natural usefulness of an animal should be classed as a temporary unsoundness.

INDIGESTION

Indigestion is usually caused by some fault of the diet which can readily be remedied, and the animal recovers. Cases of chronic colic or enteralgia should not be passed as simple indigestion, for the former is a serious permanent unsoundness, while simple indigestion is usually only temporary, easily treated and guarded against.

THRUSH

Thrush is a diseased condition involving the frog of the foot, characterized by an ill-smelling, blackish discharge and by the frog becoming atrophied and ragged.

If treated in the early stages it is not a serious condition and may be easily cured, but if not treated inflammation attacks the various parts of the foot and may lead to a condition leaving the animal permanently unsound.

Thrush usually results from the horse standing in filthy quarters, or it may result from lack of exercise or faulty shoeing.

PNEUMONIA

There are several different forms of pneumonia, but in all we find an inflammatory condition of the lung tissue. Some of the predisposing causes are:

1. Age, it being more prevalent among horses from five years upwards of age.
2. Hot stables improperly cleaned and ventilated.
3. Poor health; animals that are in a run-down or depleted condition are more susceptible to the influences of cold and exposure.
4. Climatic conditions and season, it being more prevalent in countries and seasons of cold, damp and severe weather.

Exciting causes:

1. Sudden chill.
2. Free perspiration checked by exposure to a cold rain, snow, or draught.
3. Inhalation of irritating gases, smoke or dust or even food particles. Often caused by the foolish and dangerous practice of drenching through the nose, the medicine passing into the lungs causing mechanical pneumonia.
4. Infection, being caused by several kinds of bacteria.

The general symptoms of an acute case of pneumonia may be summed up as follows: First there is usually a staring coat and a chill; this is followed by the hot stage, with an increase in the body temperature, rapid and labored breathing, deep cough, animal stands with legs apart, elbows turned out, nostrils dilated, full but soft pulse, skin harsh, and the animal does not want to lie down.

The pneumonias usually run an acute course. Fortunately under proper treatment the majority end in recovery.

SPRUNG HOCKS

This is a condition caused by a sprain of the hock joint resulting in inflammation and enlargement of the whole joint. It is acute in character, and under proper treatment usually recovers.

SEEDY TOE

This is a degenerated condition of the toe of the foot, characterized by its soft and crumbling nature. It is caused by most any condition which impairs the nutrition of the horny structure. One of the most common exciting causes is improper shoeing, especially where large toe clips are used which press down upon the fibres of the horn, interfering with its nutrition.

Practically all of these temporary unsoundnesses are acute disorders from which the animal will probably recover if proper treatment is given, but some of them may be severe enough to develop into permanent unsoundnesses, and for this reason horses suffering from any of these temporary conditions should never be passed as sound, and if it be necessary to pass judgment at a time when any of these conditions exist the classification "temporarily unsound" should be used and the condition causing this temporary unsoundness stated.

Permanent or Chronic Unsoundnesses

Permanent or chronic unsoundnesses are those that permanently interfere with the natural usefulness of the animal so as to make him less capable of doing work of any kind. The permanent unsoundnesses are the ones that are of the greatest importance to the horse breeding industry. They may be subdivided into:

1. Those showing a hereditary tendency to develop in the offspring.
2. Those not showing a hereditary tendency to develop in the offspring.

The more common transmissible unsoundnesses are:

1. Laryngeal Hemiplegia—Roaring, whistling, or thick wind.
2. Pulmonary Emphysema—Heaves, or wind broken.
3. Enteralgia or chronic colic.
4. Rheumatism.
5. Chorea or St. Vitus Dance.
6. Stringhalt.
7. Unsoundnesses of sight.
 - a. Cataract
 - b. Amaurosis
 - c. Periodic ophthalmia
8. Tumor, especially melanotic.
9. Bone spavin.
10. Bog spavin.
11. Thoroughpin
12. Curb.
13. Splints.
14. Ringbone.
15. Sidebone.
16. Navicular disease.
17. Sand Cracks.
18. Cryptorchidism.
19. Parrot mouth.
20. Cribbing.
21. Weaving.

The more common non-transmissible permanent unsoundnesses are:

1. Poll evil.
2. Fistula of the withers.
3. Sweeney.
4. Fractural pelvis.
5. Luxation of patella or "stified."
6. Thickened tendons.
7. Chronic lameness.
8. Chronic founder.
9. Quittor.
10. Contracted heels.
11. Cocked ankles.
12. Grease.
13. Scratches.
14. Corns. (Suppurating).
15. Severe cuts and sprains.
16. Glanders and farcy. (Contagious, but not transmitted by heredity.)
17. Maladie du Coit. (Contagious, but not transmitted by heredity.)
18. Blindness due to injury.
19. Neurectomy wounds or scars indicating unsoundness.

LARYNGEAL HEMIPLEGIA

Roaring, whistling or thick wind. This is a disorder that varies in severity from slight difficulty in breathing with slight roar or whistling sound at the time of inspiration to a complete temporary cessation of respiration.

Difficult breathing may be caused by an obstruction in the air passages, such as a tumor or other enlargement, but with few exceptions roaring is caused by paralysis of the recurrent laryngeal nerve which supplies the motor nerves to the muscles of the larynx or the voice box. When these muscles are paralyzed they allow the cartilaginous rings to drop inward during inspiration, thereby partially or even wholly occluding the air passage at this point. In mild cases the symptoms are a slight roaring or whistling upon severe exertion, such as rapid driving or drawing heavy loads.

In more severe cases trotting the animal fifty to one hundred yards causes loud, stertorous breathing, and some cases may be so severe that the animal will drop to the ground after a gallop of one hundred yards. It is always well to make a thorough test of every horse's wind before buying or breeding. When it is impossible to give him a good, brisk trot, roaring may sometimes be detected by taking the animal by the bridle with one hand and while listening closely, suddenly make a pretense to strike the animal. If he is a roarer and if the person is a close observer, a harsh, snore-like sound may be heard as the animal suddenly inspires.

This being a disease showing a hereditary tendency to develop in the offspring, it should be sufficient reason for retiring a stallion from public service, and mares that are roarers should not be used for breeding purposes.

PULMONARY EMPHYSEMA

This condition is commonly spoken of as heaves, or broken wind. According to Doctor Law, this is a chronic affection of horses manifested by a hurried, wheezy breathing, greatly aggravated by close, muggy weather, a full stomach, certain kinds of diet, or by exercise; also by a small, weak, dry cough, often occurring in paroxysms and easily excited by a drink of cold water, exposure to cold air, or a fibrous quality of food, and lastly by a marked disorder of the digestive organs. The overloading of the stomach is a potent cause of the development of heaves. Everyday observations show that driving a horse on a full stomach often causes broken wind, and nothing will more surely aggravate it when it does exist. The same is true of the drinking of large quantities of water after feeding and just before going to work. Besides causes operating on the side of the digestive organs, others undoubtedly superinduce the disease, and among these, severe exertion and chronic bronchitis, resulting from eating dusty food, ought to hold prominent positions, but horses with ravenous appetites are, above all others, subject to the complaint. The animal though a heavy feeder, becomes unthrifty, hidebound, and emaciated; its feces is passed in an undigested state, and flatus (wind) is constantly passed from the bowels.

The question arises, "Why does over-loading the stomach affect the breathing?" It is because the lungs, stomach and certain other organs derive their nerve supply from the same nerve—the vagus—and certain disturbances of the stomach and intestines so impair the function of this nerve that the lungs are affected, at first functionally and afterward structurally. Investigators have found that there is a hereditary predisposition to the disease among the offspring of parents having heaves, perhaps explained by the fact that the conformation, such as shallow, narrow chests, large, pendulous abdomens, and the greedy appetite, are characteristics readily transmissible, and these working together in the offspring bring on the trouble.

Stallions affected with pulmonary emphysema should not be patronized by the breeder, and mares so affected should never be retained for breeding purposes.

ENTERALGIA, OR NEURALGIA OF INTESTINES

This is sometimes called "chronic colic" by some horsemen. It may be defined as a neuralgic pain of the bowels without any appreciable structural or functional change. In nervous animals, especially high-bred horses, there is undoubtedly an individual peculiarity which shows itself in a special susceptibility of the nervous system. In such animals exposure to cold or wet, or the presence of a local irritant which in an ordinary animal would have been without effect, results in a nervous pain. It is most common among breeding animals, which are kept under the best of care and are the least accustomed to exposure and neglect, being often highly fed and maintained in high spirits. Under this head should also be included pleasure horses, which are usually highly bred, highly fed, and irregularly exercised, this routine of life being continued from one generation to another, so it is always well in purchasing horses of either class to be on the lookout for this condition.

Another class of horses where one would naturally expect to find it would be among those horses that have become debilitated by overwork, underfeeding, exhaustive disease, etc. It often happens that a drink of cold water, an exposure to a cold draft, or a drenching rain, or even a heavy night dew, may seem to be the only appreciable cause of the trouble. In other cases a slight indigestion, or the ingestion of a substance which to another animal would have no effect, causes a violent nervous colic. The attack comes on suddenly, especially following a drink of cold water or exposure to cold. It is characterized by the suddenness of the onset, the extreme suffering, the reckless manner in which the animal throws himself down, the intermissions with complete absence of pain and absence of abdominal pain, tenderness, manipulations and friction seeming to give relief rather than discomfort. The writer has known of several instances illustrating the transmissibility of this susceptibility from parent to offspring. One of the most striking cases was that of a large pure-bred Percheron stallion. This horse would have one of these attacks with every sudden change of the weather or every exposure to cold blast, and it was never safe to allow him a cold drink fresh from the well. After this horse had been in the neighborhood for a few seasons, the neighborhood became notorious for its number of colicky horses. Perhaps fortunately for the community, one of these attacks killed the stallion.

More attention should be given to this condition in breeding animals, especially in those cases where these colicky attacks are due to a nervous susceptibility. This peculiar quality of the nervous mechanism of the parts involved seems to be a natural physical characteristic of the animal in question and as such may be transmitted to the offspring.

RHEUMATISM

One authority defines rheumatism as follows: "A constitutional inflammatory affection, tending to localization in the joints, muscles, tendons, fascia, skin, heart, and serous membranes." There is an acute form, but this is usually neglected until it has progressed into the chronic form, so the present discussion will be concerned mostly with the chronic form.

The most common forms are articular and muscular. In the chronic articular form there usually occurs permanent distention of the joint capsule generally accompanied by ulceration. Often bony enlargements and calcifications which involve the surrounding soft tissues are seen. The accompanying lameness often abates and returns under varying conditions, usually subsiding in warm stables and during clear, warm, sunny weather, but returning again with cold, damp weather, exposure to rain, sudden cooling after perspiration. Any one of these, followed by stiffness, lameness, and swelling of joints, may be identified as resulting from rheumatism. In many cases of chronic articular rheumatism the horse may come from the stable very stiff and lame, but after "warming up" for a mile or two these symptoms may disappear, if the disease is not of too severe a nature.

Muscular rheumatism is developed under conditions very similar to those causing articular rheumatism. The affected muscles are very tender to the touch, but usually no swelling or heat is noticed. The muscles are frequently relaxed and the suffering and stiffness varies with the weather changes to a great extent. When a horse shows extreme tenderness in the loins, stiffness and pain when walked, especially when turned around or backed, when there is no history of a slip, fall or injury, and these symptoms are more marked under conditions of cold, exposure or change of weather, it is usually a case of muscular rheumatism of the loins.

When the muscles of the croup are affected there is usually intense lameness, with more or less dragging of the hind limb and extreme sensitiveness of the skin over these muscles.

In the region of the shoulder and arm there is marked stiffness, shortness of stride, drooping of the head, tenderness of the skin and muscles. The use of the currycomb in all cases of muscular rheumatism over the affected parts causes a great deal of pain. In the shoulder it bears the same relation to weather changes as it does in other regions.

If the muscles of the neck are affected it is usually held rigid in one position, and the animal experiences quite a bit of difficulty in feeding from the ground. The above-mentioned regions are the ones most frequently affected by muscular rheumatism.

Rheumatism has been attributed to several general causes, the most commonly accepted are:

1. Cold and dampness. Rheumatism is more common in cold climates and in cold, exposed situations. It is very rare in the tropics. Sudden changes of weather to wet and cold always aggravate a case of rheumatism; often the case becomes worse before the weather change has become fully developed. While cold seems to be very potent in precipitating or aggravating an attack, it is not the sole or essential cause of rheumatism, for the great majority that are exposed to cold and dampness escape.

2. Another theory as to the cause of rheumatism is the neuro-pathic theory. "This theory is a neurotic cause (a nervous affection without lesion) and seems to explain the presence of a great many cases. Rheumatism often shows a tendency to bilateral symmetry, which points directly to nervous control. The frequent violence of pain with very little structural change would seem to indicate the same causative source, and the presence of free perspiration in severe attacks points in the same direction."

3. Theory of infection. Many claim it to be caused by an organism of ultra-microscopic size.

4. The last theory that I shall mention is that of heredity. While this has not been traced so definitely in horses as in men, still most authorities are agreed that heredity plays an important role in the development of rheumatism.

"Whether the cause be one of faulty metabolism resulting from cold or exposure, or from microbial invasion or neurotic causes, the heredity defensive powers of the animal cells are likely to be an important factor in the development." Hence the need for careful consideration of the use of the rheumatic animal for breeding purposes.

CHOREA, OR ST. VITUS DANCE

While this disease is not as common in horses as some other diseases, still it is frequently met with. It is a nervous disease characterized by a twitching or jerking of a muscle, but more often a group of muscles during waking hours. In horses the muscles affected are those of the head, neck, and fore limbs. Chronic cases are incurable.

The term "shivering" is sometimes used to designate that form of chorea which affects the posterior parts, especially the muscles of the gluteal and femoral region. It is best seen when the animal is backing or endeavoring to back, as in many cases it is utterly impossible for the animal to back at all. Trying to back causes the animal to become very much excited.

These nervous disorders are due to the lack of quality of the nervous mechanism, a physical defect which may be easily transmitted from parent to offspring.

STRINGHALT

Stringhalt is sometimes described under chorea, but I have chosen to give it a separate heading. It is a term applied to that particular involuntary movement of one or both hind limbs in which the affected member is flexed with excessive suddenness and lifted abnormally high, but it still is able to support weight in the usual manner. It may be seen in walking or in any of the faster gaits. It usually persists in spite of work. Whatever the exciting cause may be, it is certain that the action is involuntary. Then it must be caused by some mechanical action, as the contraction of facis of the tendons or the ligaments, or a reflex action originating either directly or indirectly in the spinal cord or through irritation of the peripheral nerves, which means that there is some kind of interference with the innervation of the part. Weather conditions seem to affect the disease, cold aggravating and warmth palliating somewhat. It is a pronounced unsoundness and is of a hereditary nature.

UNSOUNDNESS OF SIGHT

All defects of vision should be looked upon with suspicion by the breeder, as there is no other defect of the horse so readily transmitted from parent to offspring. In those instances of naturally defective eyesight there is often more than a hereditary predisposition, for in many cases it is congenital, the defect being directly transmitted and the foal born blind. In this defect the hereditary susceptibility is so strong and pernicious that intelligent horsemen should refuse to breed from either horse or mare that has suffered from defective eyesight. Many breeders realize the importance of soundness of sight and are refusing to use animals for breeding purposes with small or defective eyes of any character. In France in the government stud, not only is every unsound stallion rejected, but the service of the sound stallion is refused to any mare which has suffered from diseases of the eyes. Of the many defects of eyesight the most common are: Periodic ophthalmia, cataract, and amaurosis.

1. Periodic ophthalmia is also known as recurrent ophthalmia and moon blindness. It is an inflammatory condition affecting the interior of the eye, which is characterized by periods of blindness and apparent recovery for a time. This alternate blindness and recovery occurs again and again, but finally results in total blindness. Usually but one eye at a time is attacked. The eye becomes contracted and smaller than the sound one, and the upper lid, instead of being curved as in the normal eye, takes on a house-roof shape, showing an abrupt angle between the middle and inner third. While feed, care, climate, ill health and other conditions have something to do with aggravating this disease, the causative factor which concerns breeders most is heredity. There seems to be transmitted a special susceptibility which is especially potent in case both parents suffer from the disease or are even predisposed through the influence of their parents. Improbable as it may seem to some, it is a matter of record that there was a family of horses in southern France all of which went blind, showing the powerful hereditary influence of this disease.

In some instances the disease shows itself in alternate generations—the stallion which is an offspring of a blind parent may not show the defect but produce colts a larger per cent of which develop the disease.

2. Cataract is a morbid condition in which there is a change in the crystalline lens or its capsule, which diminishes its transparency. In the early stages nothing unusual may be noticed, but the horse suddenly acquires the habit of shying or starting back when approached. He also carries his ears in a very alert manner. These indications should arouse suspicion and the animal should be carefully examined by an expert. In more advanced cases of opacity of the lens there is less sensitiveness to light, the pupil is dilated, and the cataract is easily seen.

3. Amaurosis is a condition in which there is blindness with apparently no change in the structure of the eye. There is excessive dilation of the pupil, which is not affected by light or darkness. The face is dull and expressionless, while the ears are very alert and fixed. The nose is usually carried high and the head usually a little to one side. All horses should be examined closely for this condition, as it is easy to pass over in many cases.

TUMORS.

Tumors should be considered unsoundnesses, because even those that do not appear to interfere with the animal's usefulness may be malignant and metastatic and develop in another part of the body, where it might not only interfere with the usefulness of the animal but may also endanger the animal's life by mechanically interfering with some vital function, as the circulation, respiration, or enervation.

Another manner in which a tumor may affect the system is that within these growths all kinds of products of metabolism and decomposition are set free. These may be absorbed by the system and dangerous results ensue from their toxic influence.

A common form of tumor met with in horses is the melanotic tumor. This is a pigment tumor of a blackish gray color. It is found most often in gray or light-colored horses which as foals had light coats of hair. They may be found in brown horses. While they are usually found in the region of the root of the tail, secondary tumors develop along the lymph passages and are also found in the skin, causing wide-spread thickenings and swellings.

Melanotic tumors are transmissible or hereditary in nature.

BONE SPAVIN

Bone spavins are bony growths on the inner and lower aspect of the hock joint, which sometimes start from the ossifications of cartilaginous growths and sometimes from inflammation attacking the periosteum of the bones involved. In advanced cases the joint may be obliterated. By standing a short distance away and noting carefully the inner aspect of the hocks they can usually be discovered. Any suspicions can usually be confirmed by passing the hand over the joint where spavins usually occur. There is a kind of spavin not so easily detected. This is known as the occult spavin, which consists of an exostosis filling in between the bones that make up the hock joint. The hock appears to be normal, there being no external exostosis.

The spavin test is often used to diagnose spavin lameness. It consists of lifting the suspected limb and keeping the hock joint flexed for a minute or more and then suddenly starting the horse at a rapid trot. Lameness is usually quite marked. This test, however, requires considerable care in using, especially in old horses which may show considerable difficulty in movement after the limb has been kept flexed, even without the presence of spavin.

Causes: In no other disease can the causes be divided into hereditary and exciting causes so nicely. The hereditary cause consists of a predisposition partly dependent upon the conformation of the hock and partly upon the conformation of the other parts of the limb. While the complicated mechanism of the hock predisposes to disease, and especially to inflammation, this tendency is enormously increased by defective formation of the joint. Under the powerful action of the muscles of the hind limb, small cramped joints are more liable to suffer than those having well-developed, broad and ample articular surfaces. Defective development of the lower portion of the hock and the upper portion of the cannon bone, the condition described by horsemen as "tied-in" hocks, is particularly disastrous, while a distinct curvature (sickle-shaped hock) is almost as bad.

But these visible peculiarities of formation are not the sole causes of spavin—the intimate structure of the bones and ligaments may predispose to disease, as shown by the inheritance of spavin in young animals with hocks that appear to be perfectly formed and having no service to perform necessitating strain upon these joints.

The exciting causes are almost entirely due to mechanical injuries. Severe rapid work or drawing heavy loads often produce slight, frequently repeated strains, leading to irritation, inflammation, and resulting in the formation of a spavin. Single violent strains in wheeling around on the hind limbs or suddenly throwing a horse on his haunches may cause inflammation of the hock joint, followed by the development of a spavin.

In horses having small, clean joints it is easy to tell whether or not a spavin is present if the diseased condition has extended beyond the joint and an exostosis is present. Until these develop, diagnosis remains uncertain. The onset and style of lameness is of greatest value in diagnosing spavin. In most cases the limb is incompletely extended, the stride is shortened, and as soon as the hoof leaves the ground it is rapidly drawn forward, somewhat resembling stringhalt, and is best seen during the first few steps. A further consequence of the incomplete extension of the limb is an exaggerated hip action, which is seldom absent. The fetlock usually becomes more or less upright in consequence of the incomplete extension of the hock, causing the animal, when walking on uneven ground, to walk on the toe. In almost all well-developed cases the horse wears the toe of its shoe excessively.

As a rule, lameness develops gradually. At first it disappears after a few steps, and in many cases all that can be observed is a catch in the movement of the affected limb when turning around in the stall towards the lame side. The disappearance of lameness during movement, and its regular recurrence after rest, form one of the most important peculiarities of the disease. Occasionally lameness persists during movement and may become more severe.

The fact that spavin is so common in young horses is principally due to the incomplete development of their bones and ligaments and to the existing predisposition being brought into play only when the young animal is put to work.

In considering the question of predisposition we have to bear in mind that the conformation of other portions of the limb, and even of the body, too, exercise a considerable influence on the development of spavins. Experience shows that uprightness of the fetlock and stifle joints favor the disease. "Turned out" or "tied-in" hocks are particularly prone to spavins. Experience also shows that very powerful horses with broad pelvis and well-developed hind quarters are especially liable, the reason being the great strain which this formation throws on the hock joint. The more powerful the muscles of the hind quarters and the freer the movement, the greater is the strain on the hock, hence the imperative necessity of long, broad, strong hocks in our heavy draft horses.

The frequent occurrence of spavins in young horses which have not yet been put to heavy work points to a strong hereditary predisposition.

In breeding, especial attention should be paid to this disease, as the tendency to develop in the offspring seems to be more frequent than any other unsoundness except defects of vision and sidebones.

BOG SPAVIN

Bog spavin consists of puffy enlargements on the inner edge of the front of the hock towards the upper part, due to the distention of the capsular ligament by an increased amount of synovial fluid. This increased amount of synovial fluid results from irritation and inflammation caused by a strain. Bog spavins are most frequently found in very upright hocks, because this formation induces concussion and irritation. They may be found in hocks having almost any kind of a defect of conformation, because in them any over exertion is likely to be injuriously felt and is therefore very liable to cause irritation. As this improper conformation is the potent causative factor in the production of bog spavins, we may say that bog spavins are due to a hereditary influence and that there is a tendency for them to develop in the offspring whose parents have them, hence another reason for strong and sound hocks in our breeding animals.

THOROUGHPPINS

A thoroughpin is a soft swelling just behind and above the hock between the bones and tendons. It can be pushed through from one side to the other. The condition is that of an enlarged bursa due to irritation and inflammation. The causes are practically the same as those for bog spavin.

CURB

Looking at the hock joint from the side, the posterior portion should appear as a straight line, this straight line extending from the tuber calcis (point of the hock) to the fetlock. At the back of the bones of the hock extending downward from the point of the hock to the upper portion of the cannon bone is a strong ligament known as the calcaneo-cuboidal ligament. It really ties the hock bones together and extends to the cannon bone. As a result of a sprain this ligament often becomes inflamed and chronically thickened. This is the condition known as curb.

We may regard the limb from the point of the hock to the ground as a lever. The pull of the gastrocnemius muscle, which is attached to the point of the hock by what is commonly called the ham string, acting on the point of the hock tends to break this lever in two across the fulcrum, which may be considered at the lower end of the tibia (just at the upper joint of the hock). The part which must resist the breaking strain and hold the os calcis in line with the other bones is the calcaneo-cuboidal ligament. It is easy to see what strains this ligament is often subjected to, and understand why it so frequently becomes strained and enlarged.

Horses with "tied-in" hocks (the lower portion of the hock and upper portion of the cannon bone too small) and sickle hocks are especially predisposed to curb. This is explained by the fact that as the calcaneo-cuboidal ligament serves to unite the cannon bone to the os calcis, or long bone of the hock, and as the calcis acts as a lever to the end of which powerful muscles are attached, the more nearly the bend of the hock approaches a right angle the more powerful do these muscles act, and as a result the more likely is the calcaneo-cuboidal ligament to be strained. Also, the less the distance between the back and the front of the hock the more likely is the calcaneo-cuboidal ligament to be strained and inflammation follow when the limb is forcibly extended during movement; hence the necessity of hocks with plenty of distance from front to back. The external causes of curbs are severe exertion, violent attempts at extension at moments when the limb is flexed and sustaining weight at the same time, as in jumping or heavy up-hill draught work, suddenly throwing a horse upon his haunches; or it may occur as a complication of spavin, the inflammation extending to the calcaneo-cuboidal ligament, causing what is known as bony curb.

The gravity of the curb varies. Animals with weak "tied-in" hocks often become useless. From this discussion it will be seen that too much stress cannot be placed upon the importance of wide, strong, well-formed hocks. Most curbs result from only ordinary strain upon the hocks of poor conformation. This poor conformation is a physical character that is readily transmitted to the offspring, so it behooves each one to beware of the breeding animal with curbs or any defect of conformation of the hock.

SPLINTS

Splints are enlargements usually occurring on the inner side of the limb between the fetlock and knee, generally near the upper third of the region. They may occur on the outer aspect. They also frequently involve the knee joint. They are caused by inflammation of the periosteum, the ligaments between the large and small metacarpal bones, or of the bones themselves. They may develop on the inner, small metacarpal bone alone. The inflammation causes swelling and growth of bone.

The primary cause of this inflammation may be due to traumatic injury, as in striking the limb with the opposite foot, etc., but it is usually due to faulty conformation of the knee joint and in unequal distribution of pressure in the knee, which throws an excessive load on the inner small metacarpal bones, followed by inflammation of the periosteum. So we have two kinds of splints: those due to unequal distribution of pressure, and those due to mechanical injury.

Those due to unequal pressure are usually long in form, occurring on the small metacarpal bone, and often several occur one above the other. Those occurring from mechanical injury are usually round, distinct, and usually located further forward.

The importance of splints depends upon their location and the action and conformation of the horse. If they are large and are continually being bruised during movement, and irritation is continuous, more and larger exostoses will result and lameness is more or less constant. If they are high on the cannon bone and are irritated during action, the inflammation may involve the knee joint, and exostosis here may interfere with free movement of the joint. Splints involving the knee joint or located close to it are to be regarded as serious defects, and horses showing splints in these locations usually show lameness at every attempt to work.

Splint lameness is best seen on hard ground and at a rapid pace. It increases with prolonged exercise.

Inasmuch as defective conformation is usually the cause of splints, the inheritance of a predisposition to them can readily be seen. Some authorities say that in many cases the exostosis can be traced to no other cause than a hereditary predisposition to throw out ossific material, and on such animals we usually find spavins and other exostoses concurrently with splints.

RINGBONES

Ringbones are exostoses or bony enlargements in the region of the coronary joint. They may occur on any of the four feet. Some authorities classify ringbones under four heads:

1. Articular, in which the articular cartilage between the two bones forming the coronary joint is involved and destroyed.

2. Periarticular, in which the exostosis occurs principally at the point of insertion of the ligaments holding the bones of this joint in position. This is the most common form met with.

3. Rachitic ringbone, found in young animals. They consist of an abnormal growth of the ends of the two bones forming the coronary joint. They are often seen.

4. Traumatic ringbone.—This class includes all enlargements in the region of the coronary joint, due to traumatic injury of any sort involving the periosteum, such as cuts, treads, acute inflammatory processes in nearby parts, etc.

Ringbones are often spoken of as high and low ringbones, according to their location. They are most common in animals with long, weak pasterns, there being greater strain on the ligaments with this kind of conformation. They are also found on limbs having short, upright pasterns, due to the great concussion and consequent irritation and inflammation. The anatomical structure of the coronet joint favors strain of the ligaments and unequal distribution of weight over the articular surface.

The external causes are sprains and all influences favoring sprain, such as defective conformation of the limb, improper shoeing, and using an animal at a rapid pace on rough ground. When these sprains occur, nature tries to repair. Inflammation and exudation occur. This exudate ossifies, resulting in an oxostosis which we call a ringbone. Ringbones are characterized by a chronic enlargement in the region of the coronary joint. This enlargement varies in location and in size. They may be on one side of the joint or on the front aspect. Lameness is almost always present. It occurs when weight is placed on the limb and may vary from only slight to very marked lameness. The lameness is usually best seen when the animal turns in short circles toward the diseased side. Often the joint is encylosed, or grown together, and by picking up the foot this condition may be seen by trying to rotate or flex the foot. In the early stages when the enlargement is not well marked it is very difficult to diagnose ringbone and it may pass unnoticed.

Turning the toe in or out causes unequal distribution of weight in the joint, and strain of the ligaments, and is a frequent predisposing cause of ringbone. One very seldom finds ringbones on pasterns of good conformation unless it is the result of some extraordinary exciting cause. The great causative factor in the formation of ringbones is improper conformation of the pastern, and this conformation being transmitted to the offspring predisposes it to the development of ringbones. Thus we see that in the case of ringbones there is a hereditary predisposition, and animals with ringbones should be condemned for breeding purposes.

SIDEBONE

In the foot of the horse on either side towards the back part, just inside the hoof and projecting above it, are two cartilaginous wings. By pressing the thumb and forefinger around the quarter of the foot these may be felt as pliable prominences. If ossification has taken place they are hard and unyielding. When the foot is placed on the ground, these cartilaginous wings allow the foot to expand, thereby breaking some of the concussion. When the foot is taken from the ground they serve to restore the foot to its original position. Often inflammation for some cause or other affects these cartilages and they begin to ossify. As they begin to ossify, the existing inflammation is aggravated and well-marked lameness results. Sometimes the entire cartilage does not ossify and many times there is no visible enlargement.

Sidebones are found principally in heavy horses, and the fore feet suffer most frequently. It is said that the outer cartilage is more often affected than the inner one. Sidebones produce clumsy, constrained action and often lameness. Rapid work on hard roads, allowing the hoof to dry out, and the use of high calkins aggravates the trouble.

The most important cause is a hereditary predisposition. Besides this we must consider excessive concussion and irritation, rapid driving on hard roads, improper shoeing and traumatic injury, such as cuts, bruises, treads, etc. As the predisposition to develop sidebones is transmitted to the offspring from sire or dam, animals having sidebones should not be retained for breeding purposes.

NAVICULAR DISEASE

Navicular disease may be defined as a condition of chronic inflammation in the posterior region of the coffin joint, in which the navicular bone, the perforans tendon which passes over the navicular bone, and the bursa, or sheath, are affected.

Navicular disease in all its stages constitutes an unsoundness, and one cannot be too careful in his examinations for soundness not to overlook it in the early stages. It occurs most frequently in well-bred horses, especially those with narrow feet, short hoofs, short, upright pasterns, and pounding action. In riding and carriage horses the exciting cause may be sudden reining in, jumping, continued sharp trotting, galloping, and occasionally slipping.

The almost constant occurrence of the disease in the front feet is mostly due to the greater weight borne by the front feet and to the violent strains thrown on the flexor tendons during rapid movement over hard ground or under weight of a rider. Under these conditions the navicular bone is exposed to severe pressure on the one side from the coronet bone, on the other from the flexor tendon. The disease is seldom, if ever, caused by bruises from below. Faulty shoeing is sometimes a cause of navicular disease, even in horses whose feet have an almost perfect conformation.

The causes having operated, inflammation becomes established in connection with the cancellated or spongy structure of the navicular bone; the bone becomes weakened and may fracture easily under pressure of the flexor tendon. The inflammatory process may involve the cartilage over which the tendon glides, resulting in its destruction. The tendon becomes involved more or less, the inflammation causing adhesion to take place.

The disease always affects the lower portion of the bone. As the disease develops very slowly, the beginning is usually overlooked and attention only directed to the parts after pain and lameness are present. Sometimes, while being driven or ridden, before any lameness has appeared, the animal suddenly stumbles and almost falls even on level roads where nothing can be discovered to account for his actions. A few days later a little inflammation may be noticed in the foot, and after some treatment it may disappear, but soon the same symptoms return more severe than before. This may continue for weeks, until finally a well-marked case of navicular disease has developed.

In other instances, in the early stages, on being brought out of the stable a slight lameness is observed which disappears with exercise, the impediment of gait usually ceasing to be noticed after the animal has been traveled a short distance, this being an indication which points to joint disease.

In case both feet are affected the animal on being allowed to rest may be noticed to point first one, then the other foot, and when coming out of the stable is very tender. His action is stiff and short, but after being warmed up these symptoms decrease or disappear entirely. Usually, and especially in cases where only one foot is affected, there is a trophy or shrinking of the inside quarter and contraction of the heel.

In advanced cases the animal gradually falls off in flesh; on moving he sweats and soon becomes exhausted, his whole manner showing that he is suffering the most agonizing pain. This disease is often confused with other diseases of the hoof. Errors are easy unless plenty of time is given to the examination, and diagnosis sometimes proves difficult even to the most practiced.

The development of navicular disease depends largely on peculiarities of conformation, hence the hereditary character of the disease. Some authorities claim a direct tendency to navicular disease aside from defects of conformation. The breeding animal having navicular disease should have neither the approval nor the patronage of any thoughtful breeder.

SANDCRACK OR QUARTER CRACK

This is a crack or fissure in the wall of the hoof. It may occur in any part of the wall and is specifically named according to the location of the crack.

Some of the exciting causes are: Improper shoeing; irregular exercise; hard, dry floors.

Sandcracks are permanent unsoundnesses because of the fact that being more or less constitutional they are apt to recur. Certain strains and breeds of horses are predisposed to the trouble, those having thin hoofs and brittle hoofs being especially liable.

The hereditary nature of the trouble lies in the transmission of peculiar conformation and quality of hoof, in which the disease readily develops when the exciting causes are present.

CRYPTORCHIDISM

A male animal having both testicles retained in the abdominal cavity or inguinal canal is known as a cryptorchid. If but one testicle has descended he is known as a monorchid. The term ridgling has been applied to either of these conditions.

For whatever purpose a cryptorchid or monorchid may be used, he is an unsound animal. If it be desired to use him for work or for pleasure he is an undesirable animal, at times unmanageable, and even dangerous, and to have him operated upon is expensive and there is more or less risk of losing him in the operation.

Experience and observation have shown that there is a strong tendency for this condition of cryptorchidism to be reproduced in the male offspring from a sire of this kind.

PARROT JAWED

This is a condition in which the upper jaw projects beyond the lower jaw. It may be so pronounced as to prevent the horse from grazing or eating corn from the ear. The lower teeth may become long enough to irritate the roof of the mouth. These conditions interfere with the natural usefulness of the animal and for this reason, even though it is a fault of conformation, it is classed as an unsoundness. It shows a strong tendency to be transmitted from parent to offspring.

CRIBBING

This is also known as crib biting and stump sucking. The horse bites or pulls on some fixed object, at the same time swallowing wind. This interferes with digestion, sometimes causing colic and flatulency, and by impairing digestion makes the animal a hard keeper. The incisor teeth of the chronic cribber usually tell the story, as the outer edges are broken or worn off. Its hereditary tendency has often been proven.

WEAVING

Weaving is an unsoundness that develops from habit. The animal gets into the habit of swaying back and forth, and this may develop into a more or less serious nervous disorder. The animal will show a nervous excitability in the presence of people and especially if the attendant is a little harsh. The constant weaving causes a great loss of energy that should be stored for useful purposes. This is another disorder showing a hereditary tendency to develop in the offspring, and animals thus affected should never be used for breeding purposes.

Non-Hereditary Permanent Unsoundnesses

POLL EVIL

Just back of the occipital crest (the prominent bony ridge between the ears) there is attached the ligamentum nuchal, a large ligament extending back as far as the withers, which assists muscles in suspending the head, and when the head is lowered it also aids in elevating the head again.

At the summit of the second vertebra of the neck over which the ligament passes there is a mucous bursa. This bursa is often injured by blows, bumps, heavy halters, etc., which causes inflammation to set in. This results in a filling up of the bursa with fluid. It causes a great deal of pain and the animal usually carries his head extended, lowered, and fixed. This stage is usually followed by infectious inflammation, with abscess formation, which spreads to the surrounding connective tissue, muscles and even involving the bones and ligaments, often burrowing far down into the muscles of the neck and throat. Sometimes a continuous track extends from the head to the shoulder. After perforating the skin it discharges a nasty, stinking pus.

Poll evil is always considered an unsoundness. It may be healed over and to all external appearances it looks to be perfectly sound, but unless it has had careful and skilful treatment it is liable to break out again, and in case it has been perfectly healed that region is very sensitive, easily irritated, and inflammation may be readily started again.

FISTULA WITHERS

This is an inflammatory condition of the withers very similar in nature and causes to poll evil. It shows at first a painful swelling, followed by suppuration and discharge of pus. If the condition becomes chronic the connective tissue, muscles and bones become involved. It is often caused by rolling on a stone or from injury by the collar or saddle and by being struck, or by running into posts, trees, gates, etc.

SWEENEY, OR SHOULDER SLIP

This condition is often spoken of as paralysis of the supra-scapular nerve. It is a condition caused by paralysis of the supra-scapular nerve, which supplies the principal muscles of the outer aspect of the shoulder. This paralysis is usually caused by some backward movement of the shoulder which causes a stretching or breaking of the nerve, such as running into a post, tree, etc., jerks during heavy work, and poorly fitting collars.

In the chronic form the shoulder muscles become shrunken; in moving, the limbs swing somewhat outward; there is lameness when the weight is placed on the limb and a more or less jerking of the shoulder outward when the weight falls upon the affected limb. It is an unsoundness due to external injury.

FRACTURES OF THE PELVIS

There are several forms of pelvic fracture due to slips, falls, collisions, or sudden excessive strain upon the pelvis. Perhaps the commonest form is the one involving the external angle of the ilium, commonly called "knock down" hip. The seriousness of this condition depends upon the extent of the fracture. Sometimes only a small portion of the bone is broken, but it is often severe enough to cause an incurable lameness; sometimes it is so pronounced as to prevent the animal from moving faster than a slow walk. In these cases there is a flatness at the hip joint, the stifle moves inward, and there is an absence of crepitation as the portion of the bone broken off is drawn away from the fixed portion by the attached muscles. Fractures of the girdle of the pelvis are more serious.

LUXATION OF THE PATELLA, OR "STIFLE"

In this condition the patella passes over the trochlea or pulley-like process of the stifle joint and fails to return to its normal position. It is fixed in this position by its lower border lying against the upper margin of the inner lip of the above-mentioned trochlea. There are two principal causes for this condition:

1. Flattening of the articular surface of the internal lip of the trochlea, combined with excessive tension of the lateral ligaments.
2. Fixation of the lower surface of the patella on the upper border of the inner lip of the trochlea.

The first condition is characterized by a remittent form of lameness. Any interference with the movement of the patella produces lameness, but the degree varies greatly. Fixation of the patella on the upper portion of the trochlea is followed by extension of all the joints of the limb, and the animal is unable to flex them. The limb is stiffly directed backward and cannot be advanced.

Luxation of the patella may be distinguished by lameness when the leg is carried and by excessive extension of all joints. Replacement is usually not attended with much difficulty, but a repetition of the trouble is liable to occur at almost any time.

THICKENED TENDONS

This condition is usually met with in horses having long, weak fetlocks, low heels and long toes, or in horses "tied in" below the knees. It results from strain of the flexor tendons or sometimes of the suspensory or check ligaments. With the thickening of the tendons generally there is a contraction causing a mechanical lameness.

CHRONIC LAMENESS

There are many cases of chronic lameness in which the exact cause and location is not known, but it is safe to say that this lameness is caused by a strain or bruise, or by some mechanical interference with freedom of movement. All cases of chronic lameness are unsoundnesses.

CHRONIC FOUNDER

This is a condition following unfavorable cases of acute lamenitis, or founder, characterized by a change of structure of the foot consisting principally of a separation of the sensitive laminæ from the insensitive laminæ of the hoof. The sole descends and loses its normal concave shape, becoming convex and weak. The anterior portion of the hoof often becomes loose and bulges out and a large mass of horn-like growth may develop at the toe. Horses suffering from chronic founder are subject to recurrence of the acute form. It occurs most often in horses with flat, weak feet.

QUITTOR

Quittor is characterized by a chronic purulent inflammation of the lateral cartilages and surrounding structures, followed by death of tissues and the formation of cavities. It is generally caused by bruising with the calks of the opposite foot or by other traumatic injury. It may also develop from suppurating corns or other suppurations in the foot which cannot escape, burrows in all directions, and finally reaches the coronet and escapes.

At first there is lameness and a hard swelling is noticed, later this softens and discharges. There may be as many as a half dozen or more openings around the coronary band discharging at the same time.

Quittor is an unsoundness in all its stages. It usually results in an enlarged or deformed foot, chronic lameness, or may even prove fatal.

CONTRACTED HEELS

This condition is most often seen in flat feet or those having long toes and low heels. The exciting causes are:

1. Poor shoeing, especially where the frog and bars are excessively pared.
2. Excessive dryness.
3. Lack of exercise.

In case of contracted heels the diseased foot is placed a little forward with the fetlock upright. "The gait is low, shuffling and uncertain, the animal stumbles frequently, and apparently without cause." The hoof becomes long and narrow and the sole concave. Corns almost always accompany contracted heels in flat feet, and sidebones usually develop. It is an unsoundness that should not be overlooked.

COCKED ANKLES

The seriousness of this condition depends upon the causes, which may be of a great variety. Some of the more common causes are injured tendons, feet, or ankles. Another cause is simply habit. It is an unsightly condition and lessens the market value of the animal and, depending upon the cause, may interfere with the usefulness of the animal. It is usually a permanent condition.

GREASE

This is known technically as Dermatitis Chronica Verrucosa. It is a chronic and progressive inflammation affecting the skin in the region of the fetlock, characterized by a profuse secretion of a fatty, foul-smelling, grayish nature. It is most common in heavy, lymphatic horses and occurs most frequently in the hind feet, especially in horses having hairy legs. It is usually caused by wet, cold or other irritation, followed by infection.

In the acute form there is itching, tenderness, swelling and heat of the affected part. In the more severe cases the discharge becomes greenish or blackish and portions of the skin may slough off, or there may be an extensive tissue formation—forming raw, tumor-like masses sometimes called grapes. The limb may become enlarged and the condition become serious enough to result in septicæmia. Recovery is very uncertain, and in practically all cases enlargements and thickenings result from the disease.

SCRATCHES

This condition is also known as cracked heels or gangrenous dermatitis. It is characterized by an inflammatory condition of the skin without a free secretion, affecting the heels or posterior part of the pastern. It appears suddenly, with swelling and lameness. The limb increases in size, and in a few days the affected portion of the skin may scale off. Sometimes this inflammation may extend downwards involving the lateral cartilages, or it may be severe enough to involve the tendon sheaths, resulting in septicæmia pyaemia or even death.

It is usually caused by cold or other irritation, accompanied by infection. Cases that have advanced very far usually leave swollen legs, with a susceptibility to a recurrence of the disease.

SUPPURATING CORNS

Any kind of a corn is an unsoundness, but most forms might be classed as temporary unsoundness; when any corn develops into the suppurative form it should be classed as a permanent unsoundness.

Suppurative corns is a term applied to a diseased condition of the sensitive laminæ of the quarters, the sensitive bars or the sensitive sole caused by a bruise resulting in bleeding, infection and suppuration, with little or no hope of recovery. They occur most frequently in the front feet, due to the greater weight borne by them and the greater concussion during rapid movement. They are most common in animals having flat feet or abnormally narrow feet and defective conformation of the limbs changing the normal weight bearing center of the foot. They are also found in feet with wide, flat hoofs.

The principal causes are bruising the foot, faulty shoeing, and allowing the shoes to remain on too long.

SEVERE CUTS, BRUISES AND SPRAINS

Often an animal is cut in a joint and in healing a large exostosis is formed leaving an unsightly scar and stiffness of the joint, or an injury may be so situated as to interfere with normal respiration, circulation, etc. Any injury of this kind is a decided unsoundness. The same may be said of any sprain or bruise, which may leave a condition that interferes with the natural usefulness of the animal.

GLANDERS AND FARCY

Glanders is an incurable, infectious, contagious disease, caused by a specific organism—the bacillus “mallei.” This disease is found most frequently in horses and mules, but it is communicable to man and all domestic animals except the bovine races, chicken, and usually swine. There are three forms of glanders, named according to the seat of infection:

1. Nasal glanders, where the nasal passages and submaxillary lymph glands show the principal lesions.
2. Pulmonary glanders, when the lungs and lymphatics of the chest are affected.
3. Cutaneous glanders, when the skin and subcutaneous lymph glands are affected. The last form is usually spoken of as farcy. Generally when the term glanders alone is used it refers to the nasal form.

Each of the forms mentioned may be acute or chronic in character. Glanders shows no characteristic symptoms in the early stages, but in case of nasal glanders usually there is a discharge. Still, this is not in itself diagnostic, as many diseases cause a discharge from the nasal passages, but if the discharge be of a yellowish, purulent tint or greenish or greyish and is especially viscid or sticky, causing the hairs around the nostrils to be sticky and matted together, it should be looked upon with suspicion. Especially should these indications be looked upon with suspicion if the intermaxillary lymph glands between the rami of the lower jaw are enlarged and feel like a collection of small, hard, pea-like masses. This enlargement is not hot or tender, nor does it usually ulcerate.

In farcy or cutaneous glanders the lymphatics on the inner side of the legs are swollen and feel like a cord, and the lymph glands along these lymph passages show up as small, round enlargements. Some of these soften, ulcerate, and discharge sticky and more or less bloody liquids.

In cases where symptoms similar to the above described appear, a graduate veterinarian should be called at once and a thorough examination made, including the mallein test, for this disease is transmitted to other animals and to man and is incurable.

DOURINE, MALADIE DU COIT, OR EQUINE SYPHILIS

Dourine is a contagious disease found in horses transmitted by copulation and shows specific lesions in the generative organs and nervous system, such as swellings, hard, syphilitic ulcers and scars, profound mental incapacity and paralysis. It is somewhat similar to syphilis in man.

The disease is caused by a specific organism—Trypanosoma Equiperdum. It first appeared in the United States in 1882 at Wapella, Ill., in a stallion imported from France, and spread to a large number of breeding animals. By strict quarantine of the diseased animals it was mostly stamped out, but some exposed animals got away from the quarantined district and a few cases have since been found in other parts of the United States. The last report of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry shows that not a single case was discovered during the past year. While we are quite free from the disease, it is quite prevalent in some of the European countries, and there is still a possibility of the infection getting past the quarantine of imported animals and an outbreak starting in this country from the importation of breeding animals. Animals showing the disease are condemned and killed.

BLINDNESS DUE TO INJURY

A blind horse is always an unsound horse, whether he be blind in one or both eyes. If an animal is known positively to be blind from injury, one need not hesitate to use such an animal for breeding purposes, as these acquired unsoundnesses are not transmitted to the offspring. The great trouble is that all blind horses are usually claimed to be so from injury, and while there are so many pernicious eye diseases, that are readily transmitted from parent to offspring, it is best to be on the safe side and not patronize or use a breeding animal with any kind of a defect of vision.

NEURECTOMY WOUNDS OR SCARS INDICATING UNSOUNDNESSES

Neurectomy is the term applied to the process of severing a nerve to relieve sensation from a part farther away from the brain than the point of operation. It is often used to overcome lameness in the legs or feet. The condition or unsoundness still remains, but the sensation of pain is absent. Cutting of the nerve often interferes with the nutrition of the part, and serious conditions may result, so whenever it is evident that an animal has been nerved it should be classed as unsound.

FAULTS OF CONFORMATION

There are many faults of conformation that should be carefully and rigidly discriminated against by breeders, as they are by the market men. These defects of conformation are natural characteristics. They may be characteristic of a family or of a strain, and are almost sure to develop in the offspring. Some of the more common faults of conformation that might be mentioned are: Curby hocks, sickle hock, cow hock, small defective eyes, tied in below the hock or knee, calf knee, coon foot, nigger heel, pigeon toe, low back, soft hocks, heavy polls, thick neck and throat, flat shoulders, knock knees, excessively long pasterns, excessively short or flat feet, high heels, weak loins, steep rump, etc.

In each and every condition mentioned the animal having this conformation is liable to develop some condition which may interfere with his natural usefulness, and as such these defects should be looked upon as conditions of serious unsoundnesses rather than excused by the misleading classification, "faulty conformation." Many of them are more serious than some of the recognized unsoundnesses, and are even more certain to be transmitted from parent to offspring.

The Unsound Horse as a Market Animal

In both the large and small markets there is a crying demand for sound horses. They always sell at premium, and if the producer would make the most of his opportunities, and wishes to make the largest profits from the breeding of horses for the market, it is up to him to produce the kind that the markets are demanding.

Unsoundnesses are greatly discriminated against on the market. Many instances might be cited, but let one suffice for illustration. Recently the writer noticed a pair of greys in one of the large horse markets, five and six years of age, that sold at auction for $480. They were sold as serviceably sound, and in a few days were returned because they showed a slight thickness of wind, probably the result of distemper while they were colts. After they were returned these horses could have been bought for $350, probably for less, just because of this slight unsoundness—a depreciation in value of practically twenty-seven per cent. Unsoundness causes a depreciation of from twenty-five to seventy-five per cent in the market value of an animal, depending upon the class to which he belongs and the quality of the horse, aside from the unsoundness present.

It costs just as much to raise an unsound as a sound horse, and it behooves the breeder to put forth an earnest effort to eradicate these unsoundnesses which are the cause of such a great loss of money to the horse industry.

The Unsound Horse as a Breeding Animal

The proposition that presents itself most forcibly for our consideration in the question of unsoundness in breeding animals is the influence of heredity in our breeding operations. One of the most successful of our American breeders in a recent communication says: "Without doubt, if farmers and breeders would not patronize or breed curby-legged stallions or curby-legged mares, in time these defects would be overcome and eradicated, as I know from actual experience that straight-legged horses will produce straight-legged horses and crooked-legged will produce crooked-legged ones, and crooked legs develop curb." The same principle is true and equally applicable to the great string of hereditary unsoundnesses.

Imported Arab Horse "Musoon"

Sire of Lady Dilham, three times Champion Harness Mare of the National Horse Show

Dr. F. C. Grenside in an article upon this subject says in part: "The question of hereditary unsoundness in all its aspects is by no means an open book to the horse breeder, and it is one well worth studying by him, if as thorough a knowledge as is possible of this subject will tend to lessen the percentage of unsound stock produced. Of the various causes which tend to make horse breeding disappointing and unprofitable, this is one of the important ones, if not the most important. Literally it is not so much the inheritance of the disease itself that we fear, but it is the tendency to development of this disease. Comparatively few foals are dropped with unsoundnesses that impair their value ultimately, but there are many that are born with predisposition to the development of unsoundnesses.

"The study of this subject, then, resolves itself into a consideration of what constitutes the predisposing causes of unsoundness. They may be divided into several heads, viz.: defective formation, defective quality, and insufficient quantity of tissue and temperament. Within certain limits the practiced eye of the observant horseman can determine in sire or dam the existence of these defects that are transmissible to the offspring and predispose it to the development of unsoundness. But no matter how capable and careful a breeder is he will produce a certain percentage of unsound stock due to heredity, but with care it can be reduced to a small one. Many breeders sire from convenience, or for some quality that the sire possesses, such as speed, action, style or disposition, knowing that they are taking a chance of perpetuating some tendency to unsoundness that he possesses. Favorite mares are also bred with a disregard to the well-established principle that like begets like, even when they are victims to hereditary unsoundness, or a strong predisposition to it. The successful breeder must divest himself of all sentiment and be capable of appreciating all defects which constitute predisposition to unsoundness." As has been noted before, the great majority of the prevailing unsoundnesses are due to improper conformation of some sort. These faulty conformations are physical characters, a part of the animal as he developed from the germinal cell, and as such they may be transmitted to their offspring.

An Important Feeding Test

Nearly 1000 Horses at Fort Riley Receiving 18 Ration Combinations

Every horse breeder, and indeed every farmer in the country, will be interested in the horse-feeding experiment at Fort Riley conducted by the Experiment Station of the Kansas State Agricultural College and the Sixth Field Artillery of the United States Army with the sanction of the War Department. It is, by all means, the most extensive investigation into the feeding of horses ever undertaken in America. Nine hundred and thirty-seven artillery horses, with eighteen combinations of feeds, are involved. The results cannot fail to be of incalculable value.

No more ideal situation for such an important experiment could be desired. Fort Riley, with its excellent equipment, is only a few miles from the Agricultural College, where men competent to advise and direct the investigation eagerly took advantage of the opportunity when it was offered.

The work of the artillery horses is fairly uniform. The horses do not vary materially in size or quality, so that large numbers of them may be used in testing a variety of combinations of feeds without danger of individual influences.

A careful and necessarily accurate account is kept of all the feed eaten; the condition of every animal from time to time and the physical effect of the several feeds upon the horses. Another very interesting feature of the experiment is the fact that it is conducted under practicable conditions which anyone might create upon a farm or in a large transfer or livery barn. All the data is tabulated. The results and conclusions will be published in bulletin form by the Experiment Station at the College at the end of the tests. The rations used with eighteen lots of horses were:

Throughout the United States, and the world for that matter, far less experimental work has been conducted with horses than with any other class of domestic animals. Less is known of the influence of different feeds upon horses, different combinations of feeds suitable for horses; and less attention has been given to the study of the best methods of feeding and maintaining horses. In this section of the country the common roughage for horses for many years has been prairie hay. Thousands of acres of native grass in this State have been broken up or turned into pastures. From every indication it is apparent that there soon will be a shortage of this class of rough feed. Therefore, a problem that will then confront the Kansas horse breeder will be a cheap and satisfactory supply of rough feed. Oats that have been the staple grain for horses for many years, and considered by some the only grain fit to feed a horse, seems to be deteriorating in grade or feeding value in many parts of the United States. Unless some remedy is found for this condition, some other grain soon must take the place of oats in the ration for horses. Besides this, in many localities oats cannot be produced profitably, prices in these localities prohibit their use as a horse feed. Here, then, is another problem—a cheap and satisfactory grain ration where the use of oats is out of the question.

So the object of this experiment is: first, to make a direct comparison of the value of the various hays for horse feeding, including prairie hay, timothy, alfalfa, and small grain hay.

Second, to find, if possible, a grain or mixture of grains that will largely take the place of oats for horse feeding and give equal results, but be more economical.

Third, to make a careful study of the influence of various grains and various mixtures of grains upon the general condition of the animals tested.

It is hoped the experiments may be of some practicable value to the army in spreading a knowledge of substitute values of feeds which would apply in case of a campaign when regular supplies were not available or were not regularly furnished, and that they may be of practicable value, also, to the Kansas horse breeder or farmer in assisting him to work out a ration composed of the feeds available in his particular locality that will be more economical and at the same time more satisfactory than those he is using at present.
