How To Grow Peonies

The Peony is one of the easiest flowers to grow that I know of. It is exempt from insect pests, as hardy as any plant that grows, and after the first year does not need any mulching or protection of any kind. It is sometimes well to cover with some coarse straw or other material the first winter to keep the roots from "freezing out" of the ground. This will not be necessary after the first winter as the will have become established so there will be no danger of them "freezing out."

You leave them in the ground all winter and do not dig until you want to transplant them somewhere else. During the summer keep the ground well worked around them and manure with bone meal, ashes or rotten barnyard manure but do not put too close to the plant; the best way is to work it well into the soil a little distance from the plant. Early fall is a good time to do this manuring.

Any good garden soil is good for Peonies but do not plant in low, wet soil or in light, sandy soil, and do not use any fresh manure near the plant when setting, or for that matter at any time.

In planting see that the eyes are about two inches below the level of the surface of the ground. Remember, too deep planting is one of the main causes of shy blooming. And do not expect a full crop of blooms the first year. If properly planted and cared for you will have some flowers the first year but you must give the plants time to make new roots and become established before you can expect a normal crop of flowers. And another thing to remember: always leave at least two or three leaves on the stalk when you cut the bloom. This helps the plant store up strength to produce another crop.

Visit Our Peony Fields

I will be glad to have you visit our Peony fields when in bloom or at any other time when convenient for you to do so. I am now growing over ten acres of this wonderful flower and I believe you will agree with me that I have a very representative collection and nearly all of them are the higher rated ones.

If you are interested in growing Peonies for cut-flowers I will be glad to assist you in any way that I can and will quote special prices on large lots.

There is money in growing Peonies for cut-flowers. I have made over $1,500 from one acre in one year from cut-flowers alone.

These clumps will give you a year's advantage over the division.

I will please you or your money back and will appreciate a trial order from you so you may see the quality of my roots.

I am so sure that my stock will please you that if I can only induce you to give me a trial order, I believe I will get a good share of your future orders. I realize there is no advertisement like a satisfied customer. I am looking for customers and shall try hard to satisfy you.
