IN AMERICA

Several years ago the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture imported from Japan a number of new varieties of hardy evergreen Azaleas. From these the most outstanding were selected. Towson Nurseries was selected as one of the original growers to propagate them. All are singularly beautiful in form of flower, foliage, and habit of growth, and most of them bloom after the well known varieties such as Azalea amoena and Azalea hino-degiri have finished blooming. These are a rare and outstanding feature of Towson's Azalea Exhibition. They prolong the blooming season of the Azalea family and add exquisite color to the garden.
