DWARF DAHLIAS

A Germain

SPECIAL FIRST TIME OFFER

These little charmers have made a host of friends in our growing fields this past season, and added production now makes them available to the general public for the first time. The plants seldom grow over 18" high, and produce dozens and dozens of gay, bright daisy-like flowers ideal for cutting as well as for border effects. They begin to bloom about 60 days after planting and will continue until late fall or frost, as long as the old dead flowers are kept cut from the plant.

CUTFLOWER DAHLIAS

The more you cut them
The more they bloom!

The collection offered here includes some of the best cutflower varieties ever introduced. Each plant will produce up to several hundred blooms each season, leaving plenty of color in the garden even after picking a big bouquet for the house! Remember to cut them in the cool of the day, leaving them in water over night, or for a period of not less than four hours before arranging. Also, be sure to cut any dahlia when it is fully mature. If cut too young they will droop almost immediately, and if cut too old they will shed their petals almost immediately. Don't miss this opportunity to have armloads of cutflowers from early summer until frost.
