Concord & Niagara

Best Known & Most Widely Grown Grapes on the American Continent

CONCORD represents the dominant type of our native species. In New York State approximately seventy-five per cent of all the grapes grown are Concord. This fine old grape needs no introduction or description. Every one knows and prizes it. It has always been a favorite and always will be. Many newer varieties have been introduced and their merits acclaimed from the housetops, but Concord still holds the place of honor. It has been well tried and never found wanting. Its elasticity of constitution adapts itself to all soils and conditions and enables it to yield a large crop year after year.

NIAGARA is the leading American green grape, holding the rank among green grapes that Concord holds among the black varieties. In vigor and productiveness they are unsurpassed by any others. In size of bunch and berry, Niagara will average fully up to Concord and like it has that peculiar musky flavor so appealing to most tastes and which is retained a long time after being gathered; in fact, it seems to improve with age and the aroma from a dish of Niagaras will fill a room with its appetizing odor and is equal to a vase of tea roses. Ripens with Concord and like it is a leading market variety and most profitable sort of its color.

Excellent Grapes of Known Worth

HE Grape is as old as the creation of man and in all probability much older. The oldest accounts of civilization describe it and it has always had first place among fruits.

It is found in all parts of the world, in all soils and all climates. Its health-giving qualities as a fruit and as a beverage are pre-eminent and universally extolled. It is the one subject on which there is no divergence of opinion. They may be grown on a fence or side of a building and other places where it would be impossible to grow a tree, and their yield of luscious fruit is prodigious. No yard is too small to afford space for two or more vines and no other such trifling investment will yield such splendid returns.

BRIGHTON

This is one of the leading red grapes, noted for its high quality, good appearance, large size of bunch and berry, certainty of ripening, being earlier than Concord, vigorous growth, productiveness, adaptability to various soils and ability to withstand disease. It is not recommended for shipping, but for home use it has no superior.

MOORE'S EARLY

The leading black grape of its season and may be described as an Early Concord, as it is much like this famous variety in every way except it is from two to three weeks earlier. To get best results, should have a rich, loose, well drained soil. Undoubtedly the best early black grape.
