Those who have seen my Dahlias in bloom, pronounce them one of the best collections to be found. They have given excellent satisfaction to those who have handled the roots for several years.

I make a specialty of raising Dahlias in large quantities, and take special pains in putting them up in convenient shape for retailing. After being well dried and cleaned, each root is labeled with name and color, printed on wooden tags and wired fast.

Seedsmen and storekeepers cannot fail to appreciate this method, and realize that Dahlias put up in this way are worth considerable more to them than when packed in bulk, with only one label to a lot.
