Lappa major, the "GOBO" of the Japanese, a most delicious, perfectly hardy, biennial vegetable. The young leaf stalks resemble rhubarb in form, and are almost exactly like asparagus in flavor, and are cooked in the same way except that the first water in which it is boiled should be poured off and the "gobo" cooked in fresh water. By planting at different times it may be had at almost any season, though best in early Spring. Strong plants, per 10, $2.50; per 100, $20. Seed, per oz, 75c; per lb, $5. As easily grown from seed as turnips.
