ALFRED J. BROWN & CO.
Growers for the Wholesale Trade.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., January 1st, 1896.

Dear Sir:

We take pleasure in submitting our prices on such specialties as we grow in PEAS and BEANS for your careful consideration.

NEW DAVIS KIDNEY WAX.
Originated and introduced by us in 1894.

While the Bean crop in 1895 exceeds the present demand, you very rarely see a good season follow, and our predictions are that Beans will be good property in the autumn of '96. As many varieties can be bought at the present time at less than the cost of production, it is quite evident there is no encouragement for the grower to plant for surplus. As the majority of the wholesale trade are, no doubt, carrying large surplus, contract orders for new crop will undoubtedly be light. To give you the situation in a nut-shell, careful Bean growers will not plant for surplus; wholesale dealers will be shy in placing contracts; and if the crop of 1896 should prove a failure we leave you to judge what the consequences might be.
