PPHON

LIBRARY.

Extracts of a Report of the Library Committee of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

“The Library, although not extensive, embraces works of general interest and utility, as well to the amateur as the cultivator; they have been selected upon subjects connected more or less intimately with the legitimate objects of the Society, and are confined to standard works and periodicals on Floriculture, Horticulture, Landscape Gardening, Botany, Agriculture, and Natural History.

“It is a source of encouragement to observe that this means of disseminating knowledge, is becoming so much a favourite with the members of the Society; during the past few months, the number of volumes taken out by members have increased in a four-fold degree: thus evincing a desire to obtain and peruse useful treatises, which must result in much good, and tend greatly to the advancement of science.

“It is to be hoped the Society will foster this nucleus, by judicious accessions, which in time will form a library every way worthy of this association; in which might be found such works as would aid the present improving taste for Floriculture, elegant Horticulture, and Botany; and thus keep pace with the progress of discovery in science, and improvement in rural economy: forming a collection not to be met with in other libraries, public or private.

“The Catalogue gives a concise description of the subjects, of which each work treats, and is arranged for convenience of reference, under the heads of Horticulture and Floriculture, Botany,

Agriculture, and Natural History; the number of volumes embraced in it, exclusive of unbound periodicals and pamphlets, is two hundred and sixty-four.

“Most of the works comprising the library, have been purchased with the funds of the Society; acknowledgments for all works presented have been made in the Catalogue, by affixing the name of the donor to the title of the work.”

THOMAS P. JAMES,
ROBERT BUIST,
WILLIAM S. VAUX,
Library Committee.

REGULATIONS.

The Library shall be opened by the Library Committee immediately after the adjournment of the Society at its monthly meetings.

The Committee may loan to any member upon signing the obligation, one folio, quarto, or octavo, or two duodecimos or smaller works, from one stated meeting to the next, which may be re-loaned, provided application has not been made for the same.

Every member detaining a work beyond the limited time shall be fined twenty-five cents per month; after three months the fine to be doubled; after six months to be liable for double the value of the whole work or set.

The names of all such as have been delinquent over three months to be reported to the Society by the Committee at the January and July stated meetings; and such delinquents to be barred the use of the Library until arrearages are paid.

All injuries to a Book or set of Books to be paid for, or the same to be supplied, and no Book to be taken from the Library without the knowledge of the Committee.
