Satisfaction

When you purchase nursery stock, just as when you purchase anything else, you want absolute satisfaction. We spend time and money in growing nursery stock just a little better than the other fellow can produce, to the end that you may be better satisfied. We are not going to take up your time by going into this matter extensively, the chances are that you have seen for yourself the splendid results given by our trees, shrubs and vines. In every state west of Nebraska, in Alaska, and in British Columbia, our stock has proven itself.

Deep, rich soil, abundance of sunshine, an ideal location, isolated from all possible sources of contamination, long growing season, moisture under control, perfect fall ripening weather, and years of nursery experience, all combine to produce Yakima Valley Nursery Company stock, stock which stands alone in excellence.

We do not stop with the production of good stock—we see that it is put into your hands in the best possible condition. Every order is checked and rechecked to prevent mistakes. Packing receives especial attention. Every precaution is used to prevent damage of any sort.

A deputy inspector, appointed by the State of Washington, is stationed at our plant during shipping season, and his certificate of inspection is attached to every shipment.

This booklet is not meant to be a complete catalog, it simply shows you the extensive line we carry, and gives prices. Further information will be gladly furnished, and correspondence, as well as orders, will receive prompt, careful and courteous attention.

Our Guarantee

WE GUARANTEE everything put out by us to be free from disease and True to Name.

Should anything prove untrue to name, we will either replace free, refund the purchase price, or top graft free of charge, at the option of the purchaser.

Some Helps on Planting and Care

Protect the Roots.

In taking your trees home from delivery point do not expose them to sun or wind. Many trees are injured more in an hour at this time than in one of two weeks in transit. Cover them well with straw, burlap or canvas, and immediately upon reaching home, heel them in, wetting and packing the ground thoroughly. Take only a few at a time out of the ground at planting time. A barrel or tub of water in which to keep the trees in the field while planting insures against needless exposure. A little care at this time will repay you tenfold.

Preparation of the Soil.

Prepare a rich, deep bed of mellow soil, and have the land sufficiently drained to relieve the roots from standing water. To insure a fine growth, land should be in as good condition as is required for a crop of wheat, corn or potatoes.

Preparing Trees for Planting.

The preservation of the natural balance between tops and roots renders a vigorous cutting back of top absolutely necessary in most cases. Prune off broken or bruised ends of roots, if any (a smooth-cut root granulates, or makes ready to extend, sooner than one broken off). Cut back the tops to the extent of about one-half the previous year's growth, taking care at all times to prune in such a manner as will tend to develop a well-formed head, sufficiently open to admit air and light freely. One-year-old trees, where there is but one straight stock, should be cut down to the height desired for forming the head.

Injured Trees.

If trees are received in a frozen state, place the package unopened in a cellar, away from frost and heat, until thawed out, and then unpack. If partially dried from long exposure, bury entirely, or place in water from 12 to 24 hours.

Planting in Rainy Districts.

Make the holes large enough to admit the roots without any cramping or bending. Fine surface soil should be used in covering the roots, and thus should be carefully worked among them. Pour in some water when the hole is partially filled. See that the ground is firmly and solidly packed over all parts of the roots, so that there will be no opportunity for dry air or frost to enter and destroy roots deprived of the full benefit of their natural protection. Omission to pack the earth solidly is a more frequent cause of failure in planting nursery stock than any other. Fill the holes full enough to be even with the surrounding surface after the fresh earth settled. Never use manure in contact with roots. Large trees should be staked and tied.

Planting in Irrigated Districts.

Have the water in the field ditches and as you fill the hole with earth, run in water and let settle, finally filling and packing, and leaving a dry mulch of earth on top. In these arid and semi-arid localities, ground should be kept in very moist condition. Many trees are lost through neglect of this.

After-Culture.

Grass should not be allowed to grow about young trees or plants. The ground should be cultivated for a space of at least one foot outside the roots. If the ground is poor, it should have surface applications of manure. Pruning should be done regularly every spring, before the buds swell any. Avoid removal of large branches.

Fall Planting.

In most sections where the thermometer goes below zero, trees delivered to customers in the fall are more or less injured during the freezing weather of winter—lowering their vitality and causing many to die the first summer after planting; so we will not deliver trees in the fall to cold sections, except when the owner is willing to take all risk and pay freight from nursery.

WINTER MULCHING.

In the fall, and particularly the first after trees or bushes are planted, the ground should be mulched or covered with a layer of coarse manure or litter three to six inches deep, over a space of two feet more in diameter than the extent of the roots. This keeps the earth moist and of even temperature.

A Small Section of Our Field of Two-Year Roses.

The Queen of Flowers

No shrub or flower responds so readily to a little care and attention, and returns such an abundance of beauty and fragrance through so long a period, as does the rose. No lot so small or acre so broad but the rose must be the crowning feature.

Rose growing is not an expensive luxury, neither does it require great labor. No other flower can be so well afforded by rich and poor alike. They add charm and attractiveness to the humble home of the lowly as well as to the mansion of the aristocrat.

Roses require plenty of manure and good cultivation. Old and decayed branches, and at least half the previous season's growth, should be cut away early each spring, and a little cutting back after the first blooming will insure more late flowers. Tea and Noisette Roses should be protected by covering them with evergreen boughs during the winter months, in cold sections.

If the "thrip" or fly appears, spray the plants daily with a strongly steeped solution of tobacco stems (one pound of stems to five gallons of water), or a solution of whale-oil soap (one pound of soap to eight gallons of water), until the insects are mastered. Rose bugs, which work at the flowers must be picked off. The presence of the Rose caterpillar can be detected by its glueing two or more leaves together to form a shelter. These leaves should be promptly pressed together with the thumb and finger. Insects which eat leaves can be destroyed by applying white hellebore when the foliage is damp. The secret of success in destroying all species of insects lies in applying the appropriate remedy as soon as the insects appear.

Our Rose list (see pages 16, 17 and 18) comprises the best all around assortment yet offered by a Pacific Coast concern. Much time has been given to the selection of varieties. The catalogs and literature of the leading rose growers on the Coast and in the East have been consulted and advice sought from recognized rosarians, for we wanted a list that would suit the wide range of tastes that must necessarily arise from as extensive a field as we cover.

Remember that these Roses are field grown, hence hardy and vigorous, and that they are two years old when delivered to you, thus blooming the first year.

WALNUTSENGLISH (Persian or French) AND JAPANESE VROOMAN FRANQUETTE

This superior walnut is propagated from the celebrated Vrooman Franquette orchard at Santa Rosa, California. It combines the three prime essentials for the west. A hardy tree, late blooming and self pollenizing.

The "second generation" trees are grown from nuts produced on the grafted Vrooman Franquette orchard which, not being cross-pollenized, reproduce true to type. We are growing and selling the Vrooman Franquette under license from the Oregon Nursery Company, which holds an exclusive propagating contract with the owners of the Vrooman orchard.

Choice Two-Year Field Grown ROSES

NOT HOT-HOUSE GROWN

Do not confound our choice stock with the small tender hot-house plants offered by mail-order houses at cut prices. Such plants always prove a disappointment, besides if they do live one must wait two years before they bloom.
