STRAWBERRIES

Progressive (Everbearing)

Seems to be the leading strawberry for home use. They can be grown any where other varieties succeed, any good garden soil or field that will grow corn or other crops, will grow strawberries.

Everbearing plants should be set early in the spring. Hoed, cultivated and fertilized same as other strawberry plants.

Progressive plants set in the spring not only produce an immense crop of extra nice berries the year they are planted but the runner plants bear fruit soon as set. Progressive yields a crop of fruit the first year that is truly wonderful.

Blossoms should be kept picked off till the middle of July for best results.

They are early and a heavy bearer and continue bearing until frost or till the ground freezes.

The berries are of medium size, highly colored red to the core; quality of fruit ranks with the best. Our plants are fine.
