GLADIOLI

GROWN BY

HENRY C. ECKERT

BELLEVILLE, ILL.

The year 1923 was favorable for gladioli culture, and my stock of bulbs this season is extra fine, but as my stock of most varieties is limited, will offer for sale only at retail prices, excepting those varieties I want to sell out entirely.

The Primulinus came out again with flying colors, keeping green and in growing condition up to frost, October 18th. I am sure that they are the best varieties to grow where hot, dry summers prevail, and they produced this season a lot of fine, large plumb bulblets, in striking contrast with Gandavensir which produced only a few small ones. My collection of Primulinus is this season not large, but next year I hope to have in my gardens the best introductions of this country and Europe.

THE THREE ARISTOCRATS.

I call the following three kinds, Aristocrats, because whenever ladies came out of town to buy flowers it was always these three they picked out first.

AMERICA. Decorative.

This is an old kind whose good qualities has never been recognized by the Eastern grower; it is a long keeper, flowers keeping in good condition six days in water, a profuse bloomer from August 1st till frost, and long stems make this one of the most valuable kind in the trade. Color, deep salmon, shaded gold. Price 50 cents each, $5.00 per dozen.

CHIEFTAIN. Decorative.

One of the very best of Slocumb's introductions, and if you grow dahlias for the cut flower trade, this one is the most profitable you can plant, indeed, I did cut from single plants from 50 cents up to $1.00 worth of flowers, and as it is one of the freest bloomers with long stems and large flowers, makes this one of the grandest dahlias known. Color, deep crimson red, shaded purple. Price, 75c each, $7.50 per doz.

MAGDALENA. Hy. Dec. P.

A new introduction, raised from the seed received from Wm. Pfitzer, Germany, was one of the grandest dahlias in my plantation. Color, pure light yellow, flowers six inches in diameter, under ordinary field culture, long stems, strong vigorous plant, six feet high, with no signs of any weakness, and compared with other yellows in my collection, it was far ahead in size and quality of flowers of all other varieties. Strong divided root, sure to grow. Price $10.00 each.

DAHLIAS

The past season was very favorable for dahlia culture, moderate warm in summer, cool nights in August and September, with enough rain to keep the soil moist produced a wonderful crop of flowers, and as the demand for dahlia flowers beat all records of the past, I am well satisfied with the results. My collection is close to 100 varieties, but I offer for sale only the best for the cut flower trade. I grow some of the much advertised big ones, but do not recommend them at present, till they give better results in production of flowers; the truth is that a good many of the large flowering varieties produce only from one to three flowers, and in my business I have no use for them.
