Dasheen, the Coming New Vegetable

300 to 900 Bushels Per Acre.

The Potato's Only Rival

The Dasheen is grown principally as a root crop, the tubers being used the same as Irish Potatoes. The tubers sometimes reach a weight of more than six pounds each. One hill will produce on good, rich soil six to eight pounds or more of tubers, and in rare instances twenty to twenty-six pounds of Dasheens have been taken from a single hill. Crops of 600 to 900 bushels per acre have been produced.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture report 1,400 bushels from less than five acres in Florida, and on their different experimental grounds have secured yields of 450 bushels to the acre.

Mr. A. I. Root, editor of Gleanings in Bee Culture has this to say regarding the Dasheen: "Although the Dasheen is still mostly confined to the South, yet I might say that we are now growing our third crop here in Northern Ohio, and I feel more and more satisfied that it can be grown profitably all over our northern states; and will ultimately prove to be one of our most nourishing and toothsome vegetables."

The "Country Gentleman" published the following regarding it: "Not only does the Dasheen promise well as a market crop once the public generally has recognized its merits, but in the meantime it is capable of furnishing food for home consumption. Its food value is higher than the potato, and about fifty per cent more protein and fifty per cent more starch. The flavor of the Dasheen is decidedly richer and more tempting than that of the potato."

Planting should be done as early in the spring as conditions of soil and climate will permit. For field culture the tubers are planted singly and entire, not more than 2 or 3 inches deep in hills about 3 feet apart, the distance between rows being 4 feet. This will permit horse cultivation. In cultivating during the summer the soil should be gradually drawn to the plants and the ground kept free from weeds, but require little cultivation after large enough to shade the ground.

The Dasheen is sure to be a gold mine for growers in all parts of the country where the season is not too short. While we would not recommend it as a big money maker for the North, we surely consider it worthy of a place in every garden. If you haven't room to give them a trial in your garden, you can at least plant a few for ornamental purposes and at the same time grow enough of the tubers to find out what they are like. You will find them one of the finest vegetables and most showy ornamental foliage plants.

The stems, when grown under a box or barrel, so as to be bleached, are equal to Asparagus. The Department of Agriculture says: "The shoots are very tender and have a delicious flavor, suggestive of mushrooms. There are probably few plants so well suited for forcing purposes as the Dasheen." Experiments carried on by the Battle Creek Sanitarium, at Battle Creek, Mich., indicate that 5 to 8 crops of these delicate shoots can be harvested. First cutting can be made in about 35 days after tubers are set in ground, and subsequent ones at intervals of 10 to 14 days.

The leaves are large and very ornamental, resembling closely the Caladium Esculentum, or Elephant's Ear. Every town and city garden should plant a few of these interesting plants to see what the people in other parts of the world raise for food.

This year is the time to get started with a few, so as to raise your own seed tubers for next year's planting. As our stock of tubers is limited, we would recommend that you send your order in early.

Choice seed tubers, 3 for 40c; 6 for 75c; 12 for $1.25; 25 for $2.00, delivered to you prepaid. Our pamphlet giving cultural directions and recipes for preparing and cooking the Dasheen, free with each order.

Osage's sturdy southern grown cabbage plants are tough and hardy. They mean dollars to the wide awake gardener

Our plants are grown from the best strains of seed, in the South where the soil and climatic conditions are just suited for growing tough, hardy, frost-proof cabbage plants. Plants are ready for shipment when from eight to ten weeks old, the buds are then purple and the outer leaves a reddish-brown; when in this condition they can be shipped to territory farther north and planted in the open ground a month to six weeks earlier than home grown hotbed or cold-frame plants. The top of the plant does not grow until your regular spring weather opens up, but the roots grow from the time the plants are set. They have stood a temperature of eight to ten degrees above zero without injury; the land freezing or the plants being covered with ice, sleet and snow did not affect them. Headed cabbage is ready ten days to three weeks earlier than from any other plants. Frost-proof cabbage plants may be shipped to any point where they will arrive within four or five days, by parcel post, and should be planted four to six weeks earlier than home grown plants. The plants will be somewhat wilted and have a hard stunted look when received which will be disappointing to persons who have never used them before. Regardless of their appearance, however, they will produce the results.

Order early and state about what date you wish your plants sent. We will ship just as near the time desired as weather and other conditions permit, but

PLEASE REMEMBER

Your order must first be sent from our office in OTTAWA to our growing station in the South, and it will take several days to reach there after we send it. Plants cannot be pulled and shipped in rainy or freezing weather, when wet, they heat too rapidly. We sometimes have a week or ten days of continued wet weather which prevents shipment. Your order will be accepted with the understanding that you are willing to allow for delays, such as explained above, over which we have absolutely no control.
