Burpee's Gold Medal Display of Dahlias

Burpee's Dahlias exhibited at the
New York Show of the American
Dahlia Society

The number of Dahlia lovers is increasing steadily every year. Truly, no other fall-flowering plant gives such a wonderful display and universal satisfaction as the "Queen of Autumn"—The Dahlia. Every garden, whether large or small, should include at least a few Dahlias.

Within comparatively recent years a large number of strikingly beautiful varieties have been introduced. Words cannot describe the colors and shadings—they must be seen to be fully appreciated. Entirely new types have been created and almost every conceivable shade, excepting only true blue, has been evolved by mother nature under the care of expert gardeners.

Our list of varieties includes many new colors of our own introduction and the best of other Dahlia specialists. We have also retained quite a few of the older varieties which have kept in favor with Dahlia lovers because of their outstanding qualities.

Peony-Flowered Dahlias

This class of Dahlias has quickly come to the foreground within the last ten years. They were formerly looked down upon on account of being only semi-double, but their decidedly artistic effect, combined with some wonderful colors and immense size of blooms, has now given them a place ahead of almost all other classes. The inner petals are usually curved or twisted, sometimes covering all of the center. The outer petals are either flat or more or less irregular.
