"The Hundred Per Cent. Dahlia and Why"

In making this assertion we admit a dahlia must be perfect in every way for all purposes. Miss America, hybrid cactus in type, has size, stiff, straight, wiry stems; is a splendid keeper, making it invaluable for the exhibition table. The illustration on the opposite page, shown in natural colors, was cut five days before it was photographed.

For florist's work its value knows no bounds, with its artistic formation, the stiff, long, wiry stems, its keeping qualities and last but not least the rich blending of colors.

For the home garden and the amateur, Miss America cannot fail to please and give satisfaction. A free, rank grower and an early and profuse bloomer. The plant which is of a branching habit is very easy for the amateur to work.

In color Miss America is a rich orange buff, blending toward the center, lemon chrome; the long petals are wavy, twisted and curled, colored on the reverse light Jasper red, adding richness and beauty to this autumn shaded dahlia.

The plant is a very free grower, strong and vigorous; the foliage rich dark green; the large flowers, which are borne in great profusion, are of splendid texture—no trace of stiffness or heaviness. The Artistic Dahlia, Miss America. Strong roots, $10.00. Plants, $7.50. April and May delivery.

We wish to thank our friends and patrons for the many kind words and letters of appreciation received from them during the previous year.

We solicit a continuance of your favors and assure you we shall endeavor to keep pleased and satisfied customers.

Our stock is larger than ever before and our offerings are within the reach of every one who loves the "Dahlia."

Our farm, where acres of dahlias are grown for cut flowers and tubers, is located $\frac{1}{4}$ mile south of the White Horse Pike, on the Taunton road, easily being located by the sign "Sunnyside Floral Gardens."

Our exhibition grounds and cut flower department is located one mile below Berlin, on the Blue Anchor Road.

We extend to you and your friends a cordial invitation to visit our fields and grounds during September and October, 1925.

GROWING THE DAHLIA

Select your dahlia garden in a sunny, open location, free from trees and perennials, if possible. The dahlia will grow in any kind of soil, but prefers light, loamy ground. If your soil is of heavy clay, give it a liberal application of either sharp sand or coal ashes, thus making the ground more porous and providing better drainage.

Broadcast your dahlia garden the fall previous with well-rotted barnyard manure to a depth of four to six inches, spading it well under.

In the early spring, spade the soil again, keep it fine and mellow until planting time. Divide your plantings into two; if you have plenty of stock, make three plantings.

June 20th—Make your first planting. Mark out your dahlia garden, four by four feet, if you have the room to spare; if not, three by three feet will do. Now drive stakes five feet long, allowing twelve inches to be driven into the ground; dig holes six inches deep, at the base of each stake; lay the tuber flat down in the hole with the eye end of the tuber next to the stake, three inches from it, with the eye up; cover it up with four inches of soil. When the sprout has grown four inches above the ground, fill up the hole. Only one sprout, never more than two, should be allowed to grow from a tuber. When your plant has grown four sets of leaves, pinch out the top (or the fourth set of leaves); this checks the upward growth, will cause your plants to branch and keep each variety a uniform height. When your plants have attained a height of two feet, work in well around each plant a generous handful of rawbone meal (you have of course been cultivating and hoeing your dahlias well up to this time).

You have pinched out the top of each plant, side shoots or sprouts are growing and buds are appearing. Select the crown or center bud (if it is perfect); if the crown bud should be deformed, choose the best looking bud of the three that appear on the main branches. At this time disprout the side shoots growing above the three sets of leaves and also rub off all flower buds except the bud that you select for your flower. You will now have a branch or branches, with one bud and stems for your blooms when they are fit to cut, two to three feet long.

Make your second planting the first week in July, and follow the above method. Follow with your third planting July 15th, but do not pinch out the top—just let this late July planting grow upward as they will. As soon as these dahlias of the third planting are well up, give each plant a good handful of high-grade potato fertilizer.

By making three plantings your dahlia garden will return you blooms of the highest quality the entire season.

After frost has killed the tops, dig the tubers carefully; remove the soil from the roots and store in a box or bin in your cellar, safe from frost and heat—a temperature of 40 degrees is best. During the winter, on nice sunny days, open your cellar windows and give them a breath of fresh air.

In the spring divide your clumps, allowing one or two eyes to each tuber for planting out again.

SUMMARY:—Select a sunny, open location for your dahlia garden; keep the soil well spaded, fine and mellow before planting, well cultivated and hoed after planting. Use rawbone meal or high-grade potato fertilizer in addition to well-rotted barnyard manure.

Do not plant too early; do not disbud too early. When your dahlias reach a height of two to three feet, tie them securely to their respective stakes. Keep your tubers after storing away from heat and frost.

HYBRID CACTUS:—In presenting to you this new dahlia, "BERLIN," while it comes in the hybrid cactus class, it is different. This delightful flower introduced itself to the many visitors at our exhibition grounds during the past season. On entering many would ask, "What is the name of that orange one over there," long before they were near it. The color is a most beautiful shade of clear apricot orange, without any trace of bronze.

The flowers are of good size, have a depth of five inches; the outer petals flare back so far they all but meet; the form is perfect; the stems are straight; strong and as stiff as a cane, holding the flowers erect above a tall, vigorous plant.

The plant is tall and strong, of upright habit. The foliage is a light green. The vivid colored blooms, together with this light green foliage, makes this dahlia a sight to behold. A dahlia you will love.

Strong plants, $5.00. May delivery.

GLADYS HEISS

Description on opposite page

GLADYS HEISS

(HYBRID CACTUS)

123

Truly the most clear rose pink dahlia we know. Those that are acquainted with the "Climbing Lady Ashtown Rose" can picture the pink shade of this exquisite dahlia.

Gladys Heiss is a hybrid cactus of large size, very good depth and fine in form. The petals are very long and pointed; the stems are long and slightly pendant. This, however, does not decrease its beauty, but rather adds to its grace.

The plant is of branching habit, a strong and free grower. A plant loaded with this beautiful pink colored flower, among the fine leafed foliage of light green, must be seen to be appreciated.

Fine for the garden and exhibition.

Strong plants, $5.00. May delivery.

CAMDEN COURIER

COLOSSAL DECORATIVE:—This massive new exhibition dahlia is not only very large in size but has great depth as well.

The flowers, which are produced in great abundance, are perfect in formation. The petals are of good, thick substance, and while the blooms are of great size, this dahlia is not coarse. The stems are very long and straight.

In color "CAMDEN COURIER" is a light cadmium, overlaid grenadine red. The blending of these two colors produces a shade of rich bronze, which is intensified by a golden glistening sheen spread over the entire bloom. For a short color description, the color could be called a rich golden bronze.

The plant is a giant, with dark green, luxurious foliage, strong and sturdy. A free grower, of branching habit. Should be given plenty of space to grow, as the plant grows as massive as its blooms. Admired by all who saw this huge dahlia.

Strong green plants, $10.00. May delivery.

MARJORIE LEIGH

(DECORATIVE)

1323

We might write a book and give you various flowing descriptions therein, but we are sure that cold type cannot convey the beauty of this wonderful new dahlia to you. "It is beautiful, so different," was the exclamation of our visitors who viewed our gardens in the season past.

Picture a very tall plant, strong, sturdy, of upright growth, with glossy foliage of a medium shade of green. Now leave this green setting and let your eyes rest on a mass of beautiful dahlia blossoms, large in size, fine in form; stems that are long, straight and stiff, holding erect, high above the plant, their blooms. The color, the softest shade of Jasper pink, tinted throughout pinkish buff with a reflex of rich begonia rose. A rare color combination.

In the sunlight "Marjorie Leigh" is beautiful. Under artificial light "Marjorie Leigh" is peerless.

Owing to limited amount of stock and heavy garden sales, we feared to reproduce this wonderful dahlia in natural colors this season.

The illustration on the opposite page is greatly reduced in size.

Strong green plants, $10.00. May delivery.

BERTHA PENNINGTON

A Sunnyside Creation

Description on opposite page

BERTHA PENNINGTON

(DECORATIVE)

1823

Just another new beauty to add to the artistic list. "BERTHA PENNINGTON" is a decorative, in form the type that is so useful for every purpose. For the exhibitor and decorator this dahlia will prove a delight, on account of its artistic formation. While this flower grows to a great size, there is no stiffness nor heaviness whatever about it.

For the home garden it will be found invaluable, as it is of the habit where you will be greeted with a mass of blooms before you take notice of its foliage.

The stems are very long, stiff and straight, holding their flowers up high.

The color of this most artistic dahlia is a delicate coral pink, shading quickly toward the center to a light gold, while the reverse of the petals, which are so artistically curled and twisted, is of a light coral red. Owing to the formation of the petals, this color is so pronounced that it is almost the main shade of the bloom.

The plant grows very tall and strong. The foliage is of fine leaves of a light green. A grand profuse bloomer.

Strong green plants, $5.00. May delivery.

THE GLADIOLUS BEAUTIFUL

Do not let another season pass without a corner of your garden planted in "GLADIOLI" with their easy culture, their beautiful coloring, together with their keeping quality as a cut flower.

In any good garden soil, free from shade of trees and buildings, spade up a plot of ground, in the early spring, after all danger of frost is past, broadcast it with a liberal dressing of raw bone meal, mix well with the soil. "Do not use fresh manure."

Set the bulbs five to six inches deep in rows, four inches apart between each bulb, rows eighteen inches apart. You can also make a bed and plant in a mass, four inches apart each way. Keep the soil loose, by frequent hoeing. Do not let it form a hard crust.

When cutting your flower spikes, cut them in the early morning or in the evening, when the first two lilies open. Let three or four leaves remain on the plant, so the bulb will cure properly.

Dig bulbs in the fall; cut off tops; let them dry where the sun can get at them for a few days; store away in low boxes, in a dry cellar, where the temperature is around 40 degrees.

For that pastel corner in your garden for 1925 we have prepared
