Sparks From a Pastor's Anvil

"Say it with Flowers!"

The Lord said it "with flowers," when He twined some blossoms into the sermon on the mount, "Consider the lilies."

Flowers are preachers of the garden, prophets in the woods, Evangelists by the wayside.

On graduation day, when the Battle of the Books has been won, and redouts in the Kingdom of Knowledge stormed and captured, "say it with flowers." A sprig of bloom for the lad's coat, a bouquet of roses for the girl's corsage. Well done, good and faithful scholar!

Hark to the music! Here comes the bride, and on her fair brow, and in her trembling hands, flowers! Say it with flowers, "for better for worse, for richer for poorer, till death us do part." So says the bride, so says the bridegroom, and all the flowers of the wedding scene in fragrant whisperings respond, "Amen!"

Step softly into the sick room, and, "say it with flowers." They tell of sympathy for the sufferer, of prayers for the afflicted. They stand as radiant sentinels witnessing to the love care of Him who said, "I am the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valleys." Hand of Christ, softest pillow, touch of Christ, divinest restorative, comfort of Christ, best of healing balms.

And when for tired travelers earth's journey is done, and the farewell given, still "Say it with flowers." A few on the quiet heart, lovely pledge of the resurrection. Anchor of flowers, for the eternal hope within the veil! Cross of flowers, for the rough Tree on the hillside that blossomed red with the Saviour's blood, the sinner's only plea! Gates of flowers, significant of the entrance, lustrous with pearl, through which the blessed pass to be at home in the Father's house!

Pastor George Douglas.

PATRICIAN DAHLIA BULBS

The roots I dug from last year's garden,
How dry and mummy-like they are;
Ugly things, hugging little clods of crumbling earth

In their withered, shrunken arms,
Like mementoes of the past.

I deeply bury them from sight
And over them heap the soil;

No longer shall their ugliness offend,
Nor shall they see the light of day;

I shall forget them.
I find a stalk of tender green with bud

Unclosing to a glorious flower:

Can it be, within their withered hearts
The bulbs were holding, as in sanctuary,
A gem that waited but the call

To resurrection and to life?
This miracle of bulb and flower

Is like a flash of unexpected smile
From one of cold and stern exterior;

Or like old age, whose beauty, dead and withered

Still holds the flower of youthful cheer
When living in the hope of the Eternal.

PATRICIAN DAHLIAS

In stately rows, the regal dahlias stand,
And seem a close inspection to invite;
With heads uplifted loftily and firm,
Commanding admiration as their right.

An artist, with a living brush, has touched

Each petal with the colors that adorn;
With fiery sunset hues of Golden West,
And palest blush-tints of the rosy dawn.

How prodigal His brush with pigment,
rich;

He uses gold and bronze without stint.
Then blends and softens all with finished touch

And leaves each petal stamped with His imprint.

How beautiful the raiment that He shades;

The royal purple, velvety, we view;
Proud Kings and Queens and Emperors
in line.

Majestic, with their gorgeous retinue.

He paints, as white as Snowdrift's purity,
An avalanche of petals, chaste and
cold,

Then opening them slowly, one by one,
Uncovered hearts that glow with sun-
kissed gold.

How deftly has He drawn from uncouth
bulb,

Fair, dainty maids of high degree and
charm;

Bold Kalifs of reputed dark red blood,
And tall Ambassadors so straight and calm.

Like brilliant sunburst breaking on the sight

In vivid streaks and rays, the dahlias
stand,

Proclaiming, silently, their royal birth,
Creations of the Master Artist hand.
