Gladiolus are the most popular flowers. They are very easy to grow, and adapted to a wide variety of soils.

Plant in the sun, and in a good garden soil.

Plant four inches below level of the ground, and hill up to them at blooming time, and five or six inches apart in rows; rows do well planted double.

They may be planted from April to June. Plant two weeks apart for a succession of blooms.

Dig in the fall after stalks dry and before heavy frosts. Dry thoroughly before storing.
