IRIS

MAYS LANDING, NEW JERSEY

INTRODUCTION

Through the careful and systematic efforts of the American and European hybridizers, so notable has been the development of the Iris that it has risen from obscurity to a well-deserved prominence and will long remain as one of the finest perennials in the small garden or larger landscape design.

All the advantages of being unsurpassed in range of color, excellence of form and fragrance are theirs. The decorative value of the flower is age-old in appreciation, for as a cut bloom they are not equaled. Thriving under neglect but amply responding to careful cultivation, these plants are not affected by extreme cold, are little subject to disease or insect pests, and when established, increase yearly in beauty and value. A breadth of variety in landscape effects is obtained in the planting of beds, masses, borders, or specimens, features in the garden during their blooming season, and when not in bloom, the foliage still carries out an ornamental purpose.

Our Policy

Highest quality.

Finest and newest varieties.

Accuracy in naming.

Prompt and careful filling of orders.

No substitution.

Orders receive equal attention, large or small.

No charges made for packing.

Errors cheerfully rectified.

Low overhead.

Our entire co-operation in making your Iris planting a success.

ORDERS

All orders are contingent upon occurrences beyond our control and prior sale.

Listing, packing and shipping are in sequence of receipt dates, and immediately upon the arrival of your order an acknowledgment will be forwarded to you. Should this not reach you in a reasonable time, it will either indicate that the order has been miscarried or was received with the name or address missing. In such an event communicate with us without delay.

A clearly written or freehand printed name and address is a safeguard against error, and we would also request you to give us the names of your nearest express office and express company.

It is to your advantage to forward your order early, particularly should you desire the rarer varieties. Orders received after December 1st will be carried over for priority to the next shipping season.

PRICES AND PAYMENT

Prices are not subject to momentary increase between the publication of lists.

Remittances may be made either by your check, bank draft, post office or express money order, and should accompany your order. There is risk attached to sending currency, especially coin, through the mail.

PACKING AND SHIPPING

The growth of some Irises is slow and the demand frequently keeps the stock low; so, as much as we dislike to report "sold out" on a variety, it is often unavoidable. Iris may be shipped most satisfactorily after the blooming season, though the freshly planted stock of the newest varieties does not reach a healthy maturity till early August, at which time it will be sent out.

All of our plants are packed in accord with the best methods now in use among American and European growers and under the careful personal attention of H. L. Danenhauer. The roots are thoroughly washed, placed in a disinfecting solution as a precautionary measure, and allowed to dry before packing. These methods will meet the requirements of any federal or state plant importation regulation.
