New Dahlias of Our Own Introduction

- LITTLE BO PEEP (P) Small flower but one so attractive that it is noticed by everyone who comes into the field. A pretty shade of yellow edged with red, makes a combination that reminds one of the sun hiding behind the clouds, with the rays peeping around the edges at sunset of a summer afternoon. Full closed center. The profusion of blossoms are carried on strong stems$1.00
- CELESTINE (H.C.) This creamy pink beauty is composed of row upon row of long sharply pointed petals that curl and twist. The enormous blossom is "different". There is a hint of lavender overlaying it and at the extreme tips there is a sort of greenish reflex. It holds its size and center all season. The stems are improved by disbudding. A beauty indeed$2.00
- CHEROKEE (D) A large regularly formed flower, with a high perfect center. It is the brownest dahlia we have ever grown. It has very much the same formation as Amun Ra but while not so brilliantly colored, it is with us a lovelier dahlia. The center is a dark-reddish brown, the balance of flower a coppery bronze. Like all our seedlings, it is a very profuse bloomer. The stems are strong and long enough for cutting. Stock limited.....$2.00
- CRAWFORD (D) Not so large as most of the new ones but it has an endearing quality that many of the big ones lack. Its strong point is, however, the length of time it keeps fresh after cutting. It is an even shade of old rose the petals curl just enough to keep it from being too stiff. Stems are strong and wiry and hold flowers facing you.....$1.50
- MAID MARION (D) This large, deep dahlia with its high rounded closed center when first opening is cream white deeply tipped mauve pink. As the blossom matures it changes its color to an exquisite shell pink, the form changes, too, flattens out and petals curl most artistically and the under ones turn back toward the stem. It is a question which form is the lovelier. Everyone is enchanted with its beauty. We think so much of it we named it in honor of our little daughter, whose name is Marion. It holds its size until frost. The numerous blooms are held erect on long stems. The plants are tall and vigorous with healthy foliage$3.00
- MOUNTAIN BEAUTY (D) An enormous deeply built bloom of a "different" shade of red that some think merges on to the American Beauty shade, but it is not quite that, being too deep and rich. Not a fiery red either, but one that glows with life. The formation, too, is "different." The perfect center is made of many broad short petals, and has the effect of crushed velvet. The stems

- are 18 or 20 inches to the first leaves, but flowers are too heavy to be carried upright. This one seems to attract everybody's attention.$2.00
- ORANGE BALL (H.S.) This medium sized ball shaped dahlia was retained on account of its color—a beautiful orange scarlet that brightens the corner where it grows. The petals are quite wide and semi-quilled. Plant is dwarf but robust and has plenty blooms..... .75
- OTHELLO (P.F.) Wide petals of dark velvety maroon, the reverse of which are veined with a beautiful lavender, compose this very large blossom. The petals twist so as to show this two-tone effect. Curly petaloids outline the golden center. Plant is tall with glossy foliage and is always covered with blossoms. Every man "spots" this one very soon after he enters the field where it is growing. Stems are pendant, or prices would be much higher.$1.00
- ALICEA (D) Pale creamy yellow, well formed blooms which at the center and on the reverse of petals are deeply tinted apricot. They have a perfect ~~white~~ center and a wax like quality. Very appealing to anybody who likes yellow. The flowers keep for days when cut. Only medium sized and are borne upright on long wiry stems. Plant unusually tall.$2.00
- WHITE CLOUD (D) While this pure white one has a small blossom—about the size of Relice, the many rows of overlapping petals which are cleft at the tips give it such a dainty, fleecy appearance that it suggests the soft feathery clouds of a summer day, and there are clouds of bloom, too, from early until late. It will be found perfect for design work and cut flowers. Centers perfect and always closed. Stems long and wiry$1.00
