-Bulbs and Their Cultural Directions

Outdoor planting should be done early in the fall to secure healthy plants and beautiful flowers. Set the bulbs so that there is earth above them to their own depth. Do not overcrowd; 3 to 4 inches apart for small bulbs such as Crocus, Snowdrops, Ranunculus, etc., 6 to 7 inches for Anemones, Jonquils, Tulips, Iris, Freesias; 7 to 9 inches for Hyacinths and Narcissus; 18 to 27 inches for Lilies.

Directions for Pot Growing and Forcing

Bulbs must be unpacked as soon as received and potted at once, for good flowering and thorough root growth. Use old pots for this purpose as new pots soak all the moisture from the soil.

A light, rich soil is the proper potting material. Use a four or five inch pot. A little sand sifted under the base of each bulb will help a lot. Add more soil until the top of the bulb appears just above the surface. After potting give a good watering and put them in a cool, dark place for 4 weeks, to develop a good root system. Water thoroughly the first three days and then once a week only until the pots are brought into the light. This should be done gradually, bringing them to a north or shaded window first and into the sunlight when ready to flower. Keep pots moist but never wet.

FLOWER SEEDS FOR WINTER

Sweet Pea Culture

For Christmas flowering, the seed is sown in August or September, and for early spring blooming, the seed is sown in November, and it is in sowing these last ones that the greatest trouble is experienced. About November the ground begins to cool off, and if the seed is sown too deep they will not come through, especially the white flowering varieties.

Sweet Peas are sown in rows, furrows or trenches. These trenches should be four inches deep, but this does not mean that the seed should be covered with four inches of soil at first. After digging this four-inch trench, place the seed in the bottom and then rake down from the sides of the trench just enough soil to cover them, but this should never be more than half an inch. Never sprinkle Sweet Peas, but run the water over them. When they are up two or three inches, begin to hill them in a little until the trench is filled and level with the surface of the ground. Then a little irrigating ditch is made on each side of the seedlings. Once a week will be sufficient irrigation in ordinary soil, and then the day after irrigation or just as soon as the earth can be easily worked, these ditches are filled in, and the ground thoroughly cultivated and pulverized with a cultivator. The ditches are dug anew for each irrigation, and are filled in and cultivated each time in the same manner. It must be remembered that Sweet Peas must not be sprinkled as this and the heavy fogs are the cause of mildew. Both bone meal and sheep manure are great fertilizers. Do not use fresh manure by any means.

Use Nitrogin Sweet Pea Culture and grow better Sweet Peas. 25c.
