Coniferous Evergreens

We divide our Evergreens into two broad groups. Those following are Coniferous or cone-bearing Evergreens with thread-like, lacy foliage such as Cedars and Arborvitae have. They are largely used in ornamental planting but especially for grouping around the porch or along the walls to break the abrupt line between the house and lawn. They are evergreen and ever beautiful, cooling in effect in the hot summer months and adding to touch of color and warmth to the winter months.

American Arborvitae

A native that grows and does well anywhere. Nice for background or groups, or it is good in single planting. Makes a nice hedge.

Broad-Leaved Evergreens

These are the most valuable plants for the South and for those parts of the North where they will stand the winters. It is in the South that they reach their most perfect development. Their rich, green leaves convey a sense of coolness in the hot summer months; they do not dry and drop in the fall as do the leaves of the deciduous shrubs; and their cheerful green is carried through the winter months. They are gracefully irregular in growth and lack the formal and somewhat stiff outlines of the coniferous evergreens. Plants in this class are just now coming into appreciation in the South, probably because they are being shown and advertised more widely. They deserve their popularity because they are, as a class, the most valuable plants for the entire South.

An Avenue of Shade Trees Make It Cool and Inviting.

Deciduous Trees

Shade trees are always an attractive setting for the house. They are necessary, too, to add cool comfort to the hot summer days. As an investment, they always add considerably to the renting or selling value of a place. It is the trees and flowers around the house that give it environment and atmosphere and make it home. Trees do not wear out like other things; they constantly increase in value. There's a tree at your house, tied to old memories, that you wouldn't part with; plant others, you will be glad later.

Flowering Shrubs

The hardy Shrubs include so wide a range of plants as to supply every need of the garden and to fit every place and situation. A careful selection will give you flowers from earliest spring until fall. The Altheas, for example, include many shades of color and they thrive and bloom through the hottest, driest part of the summer. Spirea Van Houtte, Hydrangea and Barberry make handsome hedges; planted around the porch they add beauty to any house. The taller-growing shrubs like Mock Orange, Privet and the Dogwoods, make good screens to hide unsightly objects. If you wish to consult us about suitable varieties, give us a rough sketch of your house and grounds, locating the different objects, and we will gladly recommend the best things to serve each purpose.

Apart from your own enjoyment of beautiful things, there is the practical consideration to be remembered, that no investment adds so much to the rent or sale value of a place, as well-planted grounds. It is an investment that increases in value from year to year and yields yearly dividends in color and fragrance and beauty for your own enjoyment. ,

Hedge Plants

As a general rule, hedge plants should be set low so that the branches of the many stems appear to start from the ground, and the top well cut back, say to within six or eight inches of the ground. In this way a good solid hedge can be secured with plenty of body near the ground.

The ground should be well prepared before planting. Open trench 15 to 18 inches deep and fully as wide. Then set plants about 6 inches apart, in case of privet, and fill the trench with good rich soil. Be careful to pack dirt around the roots well. The same soil might be used, provided a liberal quantity of well-rotted cow manure is added. This will insure rapid and strong root growth, which means strong top growth, and will more than repay for the additional trouble and expense.

A Few Hints on Planting

Preparation For Planting.—Plow and sub-soil repeatedly, so as to thoroughly pulverize to a depth of 12 to 15 inches. When planting upon the lawn or grass plots, remove the sod for a diameter of 4 or 5 feet, and keep this space well worked and free from weeds.

Preparing the Roots.—Immediately before planting. all the bruised or wounded parts, where cut with the spade, should be pared off smoothly, to prevent decay and to enable them to heal over by granulation during the growth of the tree.

Shortening-In the Branches.—However carefully trees may be taken up, they will lose a portion of their roots, and if the whole top is allowed to remain the demand will be so great upon the roots that in many cases it will prove fatal to the tree.

Planting.—Dig holes in the first place large enough to permit the roots of the tree to spread out in their natural position; then, having the tree pruned as before directed, let one person hold it in an upright position, and the other shovel in the earth, carefully putting the finest and the best from the surface in among the roots, filling every interstice, and bringing every root in contact with the soil. When the earth is nearly filled in, a pail of water may be thrown on to settle and wash in the earth around the roots; then fill in the remainder and tread gently with the foot. The use of the water is seldom necessary, except in dry weather, early in Fall or late in Spring. Guard against planting too deep; the trees, after the ground settles, should stand in this respect as they did in the nursery. In very dry, gravelly ground, the holes should be dug twice the usual size and depth, and filled in with good loamy soil.

Climbing Roses

Every home should have Roses. In the South where the Tea Roses are hardy, we can grow Roses unsurpassed by those of California or any other section. No other flower combines such exquisite form, refinement of texture and delicate fragrance. The range in color is wide enough to please all tastes. A bed of Roses, blooming throughout the summer, is a constant source of pleasure. And it is something easy to have, for Roses take up little room and only require good soil, well fertilized, and some pruning.

If you haven't a rose bed, let us send you a dozen plants; tell us what colors you like and we will select varieties that will please you and do best where you live.

Cannas

Ready in April.

Only a few years ago, Cannas were grown only for the beauty of their broad, tropical-like leaves; the flowers were insignificant. They have been so developed by hybridizing that the flowers of the newest Cannas are larger than the blooms of Gladiolus and as exotic in texture and coloring as the finest Orchids. They thrive North and South, but it is in Southern gardens that their rank foliage makes them ideal bedding plants, for that gives a sense of refreshing coolness to the hot days of summer. The flowers of the newer, improved Cannas are among the most brilliant in the garden.

King Humbert

Very large, red flowers; bronze foliage. 4½ feet.

Meteor

Large deep red flowers; dark green foliage. 4 feet.
