A Recipe worth a Guinea.

A clergyman in the Church of England had a daughter who, to all appearances, was dying of consumption. A gentleman who attributed his own recovery to the following preparation gave the recipe to her father.

The young lady was speedily benefited by the remedy, and has now got quite well. She attributed her cure to its use, and out of gratitude and as a thank-offering, she has had a lot of printed papers issued at her own expense, so that other sufferers with

Consumption, Hacking Cough, and all Wasting Diseases

may have the same chance of recovery. She has written some hundreds herself, and hopes, by having them printed, to be the means of doing more good—
