INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE

The primary reason for the preparation of this book is to make available to the large number of persons annually naming new varieties, a list of the dahlia variety names now in use, as an aid in avoiding the duplication of names. While the principal aim has been to give an alphabetical list of the names used in the 1921, 1922 and 1923 catalogues, a number of other features have been added, so far as information on them is available. These are as follows:

1. The name of the originator of the variety or if that is not known, some catalogue or other work in which the name of the variety occurs.

2. The year of origin, or at least, the earliest date at which the records show the variety to have been in existence.

3. The class to which it belongs.

4. The color.

5. Synonyms or important variations in the name.

6. Record of registration or certificate of merit given by the American Dahlia Society.

7. Number of catalogues listing the variety during the three years of record.

LIMITATIONS

While all the available dealers' catalogues (223) were indexed, a number of catalogues requested were not received, and without doubt many dealers issuing catalogues are not known to the writer. No dahlia dealers have been located in other countries than the United States, Canada, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, at least no recent catalogues from other countries have been seen.

While much assistance has been obtained from more authoritative publications than dealers' catalogues, such as the reports of trial gardens and dahlia societies in America, England, Holland, etc., only catalogue names and descriptions were found for a large number of names. The variation in spelling, color descriptions and other things is of the greatest variety in different publications. The form which seems most probably correct has been adopted. Where more than one variety of the same color and class has the same name, there has rarely been any means of distinguishing them, and many such are no doubt confused in the list.

Incorrect spelling in some catalogues may throw a variety out of the proper alphabetical sequence and add another name to the list. But many such have been detected and referred to correct position. Many catalogues seem to have had no proof reading, and printers cannot be trusted to get such strange names correct without assistance.

While necessarily incomplete and with many errors, it is hoped that the list will furnish a basis from which further corrections and additions can be made by dahlia lovers until we have a complete and reliable record of all the well-established varieties. The blank pages have been added for convenience in making corrections and adding each year's crop of new names some of which are already appearing since the 1923 catalogues were indexed.

HISTORY

Since early in the nineteenth century, when the dahlia began to be cultivated in some variety, lists of the varieties in cultivation have been published. Some of these contained as many as a thousand names, but no recent extensive list has been put out. One of the most significant things about dahlias is the short life of most of the varieties. It is doubtful if any of the varieties introduced before 1870 are now in cultivation and few that were grown twenty-five years ago are among the thousands now catalogued.

F. H. Hall, of the Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y., began several years ago an index of dahlia varieties, which in 1915 contained over 5,000 names. The writer had also begun a similar undertaking and arranged for cooperation in furthering the work on the index. With the cooperation of officers of the American Dahlia Society, the writer began the publication of these indexes in the Bulletin of the Dahlia Society for April, 1921. This was entitled "List of all known dahlia varieties" and included all names that had been found up to that date.

After a small part of this list had been published, it was decided to first complete the work on the varieties now in cultivation as the varieties not now grown are of less importance under the present nomenclature rules, and the time necessary to look up the older varieties would greatly delay publication.

NAMES

The names are generally given as published in the catalogues the name preferred by the originator or the form most in use having preference when there are synonyms or variations in form and spelling. In a few cases the shorter names in accordance with the American Dahlia Society nomenclature rules are used.

Strict alphabetical order is followed, except that names sometimes abbreviated and sometimes spelled out (Mrs., Mr., Gen., Dr., Mme., Mad., etc.) are catalogued as if spelled in full. Names with a * are new names proposed to replace or simplify names already in use for another variety in cultivation, in the official catalogue of Standardized Plant Names published by the American Joint Committee on Horticultural Nomenclature. That list of new names was prepared in 1922 before the nomenclature rules were adopted by the American Dahlia Society.

ORIGINATOR

When known, the originator or raiser is given directly after the name. In very many cases this is lacking. Others copied from catalogue citations are no doubt erroneous, as sometimes the introducer or entrant in trial gardens or other sponsor for the variety is used indiscriminately in various lists. Where no originator is indicated, one of the catalogues in which the variety is listed is given with "cat." between dealer's name and date.

DATE

After the originator, or catalogue, is given a date. This is the earliest year which records so far seen, indicate the variety to have been in existence. This is sometimes the year of introduction, sometimes the year it was a seedling, in many cases it is the date of the oldest catalogue (cat.) or other publication in which the name has been seen. Some varieties no doubt have older dates given than the correct ones, as occasionally dealers put out a new variety of the same character as an older one under the same name, and similar varieties have sometimes been confused. Some varieties certainly originated much earlier than the date given, but no record of that has yet been found.

CLASS

After the date is given the class, abbreviated, using the classification of the American Dahlia Society in most cases, or a combination of their classes when the variety is intermediate in form, for example: dec. peo. where the flowers are sometimes of the peony flowered, sometimes of the decorative type.

COLOR

The color is given after the class, in the most general terms without attempting to make fine distinctions. Two color names together, as "yellow pink," mean an intermediate color or the latter color modified by the first. Two colors joined by "and" indicate the two colors distinct in different parts of the flower whether blending or not.

SYNONYMS

If any other names are used for the same variety, they are given after the color. When a name occurs in the alphabetical list without other data than another name following it, it is supposed to be a synonym of the second name. Translations and other changes of foreign names have produced a large number of synonyms, some of which probably have not been detected and referred to the proper variety.

REGISTRATION AND CERTIFICATES

"Reg." after a name shows that it is registered with the American Dahlia Society. "C. of M." signifies a certificate of merit given by the same society. Registration also is understood for all certificated varieties.

NUMBER OF TIMES CATALOGUED

The numbers at the end of each line, except for varieties found in only one catalogue, show the number of dealer's catalogues recording the variety in one of the three years covered by the record.

NOMENCLATURE RULES

The following nomenclature rules were adopted by the American Dahlia Society at the annual meeting in September, 1922, and were published in the Bulletin of the Society for September, 1922, page 22.

Principles of Nomenclature for Dahlia Varieties

The purpose of any standard for naming varieties is to secure convenient, accurate and stable names for all who wish to use them.

It is desirable that each variety worthy of a place in gardens should have a name and only one, and that this name should not be in use for any other variety of the same species. Names are more convenient if they are short and easily spelled and pronounced.

In botanical nomenclature and even with horticultural varieties of long life and permanent character, more rigid rules are desirable than with Dahlia varieties, most of which disappear from cultivation in a few years. The rights of the originator or introducer to suitable names for the varieties they wish to put on the market deserve consideration.

In order to obtain stable, convenient and desirable names for Dahlia varieties, the American Dahlia Society adopts the following rules as a guide for those who name Dahlia varieties or make use of variety names. The secondary clauses under each rule are advisory means of putting the rule into effect, but are not binding.

Rule 1. No two Dahlia varieties shall bear the same name. a. When the same name has been given two or more varieties it should be retained for the one for which it was first published unless later named varieties are in so much wider use that a change would result in much confusion. b. Names of varieties now in cultivation are not to be discarded because of their having been applied to varieties no longer grown, but it is better not to use these old names again, and the American Dahlia Society will not register new variety names, if they are known to have been used before. c. When it is necessary to change well-established names, they should be varied as little as possible, preferably by the addition of some qualifying term. d. Names given by the originator or introducer shall have preference over others. e. Names registered with the American Dahlia Society shall have preference over unregistered names.

Rule 2. When more than one name is in use for one variety the older name or the one most generally in use shall be retained. a. The number of catalogs that carry a name are to be considered in determining its usage.

Rule 3. The name of a Dahlia variety shall consist of one or two words. a. The names should be short, simple, easily spelled and pronounced. b. Foreign names should be retained unless long and difficult, when they may be shortened or translated. c. No variety should be named for a living person without his consent. d. No possessive forms should be used, and abbreviations, initials and apostrophes are to be avoided. e. Small connecting words like "of, de, von, the, Van," etc., are not counted, but it is better to avoid their use. f. This rule applies especially to new names to be given, but the Nomenclature Committee is instructed to prepare an approved list of simplifications of names now in use where change is very desirable.

Rule 4. The publication of a name with some designating character of the variety to which it is given, in any trade catalog or other printed matter with date of issue, or its registration with the American Dahlia Society, shall be sufficient to establish it. a. In catalogs and all formal lists of Dahlia varieties, the name of the originator or author of each name so far as known should be given.

Rule 5. The Nomenclature Committee shall consider all questions arising as to the validity of Dahlia variety names and report their decisions at the annual meetings of the Society, which when adopted by the Society shall be established for use under these rules.

SOURCES AND COLLABORATION

Requests for catalogues were sent to about 600 addresses of dealers and originators, gathered from various sources in all parts of the world. Many of these responded and a number at considerable effort sent lists of the varieties they had originated or introduced and much other valuable information on dates, etc. A second request was sent to those who did not answer the first. Thus their lists of varieties and catalogues were obtained from nearly all the leading dahlia dealers in the world, and from many who carry small lists of dahlias in a general seed and plant business.

The trade lists of 223 dealers have been catalogued. In addition, thousands of old catalogues, magazines and other publications have been gone over for originators, dates of origin, etc. This has taken a great amount of labor, as each catalogue for the three years had to be compared name by name with the manuscript index, and has occupied most of the spare time of the author for several years.

This opportunity is taken to thank the many who have aided in this effort to make the list as complete as possible, and especially the Library of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Miss Florence H. Thompson, Dr. W. E. Stafford, A. C. Goodacre, J. J. Broomall, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Limbery, Cayeux & LeClerc, Dobbie & Co., E. L. Kunzman, E. H. Krelage & Son, F. H. Hall, Mrs. Jessie L. Seal, W. W. Wilmore, Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Charles Turner, Dr. Graf v. Schwerin and Mrs. Chas. H. Stout, who have made especially important contributions to the success of the work.
