This work (Bulletin No. 49) is one of a series of papers intended to illustrate the collections belonging to the United States, and constituting the National Museum, of which the Smithsonian Institution was placed in charge by the act of Congress of August 10, 1846.

The publications of the National Museum consist of two series—the Bulletins, of which this is No. 49, in continuous series, and the Proceedings, of which the eighteenth volume is now in press. A small edition of each paper in the Proceedings is distributed in pamphlet form to specialists, in advance of the publication of the bound volume.

The Bulletins of the National Museum, the publication of which was commenced in 1875, consist of elaborate papers based upon the collections of the Museum, reports of expeditions, etc., while the Proceedings facilitate the prompt publication of freshly-acquired facts relating to biology, anthropology, and geology, descriptions of restricted groups of animals and plants, the discussion of particular questions relative to the synonymy of species, and the diaries of minor expeditions.

Other papers, of more general popular interest, are printed in the Appendix to the Annual Report.

Full lists of the publications of the Museum may be found in the current catalogues of the publications of the Smithsonian Institution.

Papers intended for publication in the Proceedings and Bulletins of the National Museum are referred to the Committee on Publications, composed as follows: Frederick W. True (chairman), Marcus Benjamin (editor), J. E. Benedict, Otis T. Mason, Leonhard Stejneger, and Lester F. Ward.

INTRODUCTION.

Many years ago the publication of a series of bibliographies of representative American naturalists was begun in the Bulletins of the United States National Museum. The series was intended to include analytical discussions of the writings of the men who have been especially prominent in the study, classification, and naming of the animals and plants of America, with a view to facilitating the use of the very extensive, widely scattered, and very complicated literature which has grown up in connection with American systematic biology.

Five bulletins have been published in this series: No. 20, The Published Writings of Spencer Fullerton Baird, 1843-1882, by G. Brown Goode; No. 23, The Published Writings of Isaac Lea, LL. D., by Newton Pratt Scudder; No. 30, Bibliography of Publications Relating to the Collection of Fossil Invertebrates in the United States National Museum, including complete lists of the writings of Fielding B. Meek, Charles A. White, and Charles D. Walcott, by John Belknap Marcou; No. 40, The Published Writings of George Newbold Lawrence, 1844-1891, by L. S. Foster, and No. 41, The Published Writings of Dr. Charles Girard, by G. Brown Goode.

The scope of this series would seem appropriately limited to the work of the naturalists living and working in America, but there is one exception which no one can doubt the propriety of making—that in the case of Mr. Philip Lutley Selater, the secretary of the Zoological Society of London, who has confined his work for the most part to American ornithology, and whose contributions to the systematic ornithology of the American Continent have far exceeded in extent those of anyone working in this country. His opportunities have been almost unlimited, and his utilization of these opportunities has been wonderfully effective.

The ornithology of Neotropical America was but little known when he began his work. Mr. George N. Lawrence, of New York City, also an indefatigable worker in the same field, has left an extensive record in his bibliography already published. His studies were carried on, however, in the intervals of an active business life, while Mr. Selater has been able to devote his entire time for more than half a century to systematic work, and has given most of his attention to the bird fauna of Central and South America, with results the extent of which is well shown by the analytical catalogue of his writings now published.

It is believed that this bibliography will materially lighten the labors of everyone engaged in the study of American birds or of the problems of geographical distribution.

Since Mr. Selater is not an "American naturalist" in the same sense as the others whose bibliographies have already been published, the present work is not included in the series of "Bibliographies of American Naturalists." He is, however, in another and a broader sense, one of the most eminent and prolific of American naturalists.

The plan adopted in the present volume is essentially different in its entirety from any previously used, although many of its features are familiar. The method of citation is essentially that of Coues, but the annotations to the titles are made as brief as possible. The object of such annotations is understood to be simply to describe each paper so that a person consulting the bibliography can determine without further research whether the paper cited is one which he needs to consult. The customary practice of analyzing the paper and enumerating under its title all the species, genera, and families which it describes is not followed. It is thought that a much more satisfactory plan has been adopted, namely, that of combining this enumeration of species with the alphabetical index, so that a person desiring an exact reference for use in synonymy, or indeed for immediate use in consulting the literature, can find in one alphabetical series all the names for which the author is responsible, each accompanied by an exact statement of place of description, the locality of the specimen, and the place where the type is to be found.

A separate list of species figured, with an exact bibliographical citation for the plate and the page related to it, is also given. The reason for including a separate list of the species figured is obvious, since a large number of Mr. Selater's figures relate to forms not for the first time described by him.

Much care has been given to the typography of this bibliography, with the purpose of securing compactness as well as clearness. The material here included, if printed in the same style as the bibliographies previously issued by the Museum, would have occupied at least four times the space. Notwithstanding this compactness of typography, the arrangement of the matter and the contrasts secured by the choice of type and by the system of spacing and indentation adopted has, it is believed, produced a page which is clearer and easier of reference than any previously used, at all events in the publications of the Museum.

Special acknowledgment is due to Mr. George Arthur Doubleday, clerk in the library of the Zoological Society of London, by whom the titles have been copied and arranged. Mr. Charles W. Richmond, of the National Museum, has done excellent service in reading proof and verifying the citations.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF PHILIP LUTLEY SCLATER.

Mr. Philip Lutley Sclater, secretary of the Zoological Society of London, is one of the best known of living zoologists. Few men have contributed so much as he to systematic ornithology, and none have done so much in the identification and description of new forms from the Western Continent. His work has been largely in connection with the luxuriant fauna of Neotropical America, little known at the time when he began his researches. Nearly every year since he began work in 1853, his correspondents in tropical America have laid at his feet new wealth in the form of collections from regions hitherto unexplored.

He has characterized 1,067 new species (245 in collaboration with Osbert Salvin), 135 new genera (25 with Salvin), and two new families of American birds.

Remarkable as has been his industry and his accuracy in diagnosis and description, the fact should be recognized that but for his energy and his skill as an organizer many regions now well known to the ornithologist would doubtless still remain unexplored.

The labors of Mr. Sclater have also resulted in great additions to our knowledge of the geographical distribution of vertebrates. Not only has he worked out many local faunas, but his generalizations upon the distribution of life and the division of the globe into zoogeographical regions have had great influence upon scientific opinion. He was one of the pioneers in this field of investigation, and his writings upon the subject have always been full of suggestion and have stimulated many others to engage in similar inquiry. His views as to the geographical distribution of birds are undoubtedly more widely accepted throughout the world than those of any other authority, and though, with increasing knowledge, modifications in the scheme proposed by him long ago will doubtless become more and more numerous, his studies of geographical distribution will always be considered as of fundamental importance, and the terms which he suggested for the principal divisions of the earth's surface will doubtless remain in ordinary use.

For more than thirty years the chief executive officer of the most wealthy and vigorous zoological society in the world, his influence upon the progress of natural history exploration has been very great, and his relations with American naturalists have always been cordial and cooperative.

Notwithstanding the great bulk of his technical publications, he has for four decades been prominent in the activities of scientific London and a noteworthy figure in the midst of every important scientific gathering.

At the age of sixty-seven he is still productive and adding each year a number of titles to the already remarkable assemblage of papers which have been published under his name.

It is the object of this bibliography to render thoroughly available to American naturalists all the results of the work of this eminent scholar, who has done for the ornithology of Central and South America what has been done by Nuttall, Wilson, Audubon, Baird, Allen, Merriam, Ridgway, and their associates for that of the Northern continent.

Philip Lutley Sclater was born November 4, 1829, at "Tangier Park," in Hampshire, the residence of his father, William Lutley Sclater, Esq.; and his boyhood was passed chiefly at "Hoddington House," another estate in the same county, belonging to his father, who died there in 1885 at the age of ninety-seven.

In beautiful Hampshire, close to the home of Gilbert White at "Selborne," he acquired early in life a love for outdoor life and a taste for the study of birds.

At the age of ten, he was sent to a well-known school at Twyford, near Winchester. In 1842 he went to Winchester College, and in 1845 was elected scholar of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. Being at that time under sixteen years of age, he was not called into residence at the University until Easter, 1846.

At Oxford his attention was given principally to mathematics, though his spare time was occupied by the study of birds and of the excellent series of natural history books then in the Radcliffe Library.

Hugh E. Strickland, the well-known ornithologist, who was at that time resident in Oxford as reader in geology, became interested in young Sclater and took him under his protection. At Strickland's chambers he met John Gould, shortly after his return from his great journey to Australia. From Strickland he received his first instruction in scientific ornithology. He began his collection of bird skins at Oxford, making British skins for himself and buying foreign species at a shilling apiece, whenever he could get to London for a run among the bird shops.

In December, 1849, he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, obtained his first class in the mathematical school and a "pass" in classics. At that time these were the only two recognized subjects for study in the university, no sort of encouragement being given to natural history.

After taking his degree he remained at his college in Oxford for two years, devoting his time principally to natural history. He also gave much attention to modern languages, studying with masters at home and always visiting the Continent in vacation time, and thus soon made himself familiar with French, German and Italian.

At this period of his life he was often in Paris, where he made the acquaintance of the great ornithologist, Prince Charles Bonaparte, at whose house, until his death in 1858, he was a frequent visitor.

In 1851 he entered himself for the bar, becoming a student at Lincoln's Inn, occasionally visiting Oxford, and passing his leisure time at Hoddington, but always enthusiastically engaged in natural history pursuits. The winter of 1852-53 was given to travel in Italy and Sicily.

In December, 1855, he was admitted fellow of Corpus Christi College, and having in the previous June completed his legal education and been called to the bar by the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn, he went the Western Circuit for several years.

In 1856 he made his first journey across the Atlantic, in company with the Rev. George Hext, a fellow collegian. Leaving England in July, they went by New York up the Hudson to Saratoga, and there attended the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. After that they went to Niagara, and thence through the Great Lakes to Superior City, at the extreme end of Lake Superior. Here they engaged two Canadian "voyageurs" and traveled on foot through the backwoods to the upper waters of the St. Croix River. This they descended in a birch-bark canoe to the Mississippi. Mr. Sclater subsequently published an account of this journey in the third volume of "Illustrated Travels." (See paper No. 576.)

Returning by steamboat and railway to Philadelphia, he spent a month in that city studying the splendid collection of birds belonging to the Academy of Natural Sciences, where he formed the acquaintance of John Cassin, Joseph Leidy, John Le Conte, and other then well-known members of that society. He returned to England shortly before Christmas, 1856.

For some years after this he lived in London, practicing occasionally at the bar, but always at work on natural history. He was a constant attendant at the meetings of the Zoological Society, of which he was elected, in 1850, a life member and in 1857 a member of the council.

In January, 1859, he made a short excursion to Tunis and eastern Algeria, in company with Mr. E. C. Taylor and two other friends. They visited the breeding places of the vultures and kites in the interior and gathered many bird skins, returning to London at the end of March.

At this time Mr. D. W. Mitchell, secretary of the Zoological Society, was about to vacate his post in order to take charge of the newly instituted Jardin d'Acclimation in Paris. For this position Mr. Sclater was selected by Owen and Yarrell, then influential members of the council. He was formally elected to it on April 30, 1859, and he has been re-elected annually ever since.

He found it necessary to devote himself entirely for three years to the reorganization of the affairs of the Society. The "Proceedings" and "Transactions" were at that time several years in arrears—they were brought up to date; the Garden Guide, which was out of print, was rewritten; the large staff at the gardens was rearranged and divided into departments under the superintendent, and various other reforms were introduced.

For thirty-five years his life has been almost entirely spent in work connected with natural history.

In 1874, when his brother (then the Right Hon. George Selater-Booth, M. P., and afterwards Lord Basing) accepted office in Mr. Disraeli's administration as president of the local government board, Mr. Selater became his private secretary, a position which he occupied for two years. But when subsequently offered a permanent place in the civil service he declined it, because he could not make up his mind to give up his dearly loved work in natural history.

His most engrossing duties have been in connection with the Zoological Society of London, to which, as principal executive officer, he has, of course, devoted most of his time. It is conceded by all that its affairs have prospered well under his direction. The number of fellows of the society, in 1859 about 1,700, has increased to over 3,000. The income of the society, which in 1858 was a little over £14,000, is now seldom under £25,000. Besides this, nearly all of the principal buildings in the society's gardens have been rebuilt during the past thirty-five years and fitted up with every sort of modern convenience for animals. The old office building (No. 11 Hanover square) has been sold and a larger and more convenient one (No. 3 Hanover square) bought in the same vicinity. A debt of £12,000 to the society's bankers, originally secured upon its house, has been paid off, and this property is now entirely the property of the Society without any sort of incumbrance.

The first floor of the society's house is devoted to the accommodation of a large and very valuable zoological library, under the care of a librarian and his assistant, and is the constant resort of the working zoologists of the metropolis. This library has been almost entirely accumulated since 1859.

The publications of the society, consisting of Proceedings, Transactions, Lists of Animals (of which eight editions have been published), the "Garden Guide" and "Zoological Record," are all issued from this office, with almost unfailing regularity. The scientific meetings of the society are held here during the eight months of the scientific session, and an abstract of their proceedings is always printed and issued within a week after each meeting has taken place.

Mr. Selater was selected by the British Ornithologists' Union as the first editor of "The Ibis," in 1859. He finished the first series in 1864.

Professor Newton took his place as editor of the second series, and Mr. Salvin as editor of the third. In 1877 he was associated with Mr. Salvin as joint editor of the fourth series, and in 1883 commenced the editorship of the fifth series, with Mr. Howard Saunders as co-editor. When the fifth series was completed, in 1888, he became sole editor of the sixth, which he finished in 1894. In 1895, having again obtained the assistance of Mr. Howard Saunders, he commenced work on the seventh series, of which two volumes are already complete.

When the British Ornithologists' Club was established in 1892, he joined heartily in the movement inaugurated by Dr. R. Bowdler Sharpe, and has usually had the honor of occupying the chair at its meetings and of delivering an inaugural address at the commencement of each session.

With the British Association for the Advancement of Science he has had a long connection, having become a member in 1847 at the second Oxford meeting, and having attended its meetings with few exceptions ever since. For several years he was secretary of Section D, and at the Bristol meeting in 1875 he was president of that section and delivered an address "On the present state of our knowledge of geographical zoology" (Paper No. 743). In 1876 he was elected one of the two general secretaries of the association, together with Sir Douglas Galton, and served in that capacity for five years, thereby becoming an ex officio member of the council, at the meetings of which he is a constant attendant.

Ever since the scientific journal "Nature" was started by Professor Lockyer in 1869, he has been a frequent contributor to that most important periodical.

In 1886 he began the transfer of his private collection of American bird skins to the British Museum. This collection contained 8,824 specimens, representing 3,158 species, belonging to the orders Passeres, Picariæ, and Psittaci. It may be remarked that when he began his collection at Oxford in 1847 he intended to collect birds of every kind and from all parts of the world, but after a few years resolved to confine his attention particularly to the ornithology of South and Central America and to collect only in the orders just mentioned, which were at that time generally less known than the others and of which the specimens are of a more manageable size for the private collector.

At the time of the beginning of this transfer, which was only completed in 1890, he agreed to prepare some of the volumes of the British Museum "Catalogue of Birds," relating to the groups to which he had paid special attention. In accordance with this arrangement by the expenditure of fully two years of his leisure time for each volume, he prepared the eleventh volume in 1886, the fourteenth in 1888, the fifteenth in 1890, and half of the nineteenth in 1891.

When the Challenger expedition started around the world in 1873, at the request of his friend, the late Sir Wyville Thomson, he agreed to work out all the birds. Soon after the return of the expedition in 1877 the specimens of birds collected were placed in his hands, and with the assistance of his ornithological friends were speedily reported upon in a series of papers contributed to the Zoological Society's "Proceedings." The whole of these papers were reprinted with additions and illustrations, and now form part of the second volume of the "Zoology" of the Challenger expedition.

Geography, being very closely connected with zoology, has always commanded Mr. Selater's hearty interest. He became a life member of the Royal Geographical Society in 1880, and has attended its meetings regularly ever since. He has also served two years on the council, and is a member of the Geographical Club. He has assisted in promoting many researches in foreign parts, chiefly, however, with a view to obtaining collections of natural history from strange places. Among these may be especially mentioned Sir H. H. Johnston's expedition to Kilima-Njaro in 1884 and Professor Balfour's visit to Socotra in 1880. He also took a leading part in sending out naturalists to Kerguelen Land and Rodríguez, along with the transit-of-Venus expeditions of 1874-75, and in many other similar efforts to explore little-known parts of the earth's surface. At the present time he is serving on two committees of this kind—one for the investigation of the fauna and flora of the Lesser Antilles, and the other for the further exploration of the fauna of the Hawaiian Islands. In both of these countries collectors are actively at work.

In 1884 he took advantage of the opportunity of the visit of the British Association to Montreal to cross the Atlantic a second time, and after the meeting to visit the United States. He was not in good health at that period, and did little, if anything, in the way of zoology. But he had the pleasure of seeing several of his former friends, especially Lawrence and Baird, and of making the personal acquaintance of Mr. Ridgway, Mr. Allen, Mr. Brewster, Dr. Merriam, and many other naturalists.

One of his closest friends was the late Professor Huxley, long a member of the Council of the Zoological Society, where he was one of Mr. Selater's most constant supporters. Professor Huxley, it may be said, was the chief advocate of the project of employing an anatomist at the society's gardens, and invented the title "prosector" for the new office. A. H. Garrod, who became prosector in 1871, and W. A. Forbes, who succeeded him in 1879—both very talented and promising young naturalists,—were dear friends of Selater, and the unfortunate death of Forbes during the excursion to the Niger in 1883 was a most severe blow to him. Notable among his other friends was Charles Darwin, who frequently visited him in his office, bringing long lists of memoranda for conference.

Mr. Selater married in 1862 Jane Anne Eliza Hunter Blair, daughter of the late Sir David Hunter Blair, baronet, of "Blairquhan," in Ayrshire. He has five children, of whom four are sons. The eldest,

William Lutley Sclater, has inherited his father's tastes: he was for four years an assistant in the Indian Museum in Calcutta, and after a short term of service as science master at Eton College was appointed director of the South African Museum at Cape Town, a position which he now occupies.

The second son, Capt. Bertram Lutley Sclater, is an officer in the Royal Engineers, and is now on duty in British East Africa, constructing a road to Uganda from the coast.

The third son, Lieut. Guy Lutley Sclater, an officer in the Royal Navy, is a specialist in torpedo work; while the youngest, Arthur Lutley Sclater, is a tea planter in Ceylon.

In 1887, after a continuous residence of more than twenty-five years in London, he gave up his residence in Elvaston Place, where so many American naturalists visiting England have received a hearty welcome. He has since lived in Hampshire at his country house, "Odiham Priory," about forty miles from town, taking a house for his family in London for three or four months at the beginning of each year. In summer he constantly visits the Continent, making excursions to see the various zoological gardens and museums.

Mr. Sclater received the degree of doctor of philosophy honoris causa from the University of Bonn in 1860, and in 1861 was elected a fellow of the Royal Society, on the council of which he has twice served. As has already been said, he has long been an active member of the Council of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, as well as of that of the Royal Geographical Society.

A list of the other scientific and learned societies of which he is a member is as follows:

His prominence in zoology has received frequent recognition in the naming of new forms. Among the animals which bear his name are the following: Anabates Sclateri, Pelzeln (Sitz. Akad. Wien, XXXIV, p. 132); Attila Sclateri, Lawrence (Ann. Lyc. N. Y., VII, 470); Barbus Sclateri, Günther (Cat. Fish. Brit. Mus., VII, 93); Calliste Sclateri, Lafresnaye (Rev. In conclusion, I quote the brief appreciations of Mr. Sclater written by representative American naturalists whom I have invited to place upon record their judgment as to the value of his services to science.

Dr. Clinton Hart Merriam, chief of the division of economic ornithology and mammalogy of the United States Department of Agriculture, writes as follows:

The value of Sclater's contributions to American ornithology can hardly be overestimated. What Nuttall and Wilson and Audubon and Baird have done for the birds of North America, Sclater has done for those of Central and South America. There is this difference in the method of treatment—that while the publications of North American ornithologists have been chiefly faunal or geographic, Sclater's have been for the most part systematic, dealing with assemblages of species rather than with the ornithology of special areas, though he has made some important faunal contributions also. In the field of zoological geography he early attained distinction, and his primary regions, based on the distribution of birds, have been widely accepted.

The excellent bibliography of his writings, prepared and published by the United States National Museum, is not only a model for this kind of work, but is also a most useful addition to the literature of systematic zoology.

For half a century Sclater has given practically the whole of his time to the study of birds and mammals. For nearly forty years he has had charge of the principal zoological publication of the world (the Proceedings of the Zoological Society of London), and the greater part of the time has edited the leading ornithological journal (The Ibis), so that a large share of the literature of zoology has passed directly under his eye. During the whole of this long period he has been at the head of one of the best zoological gardens and the greatest zoological society ever established—the Zoological Society of London. Naturally his office came to be the meeting ground of naturalists from all quarters of the globe, and specimens of new and rare animals continually poured into his hands. For these reasons he has been in a position, more than any other man of his time, to keep abreast of the progress of zoological science. That these opportunities have not been neglected is shown by the extraordinary array of titles, more than 1,200 in number, contained in his bibliography. The vast majority of these papers relate to the birds of tropical America, in which field the name of Sclater, like that of our own lamented Lawrence, will always occupy an exalted position.

Sclater is a good type of the industrious, systematic naturalist. His official position and personal energy brought him a wealth of new material. This he described in an endless series of papers on new species and new genera. Then, as additional specimens and additional species came in, he promptly published more comprehensive treatises in the form of synopses of genera or larger assemblages. And later, when still ampler material cast new light on the subject, he in numerous instances revised the same groups over again, correcting early errors, adding new species, and bringing the history of the groups down to date. These synopses and monographic revisions are the most important and useful of Sclater's contributions to science. Their number is amazing. Among the groups treated are the Orioles, Tanagers, Callistes, Pheasants, Cuckoos, Honey Creepers, Jacamars, Puff Birds, American Ant Birds (Formicariidae), American Rails, and many others. In addition to all these, his Nomenclator Avium Neotropicalium and Argentine Ornithology have come to be indispensable to the student of South American birds. And finally, as a fitting climax to this remarkable series, he has lived to erect his own monument in the admirable volumes he has contributed to the British Museum's Catalogue of Birds.

But Sclater's contributions to zoological science are not limited to birds. In the field of mammals he has published many important papers, illustrated by colored plates of high merit. Among the more useful of these are articles on the Deer, Rhinoceroses, and African Monkeys. He is now publishing, under joint authorship with Mr. Oldfield Thomas, a superb illustrated work on the antelopes and their allies, "The Book of Antelopes," the second volume of which is already well advanced. That the period of his activities may be continued far into the future is the earnest hope of his American friends.

Prof. Joel Asaph Allen, of the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, writes:

It is particularly fitting that the series of bibliographies published by the United States National Museum should include the writings of Philip Lutley Sclater, who has been for many years the most eminent authority and one of the most prolific writers on the ornithology of Central and South America. While Mr. Sclater's writings cover a much wider field, including many papers relating to Old World birds and to general subjects in ornithology, and many valuable contributions to mammalogy as well, American birds early became his chosen specialty, and it has engaged his chief attention for over forty years, and it is to be hoped will continue to do so for many years to come.

The bibliography of his writings, from their extent and authoritative character, forms, as already said, a most welcome addition to the National Museum series of bibliographies, which already embraces those of Baird, Girard, Lea, and Lawrence. The utility of such compilations is beyond question; they are at once a monument of respect to the author so honored and a convenience to all working naturalists engaged in the same fields of research.

Mr. Robert Ridgway, Curator of Birds in the United States National Museum, writes as follows:

The name of Sclater is so much a part of Neotropical ornithology that any knowledge of the latter without equal familiarity with the former would be impossible. Certainly no other name occurs so frequently nor ranks more highly in the literature pertaining to the birds of tropical America. Covering a period of more than forty years of unceasing activity, chiefly devoted to this, his favorite geographical field, the importance of Mr. Sclater's contributions to the ornithology of the Neotropical region can hardly be overestimated. Other ornithologists, it is true, have rendered important services so far as portions of America are concerned, as Salvin for Mexico and Central America, and Lawrence for the same area and the West Indies, while the former has been associated with Sclater in the preparation of various monographic papers, the "Nomenclator Avium Neotropicalium" and other works; but only Sclater has covered impartially the Neotropical region as a whole.

The subject of the geographical distribution of animals, with special reference to the birds, may be said to have first received serious attention from Mr. Sclater, who nearly forty years ago published a zoo-geographical scheme, which may fairly be regarded as the most satisfactory, in some respects, of those which have been proposed by various authors. Though not without its imperfections, the same may be said of all those proposed as improvements or substitutes, and none of the latter have received indorsement to the same extent as Mr. Sclater's.

Mr. Sclater's treatment of ornithological subjects is concise and conservative—more so, frequently, than some of us would wish it to be. Some of us on this side of the Atlantic differ with him in nomenclatural matters and regarding the status and discrimination of subspecies or geographical races; but in these respects his methods are those of a particular school, which we are pleased to call the "old," and which few, if any, of his countrymen have forsaken. We fondly hope, however, that the conservatism of our English brethren may sometime yield to the sound principles upon which the so-called "American" school have based their "innovations," and the complete harmony of methods between ornithologists of the two countries, so much to be desired, be thereby established.

Although Sclater's ornithological work has extended through so many years—far more than are allotted to most of us—neither his interest nor activity show sign of abatement, and it is sincerely hoped that a career so eminently useful may long be continued.
