FAIR GROUNDS—SHOWING TRACK AND GRANDSTAND

Announcement

OF THE TENNESSEE STATE FAIR OF 1907

THE success of the State Fair for the year 1907 is already an assured fact, and while the fair of last year was satisfactory in every way, the one of the present year will far surpass it in exhibits, interest and patronage. The success of last year encouraged the management to new achievements to make this the greatest State Fair of the present year, and they have been emboldened to make many improvements in the grounds and provide new features and increased premiums for the pleasure and profit of its patrons. ¶ The interest that is shown by the farmers, live stock breeders and manufacturers of Tennessee fully establishes their deep interest in the Fair of this year, and that they realize and appreciate the great benefits to be derived from an annual exhibition of the products of the farm, herds and factories. ¶ The management has spared no pains, labor or expense in arranging for this exhibition, and feels confident that all visitors will be enthusiastic over what they will see—the products of the brain and brawn of the sons of the grand old “Volunteer State.” We extend a hearty welcome to every one from every state, and bid them enjoy themselves to the utmost . . .

Information for the Public

4. The Fair grounds will be open to the public on Monday, September 23, at 9 o'clock a. m. and will open each day thereafter at 8 o'clock a. m.

5. Vehicles and automobiles will be admitted to the grounds at the main driveway on payment of the following fees: One-horse vehicle, 25 cents; two-horse vehicle, 35 cents; one-seat automobile, 25 cents; two-seat automobile, 35 cents. A well-arranged hitch-yard will be provided by the Fair Association, and no hitching will be allowed on the grounds except in this enclosure. A separate yard will be furnished for automobiles.

6. The Fair Association will also provide a hitch yard just outside the grounds, where visitors may hitch their horses free of charge.

7. A conveniently located check room will be provided on the grounds where visitors may check lunch baskets and other articles at a small cost.

8. Within the grounds is located a beautiful grove that will be set aside for lunch grounds and the general public is cordially invited to avail themselves of the conveniences here offered. Basket dinners may be brought to the grounds and the noon hour pleasantly spent in meeting and eating with one's friends. For the convenience of those who do not care to bring their dinners, these grounds will be provided with a modern restaurant catering the best the market affords at a reasonable price.

9. The facilities for reaching the grounds are excellent, both by street railway and private conveyance. Visitors coming to the Fair over the Illinois Central Railway may leave trains at Fair Grounds Station, within a few feet of the south entrance to the grounds. Those coming from south of Nashville over the Louisville & Nashville Railroad may leave trains at Wedgewood Avenue, a short distance from the main entrance and directly on the line of the street railway to the grounds. The Eighth Avenue and Glendale Street Railway line runs direct to the main entrance of the grounds.

ADMISSION FEES.

THE COUCH BEAUTIFUL

The perfection of modern art and industry is in no way better exemplified than in the recent products of cabinet makers, whose skill and ingenuity appear to have exhausted the possibilities of all of the woods of the forest.

Distance has offered no barrier to the importation of materials, nor has any invention or expedient been overlooked that would, in the slightest way, aid in attaining the highest achievement in this line of work.

Great, however, as the advancement has been in all branches of wood-working, notably in fine Furniture and Pianos, none has equalled that of the present day Casket, which has been brought to a plane of beauty and elegance that places it among the most exquisite products of the day.

To this particular line of cabinet work The National Casket Co. has given its sincerest and best efforts, in the belief that there should be nothing more chaste or beautiful than the couch of final rest.

With this idea always in mind it has been their constant endeavor to make every production an object of beauty, appealing to the artistic sense, not only by its richly carved Oriental wood, but also by soft and effective drapings of the finest, sheerest silk.

The output of the company's various mills comprises caskets of every conceivable design, from the rarest woods elaborately carved, to the simple unadorned couch, but all are alike in way of substantial construction and superior workmanship.

The latest products of the National Casket Company, which are the best that long experience and ample capital can produce, are to be had of the leading Funeral Directors in the United States. Upon intimation to any of them that inspection is desired, it may be had at any of the Company's show rooms, where caskets made from a great variety of woods are to be seen, and private selection made at any time.

What Tennessee Needs

Tennessee has much to be thankful for in the way of citizenship, religious and educational institutions, boundless mineral resources, excellent forests, fine livestock, fertile lands, the best water, the finest climate and its varied manufacturing and industrial institutions, but it has some "wants" yet.

She needs more capital, coupled with industry, pluck and brains to develop her boundless resources. Intelligent, industrial emigrants to build homes in the State and to become prosperous and happy through the cultivation of her fruitful soil. Manufacturers to add millions of dollars to the value of her cotton crop by spinning and weaving into thread and cloth for mills, steel works, and other industries into which large quantities of iron and steel enter, near our inexhaustible iron ore deposits where coal of the finest quality and limestone for fluxing, can be found in abundance and in close proximity; to manufacture the timber of which there is estimated to be in the State more than 16,000,000 acres, about one-half of which is yet virgin forest, into the finished product instead of shipping it in the log or as rough lumber, to distant markets; to operate fertilizer factories, to convert the phosphate rock into commercial fertilizers which is now shipped in the rock to distant States and to Europe; to manufacture our large tobacco crops into plug and smoking tobacco, cigars and snuff; agricultural implement manufactories, wagon and carriage factories and wood factories or every kind; manufactories, for hardware articles of various kinds.

These are only a few of the many industrial manufacturing concerns that could be successfully and profitably established and conducted under the favorable conditions existing in Tennessee, and capital and capacity will find an open door waiting for them.

Supplement to Preface

This being home-coming year, the publisher has deemed it but fitting to depart somewhat from the commonplace fair catalogue and program, by introducing a few brief articles on subjects of moment and deep interest to home-comer and the people-at-large, alike.

The religious, educational, military, civil and commercial status of any country or State determine the standing of her citizenship, and upon it rests the pride and welfare of her people.

Since this is true, what State in the Union has more to awaken a just pride, or can lay claim to better standing? A God-fearing people—the educational center of the South—fast becoming a potent figure in the commercial world. And every important battle-field throughout the land, stained with the blood of her true sons, entitles us to high standing and great honor in the marts of trade, the halls of learning, and pages of history.

THE FIRST TENNESSEE REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

What is more appropriate than a brief sketch of Tennessee's most historic military organization as representative of the military spirit and record of the Volunteer State?

The First Tennessee Regiment of Infantry, representative, also, of patriotism, law and order, and standing for peace and the protection and safety of life and property—a regiment in which every Tennessean, and many ancestors of Tennesseans, have served to their everlasting credit and glory. As Tennessee grows in prosperity it should not neglect that spirit and sentiment which has done so much to make it great and famous in peace and in war—the spirit of Andrew Jackson, John Sevier, Bedford Forrest, Admiral Farragut, Sam Davis, and many other leaders and heroes, who will live in history for ages.

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS OF TENNESSEE.

That educational interests have always been of deep concern to her citizenship is attested in the fact that education in Tennessee antedates even the establishment of civil government itself. The great progress in this line, the establishment of universities, colleges and academies has been so marked that our Capital city has been styled the “Athens of the South”—a fact that will bear witness that we have always kept the true faith.

TENNESSEE.

Deep seated in every Tennessean's heart is a feeling of patriotic love of his mother State. In presenting our article, “Tennessee,” we know that, brief though it may be, it will be sufficient to cause a feeling of just pride to rise in the heart of every true son of the State—and why not? Is not our land a land of beauty, grandeur, plenty and great resources—a land replete with deeds of valor of her sons? Does not every magnolia-laden breeze whisper a story of the sacrifices and heroism of her daughters? Indeed, Tennesseans, we may be proud, for when we turn our eyes upon our sun-kissed peaks, our beautiful streams, our peaceful valleys, we can but feel that the richest blessings have been showered upon us from the battlements of heaven, and that our land is but the reflex of the smile of an approving God.

KINGS' MOUNTAIN

The First Tennessee

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THIS REGIMENT, THE MOST NOTED OF TENNESSEE'S MILITARY ORGANIZATIONS.

BY COL. W. C. TATOM.

The history of the First Tennessee Regiment, Infantry, is a part of the history of every war in which Tennesseans have engaged since its organization nearly three-quarters of a century ago. It is a proud and glorious history. It is a record of service for the State and Nation and civilization that entitles it to be remembered and honored so long as valor and patriotism and that spirit which smiles at death when duty calls to danger are esteemed manly virtues by the men and women of Tennessee.

In 1836, at the outbreak of the Seminoles, the United States on June 6th called for twenty companies from Tennessee, and forty-two responded in less than thirty days. Twenty were organized at Fayetteville and five of these were formed into the First Tennessee Regiment with 775 men. J. B. Bradford was elected Colonel; Terry H. Cahal, Lieutenant-Colonel, and Powhattan Gordon and A. F. Goff, Majors. The regiment was in the battle of Withlacooche, and in various engagements with the Indians, winning a reputation for soldierly bearing, determination and courage; fighting and pushing the Indians into the very heart of the everglades. Its term of service having expired, it took boat at Tampa Bay, proceeded to New Orleans, and thence home to Tennessee.

When President Polk called on Tennessee for 3,000 volunteers to fight Mexico, 30,000 responded, and the required number had to be selected by ballot. The First regiment went into camp near Nashville June 1, 1846, with W. B. Campbell, of Smith County, Colonel; S. R. Anderson of Sumner County, Lieut.-Colonel, and R. Alexander of Sumner County, and Robert Farquhar of Lincoln, Majors. During its early days in Mexico the regiment was decimated by fever, measles and dysentery, and reduced to less than 500 men. In the storming of Monterey it rushed against a storm of balls and grape-shot, scaled a parapet and planted the banner presented to it by the young ladies of the Nashville Female Academy. Over a third of the Regiment fell in this battle, where it won the name of the "Bloody First." It took part in the Siege of Vera Cruz and fought desperately at Cerro Gordo. Its term of one year's service having expired, General Scott ordered it home. It is said to have been the largest regiment to enter the field, but only 300 lived to see their homes again.

The First Tennessee Infantry—known as "Maney's First," to distinguish it from Col. Peter Turney's Regiment—was organized in April, 1861, and was mustered into the service at Nashville. It was composed of Company A, Rock City Guards, Nashville; Captain, T. F. Sevier. Company B, Rock City Guards; Captain, J. B. Craighead. Company C, Rock City Guards; Captain, R. C. Foster. Company D, Williamson Guards; Captain, James P. Hanna. Company E, Tennessee Riflemen, Nashville; Captain, George Harris. Company F, Railroad Boys, Nashville; Captain, John L. Butler. Company G, Brown Guards, Maury County; Captain, George W. Campbell. Company H, Maury Grays; Captain, A. M. Looney. Company I, Rutherford Rifles; Captain, William Ledbetter. Company K, Martin Guards, Giles County; Captain, Hume R. Field; George Maney, Colonel; T. F. Sevier, Lieutenant-Colonel; A. M. Looney, Major.

The Regiment served in Virginia until 1862, and returned in time to take part in the second day's fight at Shiloh. After this battle Colonel Maney was made Brigadier, and Captain Hume R. Field was elected Colonel of the Regiment, and Captain John Patterson, Lieutenant-Colonel. It became part of Maney's Brigade, Cheatham's Division. It participated in the battle of Perryville, Kentucky, where it lost more than half of its strength in killed and wounded. Colonel Field, always brave and daring, was especially noted for his gallantry in this fight.

At Murfreesboro, the First and Twenty-seventh were consolidated and fought in the battle at Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga, and Missionary Ridge. It fought at Resaca, Adairsville, and in the "dead angle" at Kennesaw Mountain, and in the en-gements around Marietta. It was in the bloody battle of Franklin and later in that of Nashville.

When the Army of Tennessee retreated South, the First Regiment marched through Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and into North Carolina to Bentonville, and after the surrender at Greensboro, started for home May 3, reaching home May 21. Out of the 1,167 who went out in the First Regiment, only 125 returned at the close of the war. The Rock City Guards went out with 334 men and there were only 27 at the surrender.

On President McKinley's first call for troops, the First Regiment was organized in Nashville in May, 1898. It left Nashville June 10 and reached San Francisco June 17. October 30 seven companies sailed on the Zelandia for the Philippines, and November 6 the remainder sailed on the City of Pueblo. William C. Smith was Colonel; Gracey Childress, Lieutenant-Colonel; Albert Bayless, Senior Major; B. Frank Cheatham and John McGuire, Majors; and James Knox Polk, Adjutant. The Regiment first did guard duty at Bilib Prison, Manila. February 5 Colonel Smith fell dead while on the firing line. After service around Manila and Cavite, the Regiment was ordered to Iloilo, where it helped to capture the city, its work being rapid, determined and gallant. It took part in many skirmishes and in repelling night attacks, and later engaged in lively fighting around Iloilo and Jara, and on the Island of Panay, and also Cebu.

Though frequently exposed to danger from a treacherous foe, the Regiment was exceedingly fortunate, losing all told only 26 men, 9 of these in the Philippines. When the Regiment was aboard a transport under sailing orders for home, it voluntarily disembarked and assisted in repulsing the enemy—an act which won it praise from the President of the United States, and added to its enviable reputation.

After the death of Colonel Smith, Lieutenant-Colonel Childress became Colonel, and Major Bayless Lieutenant-Colonel, with B. F. Cheatham, John E. McGuire, and William J. Whitthorne, Majors. When Major Cheatham raised a battalion out of the First to join the 37th Volunteers, Captain A. C. Gillem was elected Major.

On its return to the United States the Regiment was mustered out at San Francisco, but returned to Nashville in a body, where it received an ovation.

This in the briefest outline is the history of the First Tennessee—a history which reaches through the Seminole war in the Florida everglades; the plains of Mexico; many bloody fields and weary marches of the Civil War, and the jungles and wilds of the far Philippines. It has fought Indians, Mexicans and Filipinos, served in the war with Spain, and poured out its blood in the great fractricidal war that tried the very souls of men. Men come and men go, but the First Tennessee has ever responded to the call of duty, and nowhere has it ever failed to do its duty to the utmost. Three generations of Tennesseans have served with its colors, and all have reflected credit on the Volunteer State—a name of which every Tennessean should be proud.

The First Tennessee was reorganized in 1903, and W. C. Tatom was elected Colonel, and W. J. Whitthorne, Lieutenant-Colonel. They were re-elected in 1906. The present regimental officers and staff are: W. C. Tatom, Colonel; W. J. Whitthorne, Lieutenant-Colonel; J. H. Samuels, Captain and Adjutant; T. E. Halbert, Major and Surgeon; Lucius E. Burch, Captain and Surgeon; John W. Moore, Captain and Surgeon; Thomas Goodall, Captain and Quartermaster; W. W. Kinkead, Captain and Commissary; W. B. Holmes, Captain and Chaplain. The Majors are Otho Robinson and Robert E. Martin. Of these officers five served in the Philippines and two in Cuba. A number of the line officers, Captains and Lieutenants, also saw service in the Philippines, as did very many of the enlisted men, among whom are a number who have served in the regular army. The Regiment has had practical experience and instruction in camp life, drill, guard duty, field exercises, manouevers, target practice, tactics, strategy, etc., and if the State or the Nation should need its services, in ten hours it can be mobilized, equipped for service and ready for duty.

Period of Service: Seminole War, Florida, 1836; Mexican War, 1846; Civil War, 1861-5; war with Spain and with Filipinos, 1898-9.

List of Colonels: J. B. Bradford, W. B. Campbell, George Maney, Hume R. Field, W. C. Smith, Gracey Childress, W. C. Tatom.

Educational Interests of Tennessee

BY A. P. FOSTER, A.M.

The desirability of education was firmly implanted in the minds of the earliest settlers of Tennessee. In Tennessee education gained its first lodgment west of the Allegheny Mountains. In Middle Tennessee, indeed, education antedated even the establishment of civil government itself; for the sister of General James Robertson, the "Father of Tennessee," herself taught the children on board the boat which Col. John Donelson brought to the site of Nashville in 1780; and the school, thus begun, was continued after the landing.

PEABODY NORMAL COLLEGE

While the pioneers were by no means scholars in the modern sense of that word they were of great mental vigor and high intelligence. That there were few illiterates is shown by two conclusive instances: In 1776 a petition for better protection was sent to the Provincial Council of North Carolina by one hundred and fourteen men of the Watauga Association, the first settlement in what is now East Tennessee; and of this number all but two were able to sign their own names.

Again, a few years later, the settlers of the Great French Lick (Nashville) to the number of 256 formed an agreement and only one was compelled to make his mark.

These advance guards of western civilization early provided for educational facilities. With them the spelling book went hand in hand with the Bible, the rifle and the axe. With fourteen years after the first permanent white settler, William Bean, braved the savage by erecting his cabin within the limits of what is now Tennessee; seven years before this land became even a Territory, and fourteen years before it became a State, the first school was established in 1783. All honor and respect are due to Samuel Doak, the founder of this "the first literary institution that was established in the great valley of the Mississippi." He was the firm, fearless, dogmatic and brainy John Knox of the West; his influence over the hardy pioneers of those days was remarkable, and the impress of his genius, and the far-reaching effects of his work on succeeding generations is inestimably great.

This school was chartered by the Legislature of North Carolina and was named Martin Academy in honor of the Governor. It was located at Salem in Washington County, and was re-chartered in 1795 and re-named Washington College.

Doak was the President of the College continuously until 1816, when he resigned in favor of his son. The institution which the elder Doak employed to direct the popular mind of the new territory is the cause of education was continued by his son and his successors and still exists, a useful school of the Academical-college type, and the spirit of its founder still inspires the people of the beautiful region in which it is located.

Samuel Doak and his associates, Houston, Balch, Carrick, and Craighead, constituted an excellent representation of that branch of the army of the Lord which looked upon the school house as the twin sister of the "church house," and believed that ignorance was the lever which satan employed for the enslavement of mankind to his service. Craighead, indeed, was in hot water with his church authorities and suspected by some of heresy but, such his force of character and his honesty that by 1829 he had induced the church to sanction his educational views.

This man, Rev. Thomas B. Craighead, servant of God and of his fellow men, is especially mentioned here because he was not only the associate of Samuel Doak, but also the first president of Davidson Academy, which later became the University of Nashville.

UNIVERSITY OF NASHVILLE.

While the first beginnings of education in this State were made in East Tennessee, Middle Tennessee followed in similar efforts with a very brief interval. It was Robertson, too, who laid the foundation for the reputation which Nashville has now as an educational center; for in 1785 he secured from the Legislature of North Carolina a grant for Davidson Academy of 240 acres of land. For many years Andrew Jackson was a member of its board of trustees and did much for it during its infant struggles, its transformation into Cumberland College and its final metamorphosis into the University of Nashville in 1825.

Rev. Thomas B. Craighead was the first president of the new academy and for twenty years he taught this school in his own church building. In 1806 the name was changed to Cumberland College in the hope it might be the recipient of one-half of the 100,000 acres which the Federal Congress had decided to grant for the support of two colleges, one in the eastern and the other western part of the State. But the college became involved in the mazes of the land controversies, and did not prosper for this reason and for other reasons, until the advent of Dr. Phillip Lindsley, who came to Nashville in 1824 and was elected president of the college.

At the time of his election this famous educator was vice-President of Princeton and in the very flower of his great ability and enthusiasm; and for the ensuing twenty-five years the career of Cumberland College, which, in 1825, became the University of Nashville was bound up in the career of its remarkable president.

Lindsley, like Doak and Craighead, was an enthusiastic educator, and his intention was to make the University of Nashville the equal of the great colleges North and East. He entered upon his work and conducted it with broad catholicity and comprehension under the most adverse conditions, such as lack of funds, the want of an effective common school system and of preparatory schools, and the educational crudeness of a citizenship but recently emerged from the struggles with the Indians and with the hardships of the wilderness. Nevertheless his powerful appeals by speech and by pen, and the undeniable merits of his powerful school were felt in the gradual emergence of a sentiment for education which laid the foundations for the present greatness and grandeur of this institution in particular and for Tennessee schools in general.

The Board of Trustees during Lindsley's reign included many of the most influential public men of the State, and from its 1,000 students, the aggregate number from 1825 to 1850, came twenty-eight members of Congress and a correspondingly large number of eminent men in other walk of life. Phillip Lindsley was, without question, the greatest educational force in Tennessee in his day; indeed, one of the greatest educational forces of the whole country in the nineteenth century, a force comparable to Mann and Barnard and Wayland and Sears, a force which made of a weak school a strong university which is to-day a response to his prophetic faith. For from the beginnings enumerated this institution has expanded until it now embraces the famous Peabody Normal College, the Winthrop Model School, the Montgomery Bell Academy and a medical college—comprising hundreds of students and scores of instructors. Under its present Chancellor, ex-Governor James D. Porter, one of the most distinguished public men whom the South possesses to-day, the history of its usefulness is entering upon a new and still more glorious chapter.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

The excellent work of the Medical Department will be readily understood from the subjoined extract from the address of Chancellor Porter delivered at the Fifty-third Commencement of this College on March 31, 1904. He said:

“In the year 1849 the Trustees provided a Medical Department for the University of Nashville. In twelve months it was the most prosperous of the medical schools of the South, with the largest student attendance. Now, after the lapse of more than half a century, its classes are the largest of any school in the Southern Medical College Association.

"The attendance for the session now about to close was 308, one of the largest the school has ever known in spite of the fact that a full four year course is given. The number of alumni at the close of the last session was 4,453, this being the largest number of any Southern school.

"The prestige of the department is an important factor in its success, but it owes more to the character and ability of its teaching force than to all other agencies. The gentlemen who constituted the faculty in 1849 were the foremost men of the profession. It was my good fortune to know them, to be familiar with their professional attainments, and to know personally their immediate successors. I can therefore say with confidence that the faculty of the Medical Department has always been the strongest; strong in personal character, in professional culture, and in experience, but never abler or stronger in all of these elements than to-day.

"I congratulate you, young gentlemen, upon your good fortune in having been under the tuition and direction of men of this type; the opportunity is worth more than money, and I believe that you have not been unmindful of it. I believe that your alma mater will have good reason for pride in your future careers."

While the University of Nashville, under its various designations was laying the foundations of education broad and deep in Middle Tennessee, the great institution, now known as the University of Tennessee, was working out its problem of salvation in the Eastern part of the State. The settlers who had revolted from North Carolina in 1784 and had set up an independent State known as Franklin, had placed in their Constitution a provision for the "encouragement of all kinds of learning," and has provided for a central university and for public grammar schools in each county, to be endowed with public lands and supported by local taxation. In 1790 North Carolina ceded to the United States the territory, which six years later was admitted as the sixteenth State into the Union. Wm. Blount became the Governor of the Territory, one of whose first acts was the creation of a school known at the present time as Greenville and Tusculum College. The following day it created Blount College, named in honor of the governor, and located it at Knoxville, the capital of the Territory.

The board of trustees of the new college was remarkable. It included the governor of the Territory, the first two United States Senators, the first two Judges, John Sevier, the first governor of Tennessee, four subsequent senators of the United States, three governors and the proprietor of the first newspaper published in Tennessee. Rev. Samuel Carrick, one of Doak's associates, was the first President.

TENNESSEE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

In 1806 Blount College was merged in East Tennessee College and, like Cumberland College, it suffered in consequence of land troubles. Of this period of its existence the historian of the University says: "From the death of the first president, Rev. Samuel Carrick, who bears the two-fold honor of planting the Presbyterian religion in the wilderness of Tennessee, founder and first pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Knoxville, and the first president of East Tennessee College, to the close of the Civil War, the history of the college is a story of struggle and repeated disappointment, of heroic efforts on the part of successive presidents, conspicuous among whom were Shannon, Coffin, Estabrook and Cook, of alternate periods of advance and retreat." "The history of the period before the Civil War was largely taken up with the effort to realize the land-grant fund and to overcome the popular prejudice which was engendered against the college on account of this struggle."

In 1820 the college united with the Hampden-Sidney Academy of Knoxville, and in 1840 its name was changed to the East Tennessee University. A few years prior to this date there became a member of its faculty a man who was destined to be one of the strongest publicists of Tennessee, one of the great names of Southern educators, one of the most eminent thinkers of the United States—Horace Maynard.

The deluge of the Civil War prevented all efforts of the college which were not renewed until the resurrection of the University of Tennessee after that cataclysm. The work of this institution in recent years has made it one of the strongest universities in the United States. In a report of the United States Commissioner of Education several years ago was this significant statement: "The State University of Tennessee, at Knoxville, after the close of the Civil War, became a celebrated headquarters of the movement for the establishment of the graded common school in Southern villages and cities. Perhaps the most brilliant group of superintendents of the graded schools of the Southern Atlantic and Southwestern States dates from this university, several of the most distinguished being natives of Tennessee and graduates of this school."

EARLY PUBLIC EDUCATION.

From the very foundation of the State the leaders in public affairs acknowledged the benefit that would accrue to all the people from a good system of public instruction, and the messages of all the governors were filled with suggestions looking to the upbuilding of such schools. The Federal Government, too, from the very beginning showed a disposition to assist the States in their efforts for popular education.

In 1806 the United States, by what is known as the "cession act," granted to Tennessee a generous appropriation of public lands for the promotion of education. By a curious paradox, however, the public school system of this State was hindered by the very means designed to make it strong and efficient. The late Capt. W. R. Garrett, Professor of History in the Peabody Normal College, has given this explanation of the misfortune referred to:

CAMPUS AND SOME OF THE BUILDINGS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF THE SOUTH

"In Ohio and in other States carved out of the Northwest Territory the sixteenth section in each township was designated and conveyed direct to the inhabitants of the township. The admirable system of United States surveys definitely located the grant and the title was vested. Tennessee, which had been admitted ten years before its land cession, had not been reached by this system of surveys. The township and the section could not therefore be designated, and Congress did not vest title in the inhabitants of a township or district. The provision was in the following words: 'And the State of Tennessee shall, moreover, in issuing grants and perfecting titles, locate 640 acres to every six miles square in the territory hereby ceded, where existing claims will allow the same, which shall be appropriated for the use of schools for the instruction of children forever.' This provision imposed a duty on the State, but failed to vest the title in the subordinate civil division. Tennessee had no series of civil divisions of six miles square corresponding to the township. In the meantime much of the land had been taken up by valid claims, and, with the rapid stream of immigration which poured in, the squatter preceded the surveyor. Many acts were passed by the Legislature to protect the school lands, but from the vague nature of the grant, and possibly from the failure to appreciate its value, the opportunity to utilize it was lost."

Another provision of the same act appropriated 100,000 acres for the benefit of two colleges and 100,000 acres for the benefit of academies, one for each county, the land to be sold for not less than $2.00 per acre and the proceeds to be invested in funds for the purpose aforesaid.

Consequently charters were granted, according to a list recently compiled by Mr. J. G. Cisco, of Nashville, to the following academies:

Harpeth Academy, Williamson county; Robertson Academy,, Davidson county; Bradley Academy, Rutherford county; Trans-Montania Academy, Sumner county; Campbell Academy, Wilson county; Geneva Academy, Smith county; Montpelier Academy, Jackson county; Liberty Academy, Robertson county; Rural Academy, Dickson county; Tracy Academy, Dickson county (spelled Dixon in the Act); Overton Academy, Overton county; Dover Academy, Stewart county; Duffield Academy, Carter county; Martin Academy, (rechartered), Washington county; Jefferson Academy, Sullivan county; Rhea Academy, Greene county; McMinn Academy, Hawkins county; Madison Academy, Grainger county; Speedwell Academy, Claiborne county; Maury Academy, Jefferson county; Anderson Academy, Cocke county; Nancy Academy, Sevier county; Hampden-Sidney Academy, Knox county; Union Academy, Knox county; Union Academy, Anderson county; Rittenhouse Academy, Roane county; Porter Academy, Blount county, Franklin Academy, Campbell county.

Valadolid Academy was established in Davidson county about the year 1800, but was not chartered until Oct. 18, 1805.

Fisk's Female Academy, established Sept. 11, 1806, was the first chartered school for young women west of the Alleghanies. It was located at Hilham, in Overton county.

Washington Academy was established at Dover, Stewart county, in 1807.

Woodward Academy, Maury county, was chartered in 1809.

Pulaski Academy, Giles county; Fayette Academy, Lincoln county; Dickson Academy, Bedford county, and Tate Academy, Humphreys county, were chartered in September, 1809.

An act passed Nov. 22, 1809, granted charters to Priestly Academy, White county; Quincy Academy, Warren county; Carrick Academy, Franklin county; Tennessee Academy, Rhea county; Love Academy, Bledsoe county; Johnson Academy, Hickman county.

Knoxville Female Academy was established in 1811; Maryville Female Academy in 1813, and Nashville Female Academy in 1817.

The Late Bishop Quintard in the Fore Ground

It appears, therefore, that there were forty-four chartered academies in Tennessee before the year 1818, in addition to the colleges which have received previous mention.

Nevertheless, the ample provisions made by the general government for public education in Tennessee were, in large measure, nugatory, if not positively injurious, and certainly retardative in results for the following reasons:

The population was sparse. The loose allotment and survey of the lands presented an invitation for all to come and secure homes without cost, and many had done so. Lands had been granted by the Federal Government, by the State of North Carolina, by the State of Tennessee and by the Indians; and transfers had been made by many owners and settlers, some with record, many without record. Hence it happened with loose habits of local organization and government that prevailed, together with the active opposition of many who were influential and the indifference of the lower white classes, that public education failed to become popular. On the contrary, attempts to carry out the provisions of the "cession" met with fierce opposition on the part of a people who could not endure to surrender their hard won lands for a vague educational benefit to future generations.

Again, it was found impossible to sell the lands for $2.00 per acre, the price fixed by Congress, when fifty cents per acre for wild lands was deemed an extreme sum.

This war, or clash of interests, continued for a whole generation, although the germ of a common school system was formed in 1829 when a statute was passed requiring that school districts should be laid out and their population ascertained.

The Constitutional Convention of 1834, also, which called for reforms, did all in its power for the school interests of the State and tied up the school fund as tightly as the fundamental law could do it. This convention adopted the Constitution under which mainly the State of Tennessee is conducting its government to-day; for the Constitution of 1870 is virtually that of 1834 with the changes made necessary by the results of the Civil War.

From 1840 to 1861, when the Civil War began, the history of the public schools of Tennessee is largely a record of legislative provisions for the preservation and the issuance of State school funds, and it may be stated parenthetically that more than three hundred acts have been passed by the Legislature of Tennessee on subjects growing out of the relations of the school lands to the school fund of the State and its proper protection. Yet during the same period there was little provision for such an efficient administration of public schools as would warrant the liberality of expenditure which was contemplated, and therefore large sums were paid out without any appreciable advance towards an adequate system of public schools. So notoriously was this the case that Governor Neil S. Brown said in 1847:

"The effort for popular education has slumbered and languished and pined, and exists now rather as a memento of the past than as a living system of future growth and expansion."

And yet, while popular education was at a stand-still for a long period in Tennessee, it would be the acme of injustice to say that the people were illiterate or uneducated. For the forty years immediately prior to 1860 there was a great amount of valuable instruction open to all the people through the public speaking and preaching of all kinds by which Tennessee has always been distinguished. There is no other state which, during this period, can point to so large and brilliant a galaxy of orators as graced the hustings of the Volunteer State in those days.

There were Andrew Jackson, Sam Houston, William Carroll, Hugh Lawson White, Ephriam H. Foster, Neil S. Brown, Meredith P. Gentry, Phillip Lindsley, "Lean Jimmy" Jones, James K. Polk, Gustavus Henry, John Bell, Isham G. Harris, Andrew Johnson, Aaron V. Brown, Cave Johnson and many others whose eloquence and information instructed while evoking admiration and applause.

Moreover, the experience encountered in the making of such a State as Tennessee were in themselves a school even with books and pedagogues left out. A people who removed from the wilderness the treacherous savages and brought it into a condition fit for occupancy by civilized white men, who established a commonwealth like Tennessee, who built beautiful and flourishing cities out of unoccupied fields and woods, and at the same time defeated a foreign foe at King's Mountain, at New Orleans and in Mexico; who furnished more than 100,000 troops, some on each side, in a great fratricidal war; who, then, accepting the arbitrament of arms, proceeded to recoup its fortunes and to rehabilitate its local affairs on better bases than ever before in an incredibly short space of time—such a people can be trusted to secure to its future generations the blessings of education in fullness and adequacy. And this Tennessee has done.

Tennessee

That everybody cannot live in Tennessee is a self-evident fact, but why any man, woman or child should prefer to live elsewhere is beyond the comprehension of this writer; but many natives do seek homes in other States, and are apparently satisfied; but so long as they live they are proud to call themselves Tennesseans; and why shouldn't they? Where else in all the world can be found so many, and such an abundance of the things and conditions which go to make life worth living? If we are seeking a healthful location we find it in Tennessee; if it is rich lands we want, we find them in Tennessee; if we would revel in the richest products of the soil, we will find them in Tennessee; if it is opportunities we are seeking, Tennessee presents them; if we are looking for grand scenery we have only to go to the mountain regions of the State and we will find sun-kissed peaks, beetling cliffs, towering crags, deep valleys and gulches where the sun never shines, and where placid waters glide and where cataracts roar. If we are seeking a State with a grand and glorious history, Tennessee is that State.

KINGS MOUNTAIN

The position of Tennessee on the map, and its latitude, are all that can be desired. Nowhere can be found a finer or more equitable climate. The average annual temperature of the State is about 59 degrees; for the Eastern Division it is 57 degrees; for the Middle Division it is 60 degrees; for the Western Division it is 61 degrees. January is the average coldest month, and its average temperature is 37 degrees. July is the average hottest month, and its average is 77 degrees. The average rainfall is about 52 inches annually, the heaviest being in March, 5.61 inches, and the lightest in October, 3.24 inches. Damaging drouths are extremely rare, and floods seldom occur. The average annual snow fall is eight inches; the snows are generally light and seldom lay on the ground more than a few days.

Tennessee is a long rhomboid with a width at its widest place of 109 miles, and a length of 385 miles. Its area is nearly 42,000 square miles, about 27,000,000 acres. It touches on its borders eight States, more than any other State, except Missouri. It has within its borders more miles of navigable waters than any other State in the Union. Hundreds of beautiful streams drain the land, supply motive power, and enliven the valleys. Springs of cold limpid water bubble up from out of the depths of the earth in every section of the State. It has for its western border two hundred miles of the great "Father of Waters," the mighty Mississippi. The beautiful Tennessee, as picturesque as the Rhine, has its source in Virginia and North Carolina, flows in a south-westerly direction across the State, swoops with a long, graceful curve down into Alabama, then returns and crosses Tennessee from south to north, crosses Kentucky and pours its flood into the Ohio. It furnishes to Tennessee 320 miles of navigable water. The Cumberland, a no less beautiful stream than the Tennessee, has its source in the mountains of Kentucky, and after gaining considerable volume drops down into Tennessee, flows through the great Middle Tennessee Basin, the Garden of the Gods, then returns to Kentucky and empties its waters into the Ohio a few miles from the mouth of the Tennessee. It affords the State 315 miles of navigable water. Other streams of more or less importance, some of them navigable, are numerous in every division of the State.

No State in the Union has a more varied surface than Tennessee. Its topographical features embrace mountain and plain, upland and lowland, hill and valley. Its elevation above the sea ranges from 300 feet along the Mississippi River in the western end of the State to 6,600 feet in its eastern extremity. The soils are as diversified as is the surface of the State, embracing almost every variety. For these reasons, and the fact that the climate corresponds with the topography, no State has a greater variety of products. Any thing that will grow any where in a temperate climate will grow as well or better in Tennessee.

Tennessee is separated from North Carolina by a line which for the most part follows the crest of the great Unaka Mountains. The Unaka is the greatest mountain range in the Appalachian system and is the largest mountain mass in the United States east of the Mississippi River. It is a continuation of the Blue Ridge of Virginia, and consists of several mountain ridges which run in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction for a distance of nearly two hundred miles across the State. The average elevation of these mountains is about 5,000 feet above the sea, but there are a number of peaks and knobs which rise considerably higher. Mt. Pegot is the highest point, 6,636 feet above the sea, or more than a mile and a quarter higher than the lands lying along the Mississippi River.

The characteristic features of the mountain region of East Tennessee is that it is made up of parallel ridges separated by valleys of nearly uniform width. These ridges are not continuous, but are broken into ranges of various lengths, each bearing a local name. Thus we have the Unaka, the Great Smoky, the Bald, the Chilhowie, the Frog and other mountains; Mission Ridge and Walden's Ridge. From these mountains extend spurs and ridges, and interlocked between them are many beautiful and fertile valleys in which are splendid farms, prosperous and busy towns inhabited by a people of pure Anglo-Saxon blood, descended from the pioneers who wrested this fair land from wild nature and the savage Indian, and who fought in the battles of the Revolution.

The famous valley of East Tennessee is the fluted floor of the region lying between the Unaka range and the Cumberland Plateau. Its average elevation is about 1,000 feet above sea level. The climate in the valley is as near perfect as can be found on the American continent. The high altitude, the undulating surface, the great number of rivers and creeks, and their rapid flow, the absence of marsh lands, and the exhilarating breezes from the mountains all contribute to make it an immense sanitarium.

Knoxville is the commercial, social, educational and geographical center of East Tennessee. It is one of the most beautiful of all the cities of the South, and one of the wealthiest. It has been the home of many eminent men, and the scene of many stirring events. No city in Tennessee is richer in history.

Chattanooga is at the extreme southern end of the mountain region of Tennessee. It, too, is rich in history, but of a later period. It first came into prominence during the Civil War as the gateway to the South. Chattanooga is one of the greatest manufacturing centers of the South; its manufactured products are to be found in every land, in every clime and under "every sun."

Middle Tennessee is the largest, most populous and the richest of the three natural divisions of the State. Its surface is greatly diversified, and exhibits varieties of scenery the most opposite; "mountains with rushing torrents and foaming cataracts, hilly, with swift, smooth gliding streams, level, where the waters linger by the side of green pastures and grassy meadows." Nowhere has nature been more lavish in her gifts; the richest soils, the abundance of the most necessary minerals, the finest timber, the purest water, everything that man could desire. There is no crop that grows above the 35th parallel that will not do as well or better here. While this section has long been noted for its manufacturing, its chief glory is in its splendid farms. This division consists of a terrace covering over 9,000 square miles, which circularly rims the greatest limestone basin called the Central Basin with its 5,450 square miles. This basin is the bed of an ancient lake which received the waters of the Cumberland and other streams. The basin is not a level plain as might be supposed, but it is a succession of hills and vales with a deep limestone soil, well watered by springs, creeks and rivers. The Cumberland River forms the outlet for the waters of the northern part and Duck River for the southern part.

The capital city, Nashville, is situated near the center of the basin, and the center of the State, on the banks of the Cumberland River in the heart of the finest farming region on the globe. It is recognized as the educational center, not only of Tennessee, but of the South.

Nowhere in all this broad land did the Indians, the original owners of the soil, fight harder to maintain their ancient homes than in the country around Nashville. The Anglo-Saxon won, as they always do, but at a frightful cost in blood. Few families of the pioneers but mourned the loss of loved ones. But the prize was worth the sacrifice.

The Cumberland Plateau, most of which lies in Middle Tennessee, is a high table land that rises 2,000 feet above sea level. The plateau lands are not as fertile as are those in the valleys and the basin, but they may be made productive by the use of fertilizers and intelligent cultivation. The plateau soils are especially adapted to fruit and vegetable growing. Most of the largest orchards of the State are to be found there, and the fruit crop seldom fails. The plateau is underlaid with coal of the best quality. It is capped with sandstone; the soils are thin, sandy and porous. It is often flat for many miles, then again it is rolling and diversified with hills and valleys. It is well watered with springs, creeks and rivers; many of its mineral springs have long been famous for their medicinal qualities and as resorts of health seekers. The whole plateau is one vast sanitarium. It contains many good towns and a population of splendid people. The eastern edge of the plateau presents an almost continuous line of bold cliff that forms in places an impassable barrier. Its western side is an irregular slope, jagged and scalloped with deep coves and valleys which broaden out into the Middle Tennessee Basin.

The lands on the plateau and on the highland rim are the lowest in price in the State, ranging from $2.50 to $25 per acre. But the time will come, and that before many years, when they will command double these prices.

The chief towns of the plateau are Tullahoma, Manchester, McMinnville, Sparta, Cookeville and Winchester. Mount Eagle, the famous Southern Chautauqua and summer resort, and Sewanee, the seat of the University of the South, are situated on the plateau.

West Tennessee is that geographical division of the State which lies between the Tennessee and the Mississippi Rivers. It ranks third in size and population, though it contains the most populous city in the State, Memphis. It is an area of clays, loam and sand. It has no minerals nor rocks, except along the Tennessee River, where the formation is a continuation of that of the Middle Tennessee limestone. The surface is comparatively level, the streams have low banks and sluggish currents and are often bordered by low wide marshy bottoms. It contains a number of small rivers which rise near the eastern border and flow westwardly down the slope to the Mississippi. The lands of this division of the State are very fertile, and for the most part its productive qualities are inexhaustible. Very little of the land but can be cultivated. Cotton, corn, wheat, rye, oats, tobacco, peanuts, clover and timothy do as well, and some of them better here than elsewhere in the State. In recent years vegetable growing, small fruits and berries have been receiving much attention from the farmers, and have proven enormously profitable. The climate of West Tennessee is milder than that of either of the other two divisions. The chief towns are Memphis, Jackson, Humboldt, Dyersburg, Union City, Paris, and Covington.

A century and a half ago Tennessee was an unbroken, unknown and untrodden wilderness, inhabited by wild beasts and wild men. In 1540, DeSoto, with his heroic band of adventurers, entered the territory now known as Tennessee and explored a small part of its section in search of gold. He then passed on and into Alabama. In the month of May, 1542, he again entered Tennessee and camped on the Chickasaw Bluffs about where Memphis now stands long enough to construct rafts on which to cross the Mississippi. In 1673 Father Marquette, on a tour of exploration, stopped at the Chickasaw Bluffs. The next white men to visit Tennessee was a party under LaSalle, in 1682.

In 1714, M. Charleville built a trading house on the bluff where Nashville now stands. Again, in 1740, the French, under Bienville, camped for a short time at the Chickasaw Bluffs.

In 1758, Fort Loudon, on the banks of the Tennessee River, the first edifice constructed by members of the Anglo-Saxon race, was built. The melancholy fate of the English garrison at this fort, in 1760, is known to all students of history.

Soon after the massacre of the garrison of Fort Loudon, explorers, hunters and adventurers began to cross the mountains and spread themselves over what is now known as East Tennessee. Among the first of these were Daniel Boone, Walden, Scaggs, Cox, Calloway and others. Henry Scaggs, with a few daring adventurers whose names are not known, explored the Cumberland country in 1766. Two years later James Smith and three other white men and a negro slave explored the Cumberland as far down as the mouth of Stone's River.

The first permanent settlement by white men was on the banks of the Holston in 1771. Captain William Bean built the first cabin, and Russell Bean, his son, was the first white child to be born in the State. From this date the tide of immigration began to flow in a steady and ever-increasing stream. Scores of the heroic men and women of that period deserve a volume each, but few of them have a line, and the names of many of them have been forgotten, and a large majority of them sleep in unmarked graves.

Ten Reasons Why The Veteran Should Be Invaluable To All Americans

1. Because it is a publication devoted exclusively to obtaining and preserving accurate historical data relating to the War between the States.

2. It brings to light hitherto unknown phases of that great conflict.

3. It has done more than any other known medium to clearly and truthfully define the position of the South in the memorable contest of the sixties.

4. It contains letters and records from those who served on both sides of the most remarkable struggle in the history of the world.

5. It presents all questions fairly and with careful accuracy.

6. It commemorates the brave deeds of the heroes of the great war, and preserves a record of them for future generations.

7. It officially represents all Confederate organizations, and carefully chronicles the work accomplished by them.

8. Although a class magazine, it has lived longer than any other magazine in the entire South.

9. It continually gives information concerning individuals to interested persons who could obtain it in no other way.

10. It has never swerved from its avowed purpose to advocate right, justice and truth.

RIVER SCENE NEAR NASHVILLE
First Settlement in Tennessee

Nashville—Queen City of the South

Nashville, the capital city of Tennessee, and the queen city of the South, is a city of homes, educational institutions and industrial establishments. The wonderful strides it has made in the way of population, showing that its superior advantages are highly appreciated by those seeking homes, are shown by the fact that while in 1900 the number of people residing within the corporate limits was 80,681, in 1906 it was 164,172, an increase of more than 100 per cent. An inspection of a map of the Mississippi Valley discloses the fact that Nashville lies nearer the center of population, rail and water transportation, and the supplies for subsistence than any other city in that valley. It is about midway between the Great Lakes lying on the north, and the Gulf of Mexico on the south, and about half-way between the Atlantic Ocean on the east, and the arid plains on the west. It can draw subsistence from a larger area in a shorter time and at a cheaper rate than any other city in the South. Tennessee touches on its borders eight other States, and, therefore, the productions of those States are readily available. Its several systems of railways, with immediate connections, give an easy outlet within from fourteen to nineteen hours to the Gulf of Mexico, at Mobile, Pensacola, and New Orleans. It also reaches the Atlantic Ocean at Brunswick, Savannah, Charleston, Wilmington, Norfolk, Newport News, Baltimore, and many of the coast cities in the East. Within twelve hours produce may be transported to Chicago, the city that dominates the Lake region and the great Northwest. Louisville may be reached in five hours, Cincinnati in nine hours, St. Louis in twelve hours, Buffalo in twenty-three hours, Kansas City in twenty-three hours, Detroit in twenty hours. Pittsburg in twenty-one hours, and New York in twenty-eight hours. Cleveland, Ohio, is within eighteen hours. By means of the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers, heavy products may be carried to all the leading places lying on the navigable waters of the Mississippi Valley.

MAYOR T. O. MORRIS

Eight lines of railroads are tributary to Nashville. This city possesses an advantage in having lower freight rates than any Southern city—thus enabling her merchants and manufacturers to sell their goods at lower prices than other markets. Two great railroad systems, the Illinois Central and the Southern, have entered Nashville within the past two years, adding 11,600 miles to the mileage previously operated.

The Cumberland River, upon which Nashville is situated, is navigable for boats of 400 tons burden to Point Burnside, a distance of 325 miles above Nashville, and for a distance of 193 miles below the city to the mouth of the river, giving a total length of navigable waters for this stream of 518 miles (the season of navigation lasts from eight to ten months during the year). By means of this stream connection is made with the Ohio River, the Mississippi, and through them to all other navigable streams of the Mississippi Valley.

Statistics gathered by the Board of Trade show that the wholesale trade of Nashville for 1905 was $131,000,000, an increase of $28,000,000 over the preceding year. In 1906 it was probably twenty-five per cent more, while figures for 1907 will far exceed the latter, demonstrating that its commerce is expanding at a very rapid rate. The retail business added to the wholesale trade will, for 1907, likely reach the amount of $30,000,000.

Nashville has more than 600 manufacturing plants, the aggregate capital of which exceeds $20,000,000. These concerns employ over 17,000 people, and the annual wages paid to their employees is more than $6,000,000. The cost of material is $15,000,000, while the value of the products of these industrial establishments exceed $25,000,000 annually.

There are about twenty financial institutions in Nashville, and the bank clearings have shown a rapid increase during the past few years.

Tax rates are low, and real estate has advanced at a rapid rate. Hundreds of homes have recently been erected in the city and suburbs, and the demand for houses is large. The number of building permits issued during the past twelve months has broken all records.

Nashville is the best lighted city in the South, the fourth shoe market in the United States, the fourth city in the Union as a milling center, the largest hardwood lumber market in the world, the largest grinder of soft winter wheat in the world, the most important egg and poultry market in the South, the largest manufacturer of commercial fertilizer in the United States, the second school city in the country, and the educational centre of the South—has the best paved streets in the South, the finest street railway and light system in the South, manufactures a greater variety of articles than any other Southern City, and is the largest jobbing market in the South, more colleges and universities than any city in the Southern States; and ten libraries.

BANKS.

Nashville has twenty banking institutions, representing $5,000,000, capital stock and surplus with deposits amounting to $20,000,000. Prominent among these are the Fourth National Bank, American National Bank, Union Bank and Trust Co., City Savings and First Trust and Savings Bank.

SHOE FACTORIES.

This important industry has been pushed to such an extent as to place Nashville the fourth shoe market in the United States.

The J. G. Hynds Shoe Mfg. Co., which was established here less than three years ago, built for themselves a magnificent factory building of granite and brick, 50x250 long and three stories high, thoroughly equipped with the most modern machinery, giving them a capacity for twelve to fifteen hundred pairs per day.

This company is officered and manned by a strong conservative and efficient set of men that have made one of the best institutions in the South today. In this short time they have been compelled by reason of increased trade to begin this fall to run their full capacity, and it will be but a short time until the Hynds "Big 4" line is known throughout the entire South.

Richardson Bros. Shoe Co., has for years been one of the strong factors in Nashville's success in this industry. Lately this company have built and equipped one of the most modern shoe factories in the State. Their great success in the past but fortells their future, and we can but believe that in a very short time Nashville will be made to rank third shoe market in the United States.

CONFEDERATE VETERAN.

The publisher desired to give space to the Confederacy, but the absence of Mr. S. A. Cunningham from the city prevented. We cannot pass this point without some mention of that great official organ of the numerous orders and societies of the Confederacy, the Confederate Veteran. What better mention can be made than to note the action of the Confederate Veteran, recently. We quote from an address before that body the same being subscribed to by the subscribed officers:

We have been elected to offices of high distinction and recognize the obligations created by these honors because they were conferred by our comrades of the United Confederate Veterans. In this spirit we address you, on our own motion, this letter on a special subject because we know that the desire is common among us that the knowledge of the principles and facts of the Confederate epoch should be more widely diffused. We feel that this information should be conveyed to the people of the present age through the press and other agencies in such spirit, manner, and mode of publication as will do justice to our Confederate people, secure the fame of which our dear Southland is well worthy, abate all ungenerous controversial spirit, and promote a more perfect understanding and cordial union of all parts and people of our Country.

In considering maturely this very important matter we are gratified by the fact that the United Confederate Veterans Association, Confederate Southern Memorial Association, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the United Sons of Confederate Veterans have an official organ, commended over and over again by unanimous resolutions at our annual conventions, in a magazine of high rank called the Confederate Veteran, ably edited and published monthly by our true and enthusiastic fellow-Confederate soldier, S. A. Cunningham, at Nashville. This noble magazine began its career years ago as a patriotic venture upon the field of hope in its confidence reposed in those to whom its worthy objects appealed, and we have witnessed its ascent to success with the especial pride that such success is so well deserved. We deplore nothing about it except that the benefits it is conferring every month upon thousands of readers are not enjoyed by tens of thousands more. It is a medium by which every phase of Confederate times is intelligently and interestingly conveyed to the minds of young and old. It is a glad hand extended cordially to shake every Confederate hand, and it goes with a sincere fraternal greeting to all patriots in our Land. It is a treasury of argument, history, biography, story, and song, continuing to steadily increase these riches from month to month. Its contents make a table around which Confederates, with their sons and daughters and friends sit once a month to enjoy an intellectual, social, affectionate, friendly, country-loving feast. It never was of more value than it is now. And, considering all that should be said, written, and done through its agency during the next ten years of only one hundred and twenty issues, it is now more valuable than ever.

In view of all things we know about the Confederate Veteran magazine and its valuable uses, will you, each and all of you, agree to make an immediate practical working effort to at least double the number of subscriptions, and thus quadruple the number of its interested readers? Can we afford to do less? Can we do anything of better avail to diffuse the knowledge and increase the appreciation of our Southland and its history?

We urge that immediate personal effort be made by Confederates and their sons and daughters. We ask that the ever-generous press of our country help us, and that the Confederate Veteran publish this appeal conspicuously.

Repeating our expressions of gratitude to all who have honored us as Confederate soldiers, and greeting you with our hands and hearts, we have the honor to be your obedient servants:

Stephen D. Lee, General, Commander in Chief U. C. V.;

William E. Mickle, Major General, Chief of Staff, U. C. V.;

Beer and Good Health

People Who Drink Plenty of Beer
Are Always Strong and Healthy

PROF. DR. P. BAUER, Berlin, Germany, to demonstrate the effect of beer on the health, says:

"Of the 75 employes of Haase's Brewery, each of whom drinks daily over a gallon of beer, 56 have stood the rigid physical examination for enrollment in the army and are soldiers; of the remaining eighteen, eight are minors, three were found too small in stature, and four were rejected for defects suffered by accident."

Pure, well-aged Beer, like GERST Beer is a tonic, an appetizer and a food that is nourishing and strengthening. Solid foods often remain in the stomach a long time and retard digestion. Liquid foods, like GERST Beer, are an aid to digestion.

There is Good Health in every bottle of Gerst Beer

Accidents

Will happen — even with such a neat house-keeper as the Malleable Girl

The malleable girl is not careless, but then accidents will happen. She is not worried, however, for she knows that twice the amount of water will not crack the top of her range because it is thoroughly annealed stove plate. A cake of ice can be placed on it while the top is red-hot without in anywise affecting the casting. Should any of this water run down onto the oven, it will not firecrack as cast iron would under similar conditions. Should an accident of a similar character happen to another range, it would break and firecrack into a score of pieces. You will be glad to learn of other distinctive features of this wonderful range.

BON AIR COAL & IRON CO.

PIG IRON, COAL, COKE

Collieries at Bon Air, Ravenscroft, and Eastland, White and Cumberland Counties, Tennessee. Smelting and Heating Coke. Furnaces at Allen's Creek, Wayne County, Tennessee.

Mannie Extra Fluid Softener, silicon as desired, from 1.50 to 8%. THIS IRON IS ESPECIALLY ADAPTED TO THIN CASTINGS and for the manufacture of stoves, hollowware and radiators, and all classes of foundry work needing a soft fluid iron, and one that will carry a large per cent of scrap. LOW SULPHUR A SPECIALTY.

OUR BON AIR AND CUMBERLAND BLOCK COALS

Are the BEST AND CHEAPEST domestic and steam coals sold in the market, the hardest and lightest coals mined in the South, and make more heat to the pound than any bituminous coal. DOES NOT SLACK.

OUR EASTLAND COKE is used by a number of Smelting Companies with great success. It is big and strong—a great burden carrier, and excellent for heating and drying.

FACTS ABOUT

First Savings Bank & Trust Company

- ☐ It has a capital stock of $300,000.00.
 - ☐ Its directorate is as strong as that of any bank in the South.
 - ☐ It accepts either savings or checking accounts.
 - ☐ It opens accounts of $1.00 and upwards.
 - ☐ The first bank in Nashville to pay 4%.
 - ☐ It is contributing largely toward making the citizens of Nashville and Tennessee independent by accepting their funds as fast as they are accumulated and investing them wisely.
 - ☐ It has the confidence of nearly six thousand depositors who have entrusted their fortunes to it.
 - ☐ It has no element of insecurity, as its loans are restricted to (1) marketable collateral and (2) improved real estate at half its market value.
 - ☐ It is located at Fourth and Union and does Banking-by-Mail.

LAWN AT WOMAN'S BUILDING, TENNESSEE STATE FAIR

THE HIGH LIMESTONE BLUFFS OF DUCK RIVER

Belmont College for Young Women, Nashville, Tenn.

Rev. IRA LANDRITH, LL. D., Regent,
Miss HOOD and Miss HERON, Principals

Attracts students from all parts of the country. The teaching is thorough, practical, and efficient. Equipment complete in every department. Location unrivaled—15 minutes' car ride to Nashville, the "Athens of the South", yet in the heart of the city. Park of 15 acres, every city and every country advantage—steam heat, electricity, bathing, swimming, and shower baths, sewerage. Courses leading to degrees. Prepares for universities. Departments of Music, Art, and Languages were trained abroad. The Director of Music is F. J. H. H., an eminent Russian pianist and composer. Extensive culture and all out-door games. New building will accommodate 125 more students but already has already so large early application to be received. Send for illustrated catalogue and book of names, or visit the school before deciding.

THREE FLOORS OF FURNISHED BED ROOMS CONNECTED

THE WONDERFUL ELECTRIC CANDY MACHINE

WHICH TOOK THE PRIZE FOR NOVELTY OF INVENTION AT WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS, MO., 1904

The Candy made by this Machine is Absolutely Pure.

Granulated sugar is poured into the spinner and is instantly changed into flossy filaments of PURE candy without the touch of a contaminating finger.

MACHINES $100 EACH

Machines Made Expressly For Druggists, Fruit Stands, Confectioners and Hotels.

Make the Soda Fountain Space Pay in Winter.

One Pound of Sugar Makes $1.00 Worth of Candy.

Our machines are fully protected by our patents. A number of Pirates have infringed our patents. We prosecuted the first who attempted it. The United States Court at St. Louis has just rendered judgment sustaining our patents and perpetually enjoining infringements. ∴ We own the exclusive right to the only method of making FLOSS or SPUN CANDY and will prosecute every maker and user of infringing machines.

RAVENWOOD STOCK FARM

Home of the Big Bone Berkshire

J. D. B. DeBOW, Proprietor

CHARMER'S DUKE 23RD. 84000.

Visitors, Home-Comers and Fanciers are cordially invited to call and inspect the great RAVENWOOD HERD of BERKSHIRES to be exhibited at the State Fair. They represent the greatest size, style and quality. Those desiring stock hogs or show hogs can find them at our show pens at the fair, or at our breeding farm a few miles out from Nashville, Tennessee. Come and see the largest hogs of the breed ever driven in a show ring in the history of the world. Young pigs and breed gilts always for sale. The cut above shows the style and finish of the hogs raised, and the one below shows the place where they are raised

To Home-Comers and Visitors
