MAN LIBRARY-AGRICULTURE

PREFACE.

It is now more than ten years since the last edition of the present work was issued to the public. Since that time great progress has been made in the Society's Garden in the examination of fruits, and much additional experience, as to their real qualities, has been obtained. One result has been, that the Garden Committee resolved to discontinue the cultivation of a large number of inferior varieties; being of opinion that it is useless to grow fruits of an inferior kind when varieties exist superior to them in quality and equal in all other respects. Nevertheless it has not been thought desirable to expunge such varieties altogether from the catalogue; they are accordingly preserved in their places, but are distinguished by the prefix of an O, instead of a number. In most other respects this catalogue is printed upon the same plan as the last, viz :

1. The arrangement of the varieties of each species, and also of the species themselves, is alphabetical, according to the names in common use.

2. The names arranged under each species consist both of those which are retained and of their synonyms; but these are distinguished by the former being printed in larger type than the latter. In order to increase the utility of this part of the Catalogue, the synonyms are introduced twice; both in their alphabetical position, where they appear in Italics, and also immediately following the names that are adopted. The Catalogue will thus shew at a glance not only of what name any other is a synonym, but also what all the synonyms are of every name that is adopted as the one which it is proper to employ.

3. When a sort has been once possessed by the Society, and is now lost, the name appears without any number being prefixed : so that an indication is thus afforded of the kinds, which the Society requires for the completion of the collection.

4. By columns and abbreviations, the meaning of which is explained under every different kind of fruit, a large number of the most important characters, by which the varieties are distinguished, has been compressed into a very small compass. Thus in Apples the following line, signifies that the Oslin is a pale yellow apple of a roundish figure, of a middling size, used for the dessert, of the first quality, and ripening in August and September. To these abbreviations a few useful remarks have often been added in a separate column. By such means it is hoped that a considerable body of practically important information will have been introduced.

511 Oslin . . . | p. y. | roundish | 2 | T | 1 | Aug. Sept.

It will be remarked that the abbreviations, &c. have not been made use of in regard to every sort that is enumerated. In such instances no certain information has been yet collected at the Garden with respect to those varieties the columns of which are blank ; owing either to the trees not having fruited, or to the variety having been lost, or to inaccuracies having been discovered in the names of the plants received at the Garden. These inaccuracies have taken place to an extent of which no one, who has not personally inspected the progress of investigation, can form an idea, and have caused more embarrassment than all other causes taken together. It would in many cases have been easy to have filled up the blanks from books, or such MSS. of the Society as have been collected independently of the Garden ; but it has been thought better, in order to avoid misconception, that the characters now given should have been exclusively collected from observation on the very trees from which cuttings are taken for distribution.

In conclusion, it is due to Mr. Robert Thompson, the Superintendent of the Fruit department in the Garden of the Society, to state that the value of this Catalogue, whatever it may be, is principally due to his assiduity and pomological knowledge.

Regent-street,
Nov. 1842.

*The following resolution was passed by the Garden Committee
June 6, 1842, and confirmed by the Council on the 4th July, 1842.*

“Resolved—That those Fellows of the Society who may be desirous of determining the names and qualities of Fruits, be supplied with specimens of such varieties as the Garden of the Society produces, on application to the Secretary. Not more than two specimens of any sort to be sent, and the expense of the package and carriage to be charged to the Fellows making application for them. If a second supply of the same fruits should be required, it is not to be furnished gratuitously.”

. In the present edition the following general marks have been employed in addition to such as are explained under each separate head.

When O is prefixed to a name in Roman letters, instead of a number, it signifies that the variety, having been ascertained to be of an inferior quality, is no longer cultivated in the Society's Garden.

When a blank precedes a name in Roman letters, instead of a number; it signifies that the variety has either proved false, or has been lost, or for some other reason is no longer in the Garden; Correspondents of the Society are therefore invited to send the Society cuttings of such varieties, provided they can vouch for their authenticity.

The names printed in small Roman letters are the same as that of the sort which they immediately succeed. Those in Italics are synonyms in the Alphabetical arrangement, and are repeated under the name to which they refer; thus in the list of Almonds "Sultan à coque tendre, see Doux à coque tendre" signifies that Sultan à c. t. is the same sort as Doux à c. t., under which variety the former name is repeated in small letters as a synonym.

VIII. FIGS.

Less is perhaps practically known of Figs than of any other kind of fruit extensively cultivated; a circumstance which no doubt arises from our climate being ill adapted to their cultivation.

IX. GOOSEBERRIES.

The columns explain 1. The prevailing colour of the fruit ; 2. The usual nature of its surface ; 3. Its form ; 4. Its size ; 5. Its quality ; 6. Under the head of branches, what the habit of the bush is. In regard to the second column it is necessary to remark that some varieties marked smooth will not always come so, but in some soils and situations will have the surface thinly set with hairs ; again, although many varieties are decidedly hispid under all circumstances, yet there are others which occasionally produce fruit both slightly hispid and smooth on the same plant ; in these cases the most general appearance has been inserted. The abbreviations employed are as follow ;

1. Colour. r. red ; w. white ; y. yellow ; g. green ; p. pale ; d. dark.
2. Surface. s. smooth ; d. downy ; h. hispid or rough.
5. Quality. 1. First Rate ; 2. Moderately good ; 3. Indifferent, or bad.
6. Branches. e. erect ; p. pendulous ; sp. spreading.

X. GRAPES.

Much difference of opinion exists respecting the comparative merits, as well as the nomenclature, of many of the varieties of Grapes. In order speedily to obtain sufficient knowledge on this subject, it is evident that a considerable extent of glass is requisite. In the mean time, the ascertained, generally known and acknowledged merits and characters of a considerable number have been given; others less certain have been left without attaching any remark till circumstances admit of the whole being progressively examined. The abbreviations are as follow;

Colour. bl. blackish; g. green; p. pale; d. dark; pur. purple; w. white; y. yellowish; r. reddish.

XII. MELONS.

In arranging these for classification it has been found difficult, in consequence of their constant tendency to sport, to fix upon permanent characters. Those which have been employed are 1, Season, or period of ripening; 2, Quality as to bearing; 3, Colour; 4, Character of the rind, whether thick or thin; 5, Colour of the flesh; 6, Average weight when well grown. The column of remarks is occupied by notes upon their respective qualities. P. after a name signifies that the sort is Persian. The abbreviations are;

XIII. MULBERRIES.

The Common Mulberry is the only sort worthy of cultivation for the sake of the Fruit. The Red Mulberry is the one that would rank next to it, but its merit, even in America, its native country, is so inferior as to render its enumeration unnecessary, as is likewise the case with all the other species.

1 Common Mulberry.

Murier Noir.

XIV. NUTS.

The Constantinople Nut, (Corylus colurna), and the Cuckold Nut, (Corylus rostrata), have not been included in the following enumeration; neither of them being worthy of cultivation in the Fruit Garden. The former seldom bears in this country, and the nut of the latter is small and worthless. The Filberts are those kinds with long husks, extending considerably beyond the nut; formerly the red and the white Filberts were the kinds particularly denominated by this term, but in consequence of the increase of cross-bred varieties, the husks of which deviate from the shortness of those of the nuts, and approach in length those of the Filberts, the distinction between them is now rendered inevident. It may be remarked that Nuts were formerly divided into "Short bearded," and "Long, or Full bearded;" from the latter, Filbert appears to have been derived, and a term of analogous signification will be found among the German Synonyms. The abbreviations are as follow;

1. Form. ov. oval; obl. oblong; comp. compressed; round. ov. roundish oval.
2. Size. 1, large; 2, middle; 3, small.

XV. NECTARINES.

The Leaves, Flowers, and Adhesiveness of the flesh to the stone, afford the most certain and permanently distinguishing characters among Nectarines, as well as Peaches. The Leaves are either serrated, without glands; crenated, with globose glands; or crenated, with reniform glands. The Flowers are either large or small. The Flesh either firmly adhering to the stone, or parting readily from it, constituting the divisions of clingstone and melting Nectarines. A classification founded on such characters has proved of great utility in the investigation of these Fruits. By attending to them all the greatest errors may be easily detected, and a Newington or Violette Hâtive will not, indifferently, find currency for a Roman. A somewhat roundish form being applicable to all Nectarines the column for such has been dispensed with. The abbreviations are as follow;

Leaves. S. serrated without glands; G. having globose glands; R. with reniform glands.

Flowers. L. large; S. small.

Flesh. C. clingstone, the flesh every where firmly adhering; M. melting, the flesh separating from the stone.

Colour. b. brownish; d. dark; p. pale; g. greenish; o. orange; r. red; w. whitish; y. yellow.

Size. 1. large; 2. middle-sized; 3. small.

Quality. 1. first-rate; 2. second or indifferent.

Season. b. beginning; m. middle; e. end of the months to which they are prefixed.

XVI. PEACHES.

The difficulty of knowing Peaches by their fruit alone, without attending to their leaves and flowers, accounts for the great number of different names under which the principal sorts are to be found. Suspicions may perhaps be excited as to the correctness of many of the synonyms now made, but it is found impossible to arrive at any other conclusions than those here adopted, after the strictest investigation of the leaves, flowers and fruit and comparison of authorities. The abbreviations are the same as those of Nectarines.

XVII. PEARS.

The new and superior sorts added to this important class of fruits have proved most valuable acquisitions. The greater part of them have been obtained from Belgium, and have far exceeded the expectations generally formed of them on their first introduction, especially as regards their adaptation to this climate, in which many, instead of requiring the assistance of walls, as all the best old sorts do, produce abundantly and in great perfection on standards, a property also possessed by many valuable varieties raised by the late Mr. Knight. A knowledge of the excellence of these new kinds, has occasioned a great number of the old sorts, formerly reckoned very good, to be now marked as only second rate in the following list. It is necessary to observe that varieties esteemed of the highest excellence by some, are deemed inferior by others. In general this diversity of opinion is owing to difference of soil, situation, or climate; for, if these are unfavourable, a variety that proves to be first-rate, when produced under favourable circumstances, is often found inferior to one that, although second rate, is more hardy. Where kinds of secondary or inferior quality are marked as table-fruit in the following enumeration, it may be understood as only indicating their having been used as such, and being of a nature rather adapted for that than for Perry, or kitchen use. In regard to situation it may be necessary to state, that those marked as succeeding as standards, are calculated to do so in the southern and midland parts of the kingdom, or even considerably more to the northward in particularly well sheltered places. The abbreviations are as follow :

Prevailing Colour. p. pale ; d. dark ; b. brown ; y. yellow ; r. red ; g. green ; rus. russet.

Form. pyr. pyriform ; obt. pyr. obtuse pyriform.

Size. 1, large ; 2, middle ; 3, small.

Use. K. kitchen ; T. table ; P. perry.

Texture. C. crisp ; B. buttery ; J. juicy ; T. tender, such as are softer than the crisp, yet not so fine as the buttery.

Quality. 1, first rate ; 2, second rate ; 3, indifferent or bad.

Situation. W. wall ; S. standard.

XIX. PLUMS.

A classification, derived from the following differences which exist among Plums, has been found useful in clearing up, to some considerable extent, the great confusion which prevailed among this class of fruits:—Shoots downy or smooth; Leaves pubescent above or glabrous; Fruit purple or pale; round, oblong or obovate; Flesh adhering to the stone: or separating from it. These afford the means of forming thirty-two subdivisions; the task of comparison being reduced in proportion. Many varieties yet remain to be fruited; but in the meantime an excellent selection may be made from those already ascertained. The abbreviations employed are as follow:

Wood. s. smooth; d. downy.

Colour. p. purple; y. yellow; g. green; r. red; w. white or whitish.

Size. 1. large; 2. middle-sized; 3. small.

Stone. adh. adhering to the flesh ; sep. separating.

Quality, 1. first rate; 2. middling; 3. bad.

Use. T. table; K. kitchen; P. preserving.

Season. b. beginning; m. middle; e. end of the months to which these are prefixed.

XX. QUINCES.

The Chinese Quince, and the Japan Quince are omitted as being unfit subjects for a Fruit Catalogue. The former has produced fruit, on a wall in the garden, of a cylindrical form and large size, but extremely hard and gritty. The Japan Quince occasionally bears fruit in this climate, but it is small and also bad.

Name.	Remarks.
1 Common Quince Coignassier Commun. . . .	This and the two following are often confounded with each other. It is probable that from seeds of either sort varieties have been, and still may be obtained, some of which would produce apple-shaped and some pear-shaped fruit.
2 Apple-shaped Quince. Coignassier maliforme. Coignassier pomiforme.
3 Pear-shaped Quince. Coignassier pyriforme.
4 Portugal Quince Coignassier de Portugal.	Very good, and distinct from the preceding sorts: it does not, however, become, except in very favourable seasons, of so deep an orange; its leaves are broader and its growth less contracted; consequently it is the best sort for grafting pears upon. The two last enumerated varieties possess characters differing so little from what may be found among sub-varieties of the others that they are scarcely worth distinguishing.
5 Orange Quince.
6 Large-fruited Quince. Coignassier à Gros Fruit.

XXI. RASPBERRIES.

From the facility with which they spring from seeds, numerous accidental varieties of raspberries are doubtless to be found which are not included in the following enumeration. It may however be said of the Red and of the Yellow Antwerp, that they hold a similar rank in this class of fruits to that occupied by the Red and White Dutch among currants; and although some may be found to equal them, yet it is doubtful whether they are as yet exceeded by any. The abbreviations are as follow :

Colour. r. red ; y. yellow ; w. white.

Quality. 1. best ; 2. middling ; 3. indifferent.

XXII. STRAWBERRIES.

The classification of Strawberries published in the Horticultural Transactions, Vol. VI. has been adhered to in the following enumeration. In regard to size it will be necessary to observe that the comparisons are made between the individual varieties of which each class is composed, and do not extend to those of other classes. The general estimation of many of the sorts is not so high as has been formerly stated, owing to their having been found tender, or indifferent bearers, compared with others which experience has proved to be superior. The abbreviations are as follow :

Size. 1. large; 2. middle-sized; 3. small.

Quality. 1. first-rate; 2. middling; 3. indifferent or bad.

Season. As formerly explained.

CLASS V. HAUTOBOIS STRAWBERRIES.

Of all Strawberries, the Hautbois are the most variable. They certainly retain a general character from which they naturally do not depart; but constancy of character in varieties of this class denominated as distinct is but little to be depended on: the fruit will occasionally change from globular to ovate, and the contrary; while fertile plantations will produce runners that may perhaps be sterile, and seedlings, many of which will certainly prove so. The latter ought to be carefully looked after and extirpated, which can only be effectually done in new plantations whilst the plants are single, and at the time they are in blossom. It will also be necessary to observe that in all the sorts of Hautbois, here enumerated, there exist both the Prolific, and also those sterile plants commonly called Males, which have long stamens. They may be distinguished from the prolific by their flowers being scarcely so large, with the receptacle small and imperfect. The plants producing such ought to be, in all cases, destroyed.
