ABERDEENSHIRE.

NOTE.—Exhaustive indices of the birds of each county and parish in the Statistical Account of Scotland, 1791-9, and New Statistical Account, 1834-45, are given in the biographical section of this work, the first under "Sinclair (Sir John)," the second under "New." They should therefore be referred to for each county, as they cannot be repeated here.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The present volume (which must be regarded as the second of our series of Ornithological Bibliographies, the first, "A Bibliography of British Ornithology," having been published in 1917) contains all separate works, articles or notes in periodicals, dealing with local faunas, the previous volume having embraced the biographies of those writers who had published a separate work on British birds, together with a list of their writings, excluding short notes. The only ornithological literature we have not dealt with, therefore, consists of these short notes, when not of a local faunistic nature, and longer articles that have not been written by the author of a separate work or pamphlet on British birds. As regards the assistance rendered us for this volume, this is for the most part acknowledged in the preface to the previous, or in the list of counties in the present volume. Our thanks are also due to all those not especially mentioned by name on whose assistance and help we have been able to rely.
