Announcement.

The Dunton Register is issued in no spirit of rivalry with similar publications. There are aspects in which it stands without a rival, occupying a field wholly its own. It differs from other Registers in that it admits animals only upon their individual merit. Animals that have performed in 2:30 themselves, or that have produced such performers; holding that there is no virtue in relationship. "Brothers, sisters, cousins, uncles, and aunts" have thus been weeded out. In 1881 a work was attempted which approached this one in some respects; but like all of its imitators, it embraced too many conditions. Had it employed only three instead of six rules, the fate of that book, best known as the "Kentucky Stud Book", might, and we believe would, have been averted. Upon the ruins of the "Kentucky Stud Book" sprang up the publication known as the "Standard Register". The fault with the latter is, that quite too much dross for the refined gold is found therein, giving a fictitious value to the dross. Every animal in The Dunton Register, has a true value based upon its own performance or creative powers, giving the only criterion that can be safely used by the student of the breeding problem. Having sifted the good from the bad, The Dunton Register becomes the cheapest and easiest means of obtaining valuable knowledge of the trotting horse.

The Dunton Register, I may say, is indebted to an expressed desire of a large number of the readers of Dunton's Spirit of the Turf, for its origin; persons who looked for a stud book freed from the machinations of unscrupulous editors, planned in the interest of hobbies and theories. With these acknowledgments, invoking the lenient criticism of my contemporaries of the press, and thanking good friends for their kindly interest and indulgence, I submit this work to the public.
