INTRODUCTION.

ANYONE wishing to plant fruit trees, and opening a Nursery Catalogue to choose what to order, must often have been bewildered by the very multitude of names and recommendations. The following list is an attempt in the direction of reducing this number to choose from.

Only thoroughly reliable varieties have been included in the present list. But even so it is itself too long for the ordinary amateur ; and it is for this reason that it is followed by selections taken from itself, and selected in some sort to suit the different geographical divisions of the kingdom.

Thus, if anyone living in Kent wishes to plant a single early Cooking Standard Apple tree, turning to p. 17, he finds himself recommended to try ' Lord Grosvenor ' or ' Grenadier.' Or if, living in Norfolk, he wished to plant one Cooking Standard Plum tree, turning to p. 94 he finds ' Victoria ' recommended, with ' Czar ' and ' President ' following close behind. Or if, living in Monmouth, he wants to plant an early Dessert Standard Apple, p. 117 suggests ' Beauty of Bath,' and so on for all the geographical divisions of the country.

Certain of the newer varieties are naturally not yet sufficiently well known by some, and this has been in most cases recorded in order to account for the low place given to them in the voting. As an example of this, take the apple which bears the name of ' Rev. W. Wilks,' which will often be found low down in the recommendations, but which bids fair to prove to be the very best September cooking apple that we have. ' William Crump ' again, amongst Dessert Apples, deserves a higher place than it has yet attained, and so on with other new or comparatively new varieties. On the contrary, some old varieties have possibly a somewhat higher place given them than they deserve on account of the universality with which they are known. The Plum ' Victoria ' is probably an instance of this, obtaining favour as a cooking plum more on account of its wonderful bearing capacity than for its flavour. It should be noted of ' Victoria ' that it has a greater tendency to silver-leaf disease than most other plums. Amongst Apples ' Worcester Pearmain ' and ' King of the Pippins ' probably gain almost all their votes on account of their bearing quality and their colour, certainly not for their flavour. Amongst Pears ' Amanlis ' and ' Jargonelle ' appear to be unduly high up in the voting in comparison with infinitely better varieties, such as ' Fondante d'Automne,' ' Beurré Hardy,' and ' Thompson's.' And amongst Cooking Cherries one would have supposed that for flavour ' Kentish Red ' would have been far ahead of ' May Duke.'

A few of the varieties mentioned are said not to do well in some places, and, though the fruit is excellent, cannot therefore be generally recommended. Amongst Apples, that prince of Cooking Apples 'Wellington' (syn. Dumelow's) is sadly prone to canker, and so, too, 'Ribston Pippin' if on free stock in most soils.

Thus it will be seen that, excellent and useful as the original list itself is, it requires to be used with judgment, and the subsidiary lists which follow it require a little consideration before their recommendations are adopted.

Where a fruit is well known under two different names it has not been thought necessary to continually repeat both, but after their first mention to adopt the name more generally known, as 'Dumelow's' syn. 'Wellington,' 'Emneth Early' syn. 'Early Victoria,' most widely known as 'Wellington' and 'Early Victoria.'

In the following pages will be found :—

First, the letter sent to about a hundred well-known and experienced gardeners in Great Britain and Ireland.

Secondly, the list of Fruits selected by the Fruit Committee of the Society to serve as a basis of choice.

Thirdly, the questions put to the gardeners who were asked to vote.

Fourthly, the tabulated returns received from each geographical district. The questions are not repeated in full, but each one is indicated in heavy type, and readers can refer back to the questions themselves.

Fifthly, a summary of the leading varieties, irrespective of the geographical districts.

It will be noticed that occasionally the returns have gone outside the Committee's list, but this has been done so seldom as to be negligible.

W. WILKS,
Secretary.

December 1, 1916.

The President and Council of the Society desire to thank (1) the members of the Fruit Committee for the great pains they have bestowed on drawing up the "List of Fruits"; and also (2) the eighty-five Expert Gardeners who have placed their knowledge and experience at the service of the Society by so kindly replying to the questions addressed to them.

By order of the Council,
GRENFELL, F.M.,
President.

LETTER SENT TO ONE HUNDRED LEADING GARDENERS.

ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY,
VINCENT SQUARE,
WESTMINSTER, S.W.

DEAR SIR,—Desiring to provide a certain amount of guidance to the Fellows, and to the Public in general, as to the best varieties of Fruit trees and bushes to plant in different Districts, the Council of the Royal Horticultural Society invite the co-operation of well-known growers in all parts of the Kingdom.

The Society's Fruit Committee have drawn up the following List of varieties as the best for general use, which List is to be taken as the basis of the following enquiries, and to it you are particularly requested to confine yourself in the replies which you may be kind enough to give to the following questions—except of course in dealing with Questions like 14. It is only by all agreeing to work on the same lines that any really useful and trustworthy result can be obtained.

It is particularly requested that all answers may be the result of actual personal experience and judgment, and in no case given upon hearsay evidence.

In every answer consideration should be given not only to the quality of the fruit, but also to the vigour, growth, and fruitfulness of the variety.

The object being to obtain reliable lists of the most suitable varieties for the Geographical divisions of the Country, please let every answer have reference to your own district, leaving all other parts of the country out of your consideration.

Except in Question 15, and similar ones affecting the market, you are particularly requested to give your opinion solely from a Private Garden point of view, and not as growing for sale.

Yours faithfully,

W. WILKS,
Secretary.
