

Sunday,

April 9, 1911.

Dear Doctor;

I found this morning that the letter I wrote the day after receiving the gun you so kindly gave me was not put in the mail as I directed. I greatly fear that you thought me remiss. I have had the gun cleaned and found that the trifling surface rust left hardly a trace; it is a fine looking specimen. I am exceedingly grateful for your kindness, and incidentally remark that I am not used to it.

Cordially,

Sanger.
