Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Dear Mr. Deane:

Your characteristic and very warm and hearty letter caught me on my wedding trip, ^{and} added much to our pleasure. I especially appreciated your quotation from Shakespeare at the head of your letter, and it reminded me vividly of your very long and honorable service as Secretary of the Cambridge Club. To hear from one's very old friends, especially when one cannot often see them, warms one's heart more than anything else, and yours went straight to mine as you can well imagine.

It is interesting that the date of your marriage was so near mine in time of year, at least, though you have a very great
