

United States Courts,
Boston.

Chambers of

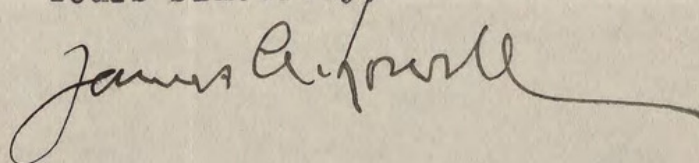

James A. Lowell,
District Judge.

January 26, 1925.

Dear Mr. Deane:

You may remember a chubby, not to say fat, boy to whom you taught botany at Hopkinson's School forty years ago. This boy is now writing you. I have not forgotten entirely the lessons you taught me, and I remember that at that time I found a specimen of carex monile. Your instructions have been of great benefit to me lately. I have been to Nassau twice, and have become much interested in the sub-tropical plants there. I am writing to you to see if you can suggest some way I can press some of these flowers and bring them home. I should not of course want to make too scientific a collection, nor should I want to carry along a complicated piece of apparatus. If, however, you know of some simple way of preserving flowers fairly well by drying, I wish you would let me know.

Yours sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "James A. Lowell". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

Mr. Walter Deane,
29 Brewster Street,
Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Lowell, James Arnold. 1925. "Lowell, James Arnold Jan. 26, 1925." Walter Deane correspondence

View This Item Online: <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/item/159799>

Permalink: <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/partpdf/289162>

Holding Institution

Harvard University Botany Libraries

Sponsored by

IMLS

Copyright & Reuse

Copyright Status: Public domain. The BHL considers that this work is no longer under copyright protection.

This document was created from content at the Biodiversity Heritage Library, the world's largest open access digital library for biodiversity literature and archives. Visit BHL at <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org>.