Professor.
J. FRANKLIN COLLINS, PH. B., Curator and Instructor.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept 15, 1899

My Dear Deane,

A man's beard may grow much in five years. Witness the Count of Monte Cervi, Rip Van Winkle, Frederic Barbarossa, and other heroes of history. Beauty, however, shines through the most humble appendage, illuminating and illustrating genius. Collins and I thought you would be surprised; we did not anticipate the shock. Crookshanks certainly was not inferior in complexion, still that lump, with the pose of Apollo, is Deane as he once knew him, when Rome was young. Does he forgive us? If not, turn to Page 115 and see how the Luteo, to which I refer, has been omitted. Can any sense be nearer? My excellent fraction is in Conway. The children, Ma-in-Law, and I, left the fort, or at least, like the three immortal guardmen, the Boston. I am just back from the first Faculty meeting under Dr Faunce. Next Wednesday the annual procession starts up to appropriate music. This week, in my wife's absence, I have been celebrating by an acute attack of apstitis; some time I had some years ago, Hester, Sheol, Gefenna - and plain Hell, will not express a demonstration the agony of it. Hell, it had the grace to come in vacation. You should see your friend Margaret; great till, splendid creature; a day green, Collins and I are full of plans for our year. McCoy has arrived just at Pott, marrying before he went. He seems very happy.

So far I like Lawrence very much, I hope the pleasant impression will continue, Times Danvers - etc

Very truly yours
Wm Chapman Bailey -
