

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 3 1889

My Dear Deane:

I am in your debt again, but I am so completely torn up getting into the new house that I have difficulty in finding writing paper even. And to make confusion interminable I am moving my office as well. Half the time I don't know where to find myself. I am head over heels into everything, and yet I don't seem to do much.

I called on Prof. Dudley, and he said that he would look among his plants for Aster Trados-

can't for you; but he doubts if he has duplicates. I am anticipating the Manual
soon.

How we should like to have you and Mrs.
Deane see us in our new home when we get thoroughly settled. As happy as a puddle of frogs, and as busy as a nest of ants! Term has opened and I am ear deep in work.

Yours, half asleep,
L. A. Bailey

Tell me how your father is.
