LOCUSTA INDICA.

Roes 2. t. 5.

Cum de Gryllo, migratorio Linnæi in hoc opere differemus, speciem longe majorem memoravimus, in variis Orientis regionibus cum reliquis sui generis pro cibo sumi solitam. Hanc ipsam magni-tudine naturali jam depinximus. Color imus fusco-viridis, interdum ruber, maculis notisque tenebricosis variatus. Crura tantum non rubra. Alæ inferiores in nonnullis speciminibus rubent, in aliis fusco-pallent, maculis multis sagittatis viridibus vel nigricantibus, notatæ.

EGYPTIAN LOCUST.

GENERIC CHARACTER.

Head inflected, armed with jaws, and furnished with palpi or feelers.

Antennæ either setaceous or filiform.

Wings four, deflected, convolute; the lower ones plaited.

Hind-Feet formed for leaping. Claws on all the feet double.

SPECIFIC CHARACTER, &c.

GREAT RED or BROWN LOCUST, with crested thorax and variegated wings.

The GREAT ARABIAN LOCUST.

The EGYPTIAN LOCUST.

In the description of the Gryllus migratorius, or wandering locust, described in a former number of the present work, I mentioned a species of far superior magnitude, which, together with others of the genus, is frequently used as an article of food in the the Eastern nations. This species is now represented in its natural size. Its general color is a brownish green, sometimes red, varied with dusky spots and marks: the legs incline much to red: the under wings are in some specimens reddish; in others of a pale brown, with numerous arrow-shaped blackish or greenish spots.
