

claim it since I cannot find the plants. It was a sad mistake not to have sent the package to Mr.
Eggleson for personal inspection.

I would be exceedingly glad to have you see my plants when you come to Washington. I have to store them down in a trunk room, but I find from this late examination that they are in excellent condition, and I wish

RECEIVED
MAR 25 1904

16 Fifth St. S.E.
Washington, D.C.
March 23, 1904.

My dear Mr. Deane.—

I am very sorry
to report that the search for Utricularia purpurea has been without success, for though I have looked through every possible package I have failed to find the coveted label.

For years ago I became alarmed by the dampness in the basement room where the plants were stored, and had the cases moved up stairs where I could examine them. I found not a few which had to be destroyed, and there is the haunting fear that the plant in question may have been among them. I had forgotten my correspondence with Mr. Eggleston, and doubt if the sight of Utricularia purpurea would have awakened any particular thrill of pain if it had been among those condemned. At the time I thought chiefly of freeing the collection of anything which menaced the whole, and the losses which would have impressed themselves upon the mind of a trained botanist, or the collector who knew his own, were no doubt taken all too stoically by me. Mr. Rose thinks it probable that the Vermont reference is correct, as they have material of that species from Maine, etc. but of course I cannot more than ever for time and strength to devote to putting them in the perfect order which they so well merit.

But the days alas, are very full, and by night-fall energy is at low ebb, and it begins to look as though the time for Listerium work must be deferred to the season of "cabs and scrap-books."

Yes, the Spring is making here - the grass grows green, and the trees through some of the streets reach their branches into soft gray-green clouds. Maples, willows and poplars are particularly active and promising, and the yard opposite my window is gay with crocuses.

But best of all, the air is mild and gentle, and the birds are coming. Winter does not suit Washington, nor the dwellers therein.

I have had to lay your consideration as a correspondent on account of most unusual illness, for me, resulting partly from the exceedingly trying weather conditions. But what I have endeavored to do, though resulting so unsatisfactorily, has been a pleasure to me.

Very respectfully yours,
Alice F. Stevens.

Stevens, Alice F. 1904. "Stevens, Alice F. Mar. 23, 1904." Correspondence relating to preliminary lists of New England plants, 1897-1904 (inclusive)

View This Item Online: <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/item/124634>

Permalink: <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/partpdf/313528>

Holding Institution

Harvard University Botany Libraries

Sponsored by

IMLS

Copyright & Reuse

Copyright Status: Public domain. The BHL considers that this work is no longer under copyright protection.

Rights: Harvard University Botany Libraries

This document was created from content at the Biodiversity Heritage Library, the world's largest open access digital library for biodiversity literature and archives. Visit BHL at <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org>.